Still fighting WWII

Combined News Services

Two Japanese infantrymen, unaware that World War II is over, harassed the farmers and fishermen of mountainous Lubang Island in the Philippines for the past 26 years.

On Thursday, one of them was killed in a fire fight with five members of the Philippine Constabulary. He has been tentatively identified as Kinishichi Kozuka. His comrade, believed to be Shiro Onoda, was wounded but escaped.

According to Lt. Col. Pedrito de Guzman, a constabulary provincial commander, at least 30 Filipinos have been killed by Japanese soldiers on the island 70 miles southwest of Manila since the end of the war. Scores of others have been wounded.

"Their method of operation was always the same," de Guzman said. "They remained in their hiding places most of the year and were only spotted during the harvest season.

"They'd shoot at the farmers to drive them away, then burn their crops. I suppose they thought they were aiding the war effort to do this," he added.

He said the incident Thursday began between 6 a.m. and 7 a.m. as a small group of farmers was harvesting rice. "All of a sudden the two Japanese appeared and opened up on the farmers," he said.

A 30-minute chase by police ended when Kozuka's body was found. His rifle was missing, apparently taken by his comrade.

Early Saturday, a 15 man party, including a Japanese Peace Corps volunteer, began a search for the other soldier.

A police official said the Japanese were carrying some dried beans, a handful of rusty bullets, some locally made cigarettes, a sewing kit and a spoon carved from a coconut husk.

Beatles

Three former Beatles are trying to get Paul McCartney, the fourth Beatle, to agree to the payment of a $388,000 tax claim against Apple Corps, the company formed by the pop group, it was reported Saturday night in London.

A company spokesman said John Lennon, George Harrison and Ringo Starr are "most anxious" to pay the money, but McCartney "has not yet given his consent despite repeated requests . . ."

McCartney broke with the other three in 1969, and there have been numerous disagreements among members of the group since then. One of the main points of contention was McCartney's objection to American Klein as their manager.

Who cares?

Clifford Irving's "What Really Happened" account of his phony Howard Hughes autobiography has been in book shops two months. Its dismayed publisher says the response of too many people is: "Who really cares?"

With instant bestseller visions because of the swirl of publicity over Irving's swindle of McGraw Hill, Grove Press distributed 700,000 copies of the $1.95 paperback just before the author went to prison in August.

So far, by company count, about 300,000 copies have been sold, but Grove is far from pleased. Already 2,000 copies of the book have been returned to Grove.

Jackie's party

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis gave a surprise party in New York on the fourth anniversary of her marriage to the Greek shipping magnate, and among those celebrating into the wee hours Saturday was her former mother-in-law, Mrs. Rose Kennedy.

Darn car

Jazz trumpeter Miles Davis was in satisfactory condition at New York Hospital Saturday with two broken legs and other injuries he sustained when his sports car ran into a traffic island on the West Side Highway in Manhattan.

"I'm all right," Davis said. "I'll just have to stop buying those little cars."

Segovia

The dean of modern classical guitarists, Andres Segovia, canceled the last part of a European tour Saturday as a result of injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

Segovia, 78, sustained cuts and lacerations in his left leg Friday when the London taxi in which he was riding collided with two other vehicles.

Teaching in stockade

Richard Wade, left, instructs Tyrone Israel in Dade County, Fla., Stockade. Six weeks ago Wade was found guilty of disorderly conduct and resisting arrest. The judge gave him a choice of spending a year in jail or teaching Israel, an illiterate, to read and write. So far both Wade and Israel are benefitting. —UPI Wirephoto

Mrs. McGovern takes campaign rest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eleanor McGovern, wife of the Democratic presidential candidate, has gone to the Virgin Islands for a few days of rest but she plans to return for a Madison Square Garden fund-raising spectacular.

A spokesman said Saturday that Mrs. McGovern is a guest at the home of McGovern finance chairman Henry Kimelman on St. Thomas Island.

Mrs. McGovern had been ailing since a 7,000-mile, eight-day cross country campaign swing and was hospitalized for three days last weekend.

She left Washington Friday morning, accompanied by Mrs. Kimelman, press secretary Mary Hoyt and a close friend Margot Hahn, wife of former Washington City Councilman Gilbert Hahn.

Mrs. McGovern was reported to be working on the speech she will give Friday night at the big "Star Spangled Women" musical spectacular fund raiser at Madison Square Garden in New York.

The event is being staged by actress Shirley MacLaine with Mrs. McGovern as the main speaker. She is scheduled to be introduced by Rose Kennedy, mother of the late President Kennedy and mother-in-law of vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver.

Among the women entertainers listed for the program are singers Dionne Warwick, Judy Collins, Mary Travers, Tina Turner, and Cass Elliot; actresses Melina Mercouri, Marlo Thomas, Goldie Hawn and Ali McGraw as well as Chita Rivera and her dance troupe.

Real grind for auto recyclers

AT LEFT, a junk auto is hoisted by crane to be dropped into grinder-chopper. The auto emerges from the machine as small pieces of metal which eventually become another product.

From knob on dash to dab on nose

Auto recycling transforms junk parts into cosmetics

KRISTI HILL WEARS AN OLD 'CARBURETOR'
Oxide on Her Nose Is Product of Recycling
—Staff Photos by BOB SHUMWAY

By JACK BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

Ever given much thought to what happens to the metal knob on the end of the cigarette lighter after your old car eventually winds up in the scrap yard.

But chances are the knob, usually made of a zinc die cast, may next be recycled and appear as a white salve, zinc oxide, smeared on the pretty nose of a shapely bikini-clad sun worshiper.

And many a lass might run for the deep shadows if she was alerted she had swabbed her nose with the zinc carburetor off a 1957 Edsel.

Lighter knobs carburetors, door handles, grill work, and nameplates for scrapped autos, nearly all containing some quantities of zinc are being recycled to society in a variety of forms ranging from anti-sunburn lotion to zinc-coated rain gutters.

Zinc is a nonmagnetic, rust-resistent metal, one of several including copper, lead, platinum, and others recovered and returned for recycling during the salvage of junked cars at two Southland salvage yards.

The junked cars, minus engines, seats, tires, and headlights are fed into a mechanical device that is a combination of a power lawnmower, a threshing machine, a young boy with a new hatchet, and a hamburger-making machine. Out of the grinder-upper comes bits and pieces of the old auto no larger than a baseball.

Through various techniques, some of them highly-guarded secrets, the magnetic metals (steel) are separated from nonmagnetic metals and from broken headlight lenses, shreds of upholstery, rubber and plastic wiring, and from the exotic and highly-valuable metals in ignition systems, radios and stereo-tape players.

Says Edwin Wolfe, chairman of the Education and Information Committee of the South Western Chapter of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel:

"In many cases metal recovered during the scrapping of an automobile is back in circulation in two weeks."

Rithin the harbor area there are two plants chewing-up old cars: Clean Steel Corp., Wilmington Avenue and Carson Street, in Carson, and Hugo Neu-Proler on Terminal Island.

Between the two companies they consume about 25,000 junked cars per month.

Poultry blamed in food poison deaths

A poultry meal was the most likely cause of a food poisoning outbreak which hospitalized 27 children and possibly led to two deaths, authorities said Saturday.

County health authorities said the ailment was common salmonella and not the rare and deadly shigella as earlier reported.

Three employes and 66 children were stricken by the disease which swept through the 80-bed Helen Evans Home for Retarded Children in Hacienda Heights on Aug. 16.

Health officials said that inspection of "food preparation and serving revealed techniques that would have allowed contaminated food to incubate salmonella organisms."

Officials also said the chicken was possibly contaminated before being brought on the premises.

The operators of the home have been instructed in proper food handling techniques, authorities said.

Mishaps kill boy, 7, Laguna man

A young child and a visitor to the city were fatally injured in nonrelated traffic accidents Saturday, Long Beach police and deputies reported.

Don Juan Baroza, 7, of 3245 Santa Fe Ave. was struck by a car as he crossed Santa Fe Avenue near 33rd Street and was pronounced dead at Pacific Hospital at 12:37 p.m.

Wayne L. Marshall, 17, of Los Angeles, driver of the car, which was northbound, was not held pending an investigation.

Robert Ditmar Eisegraeber, 54, of Laguna Hills was killed at 12:45 p.m. when he lost control of his speeding car, crashed through a fence, struck a small bus and hit a tree at 2203 S. Devlin Ave., Lakewood, deputies reported.

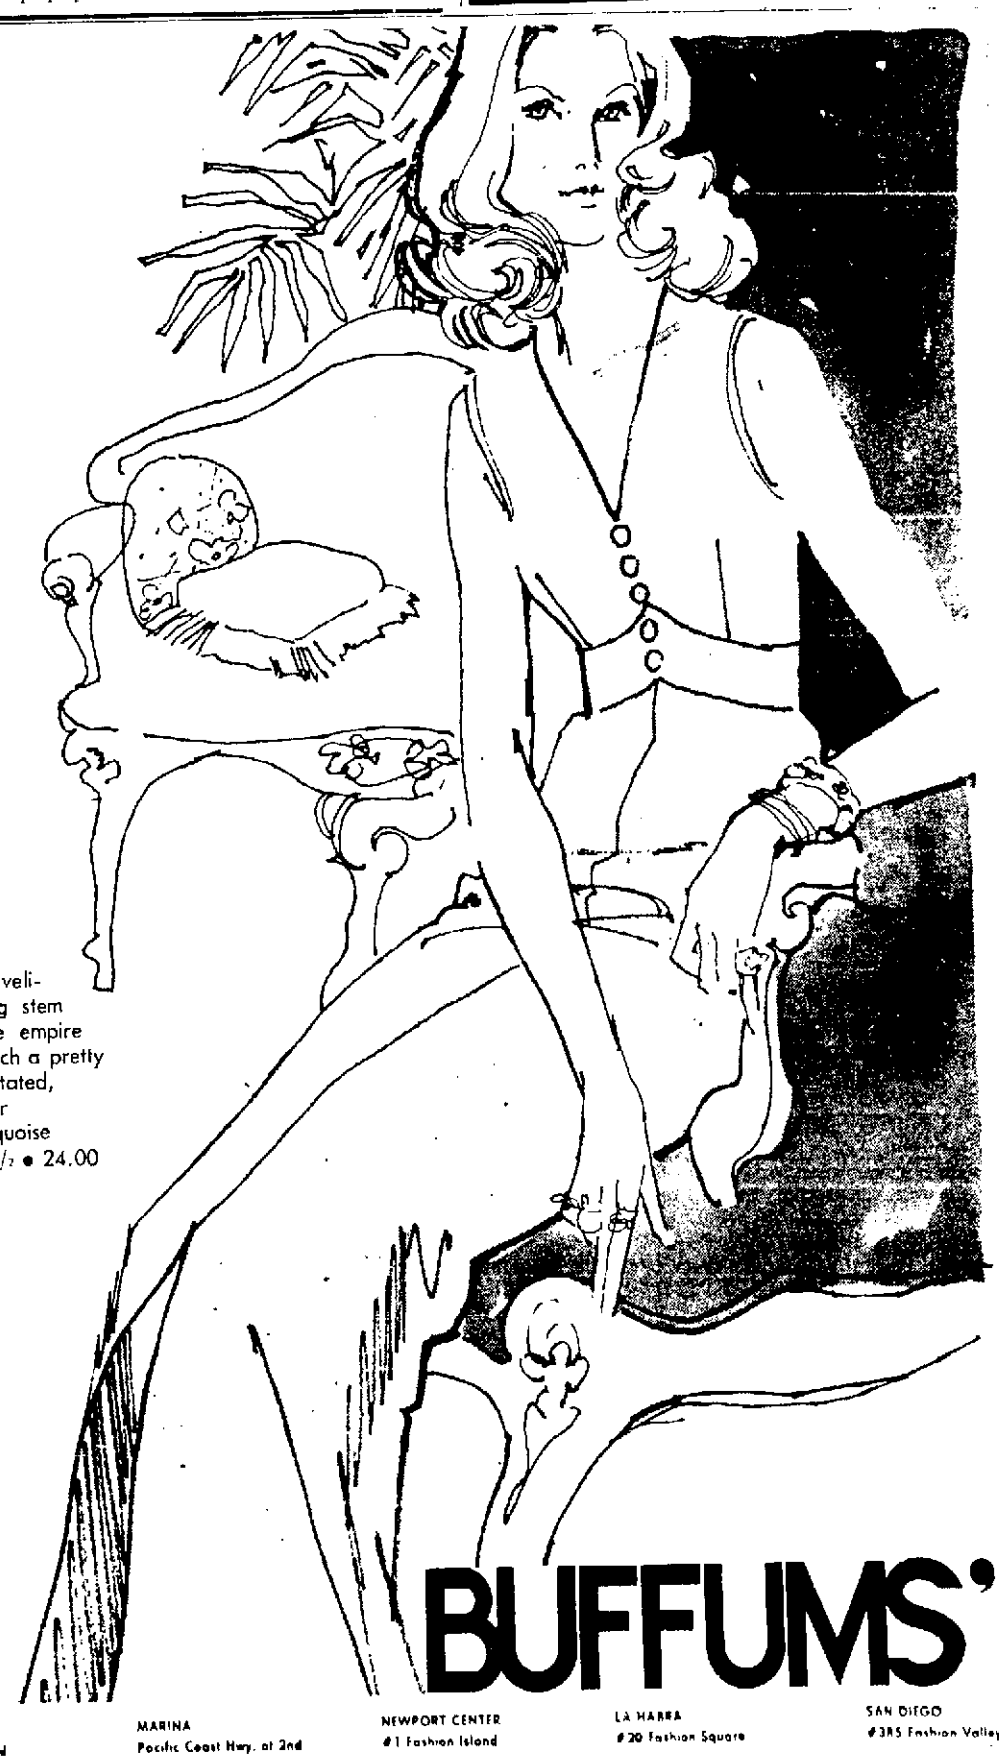

Officers said Eisegraeber was proceeding "at a high rate of speed" eastbound on 221st Street when he lost control of his car.

6 children burn to death as candle flame becomes fire

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A fire apparently caused by a candle used to light up a living room snuffed out the lives of six children as they slept early Saturday.

Fire Chief Winston Wilson said the electricity of the North Sacramento home had been cut off, apparently because of failure to pay the bills.

Two adults and an infant escaped.

WILSON said the children were asleep in the upstairs rooms of the two story frame and stucco house at 2828 Belgrade St., just off Northgate Boulevard.

He identified the dead as Shirley Bates, 15; Phillip Bates, 11; Connie Bates, 9; Darrell Bates, 8; Katherine Bates, 7; and Norma Bates, 5.

Wilson said their mother, Shirley Owen, arrived home shortly after the fire. He said that when she learned what had happened, she collapsed and was taken to a hospital.

"There were two candles in the living room used for lighting purposes," Wilson said.

"That's where the fire started, and the heat went right up the stairs. The bedroom doors were open, and the heat centralized at the highest point."

Wilson said neighbors called in the alarm at 12:31 a.m. He said the whole inside of the house was ablaze when the first fire engine arrived. The fire was quickly put out, he said, and the damage was confined mostly to the interior.

"The men got in practically immediately, but it was probably already too late because of the amount of heat going upstairs," he said.

The coroner's office said the adults downstairs, Yvonne Parker and Clyde Ford, went out a back window with Mrs. Parker's baby.

Corona case has 'second suspect'

FAIRFIELD (AP) — The prosecution says it may have evidence pointing to a second suspect in the Juan Corona murder trial, and crime experts are reopening three areas of investigation in the mass murder case.

Sutter County Dist. Atty. G. Dave Teja offered the second suspect theory Friday in an explanation to Superior Court Judge Richard E. Patton of apparent contradictions in evidence against Corona.

In the same session, Teja's aide, chief prosecutor Barton Williams, described the reopening of three areas of the 17-month investigation into the killing of 25 transient workers.

Both comments were made in open court during prosecution arguments against an unsuccessful defense motion to allow release on bail of the 38-year-old farm labor contractor. The jury was not present.

Corona has been jailed since March 26, 1971 on charges of murdering 25 transient workers.

Williams said parts of the investigation case being reopened as the trial enters its seventh week are study of Corona's mental condition, reexamination of blood stains found on items at Corona's home and previously overlooked tire tracks found by one of the 25 graves.

Final arguments near in Alioto-Look trial

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Final arguments are scheduled Tuesday in Mayor Joseph L. Alioto's $12.5 million libel suit against Look magazine, the now defunct publication that tried to link him with the Mafia.

U.S. District Judge Russell E. Smith released the jury of six men and six women for the three-day Veterans Day weekend. He told them final arguments would start Tuesday and he would give them instructions Wednesday.

An earlier trial ended in a hung jury.

An Alioto attorney testified Friday that a tape recording of an interview Alioto had with the authors of the controversial Look article was lost.

Lawyer Darrell Salomon said the tape was placed in a warehouse but he lost contact with it.

30,000 give $100 to politicos

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — About 30,000 persons have made contributions of $100 or more to presidential election campaigns so far this year, official figures disclosed Saturday.

The tabulation included reported donors to the many candidates in Democratic primaries contests last spring.

The 760-page alphabetized summary of all contributors to presidential campaigns from April 7 to Sept. 10 was released Saturday by the General Accounting Office, as required by the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971.

The computer summary, which also included about 6,000 smaller donors reported voluntarily by some candidates and party committees, showed that major contributors made up two-hundredths of 1 per cent of the voting-age population of 139.6 million.

THE GAO administers the campaign finance reporting law as it applies to presidential and other multistate campaigns, such as those of nationally operated labor and industry political finance committees. Analysis of the donor list is expected to disclose other previously unknown information later.

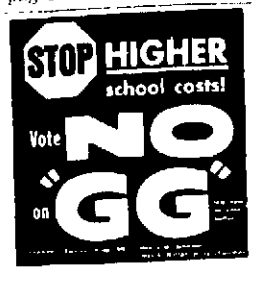

The computer print out of 36,840 individual contributions ranging from $25 to $300,000 was the first public data summary prepared by the GAO under its legal mandate to disseminate as widely as possible the contribution information reported to it by candidates and their supporting committees.

However, incomplete due to the late — April 7 — effective date of the new disclosure act, or due to failures of candidates to report as required by law, the donor list nonetheless was an important first in penetrating for the public eye the hitherto thick veil of secrecy around campaign finance. Other election finance data summaries are to be published later.

One of them, planned for release in the next few days, is to be an alphabetical list of contributors arranged by the state of residence of the donors. GAO officials said Saturday that newspapers and scholars across the country had expressed interest in the state by state printouts.

THE SUMMARIES are available for public inspection without charge in Room 6510 at the GAO building here, at Fourth and H Streets N.W., or copies can be purchased at 10 cents a page — $76 for the telephone-book size report released Saturday. Federal law prohibits the use of the GAO lists by fund raisers, charitable groups of mail order houses for "soliciting contributions or any commercial purpose."

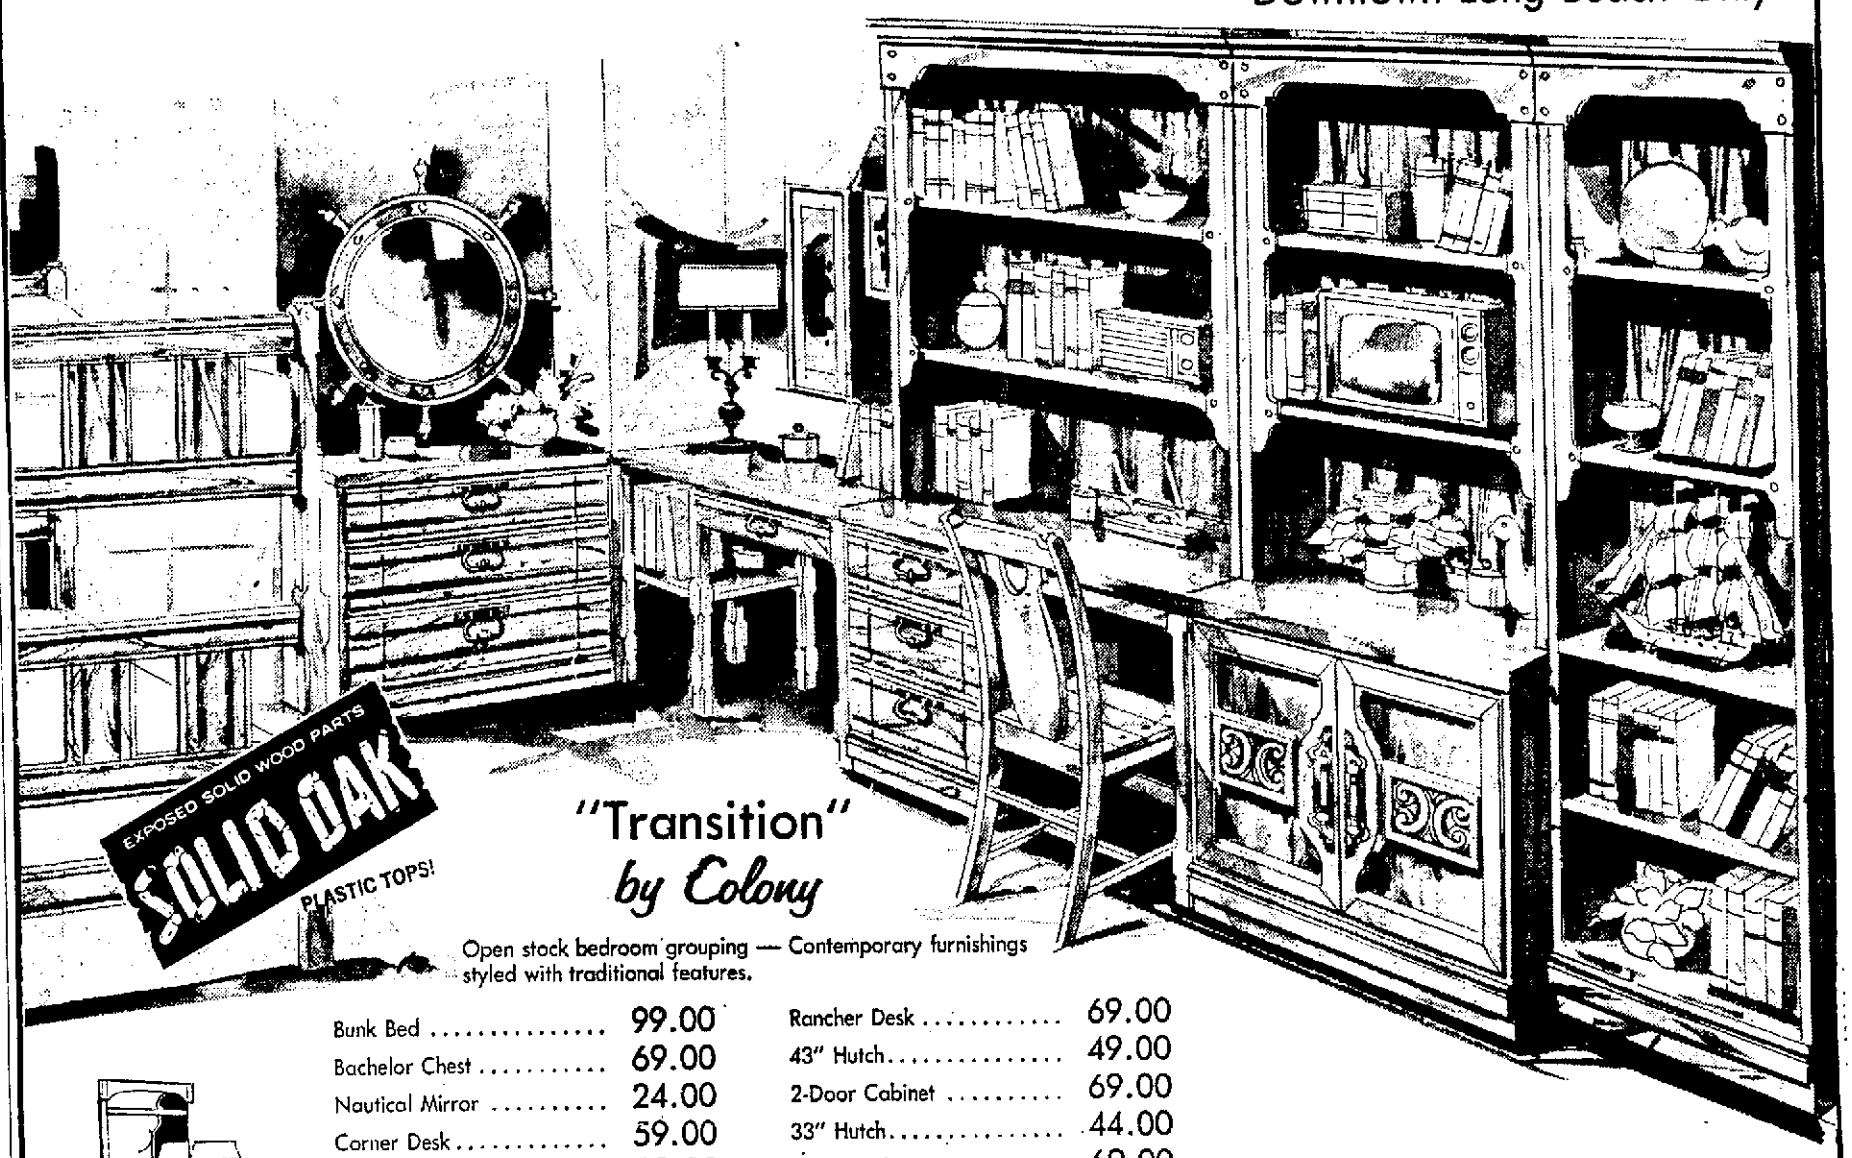

The broad political purpose of the computer printouts is that the widest possible disclosure of campaign finance information — who is supporting whom, and how generously — is at the heart of the reform-oriented new act. With that in mind, the summary released Saturday merely classified and arranged for study information contained in 3,800 financial disclosure reports to the GAO filed by candidates and their supporting committees. The data alphabetized in the summary was extracted from 33,000 pages of such retorts.

McGovern reveals housing plan; would uproot FHA

WASHINGTON — Sen. George S. McGovern, the Democratic presidential nominee, Saturday proposed a comprehensive urban program based on new federal policies and outlays but emphasizing local leadership.

The proposals for renewing the cities are contained in a 12,000-word statement prepared by a 68-member urban affairs policy panel that the Democratic presidential nominee put together in the last few weeks.

Although some of the proposals go beyond what the senator has said in his campaign, they were released by the McGovern campaign headquarters with the senator's approval.

THE STRATEGY is not based on any single dramatic breakthrough that would put special emphasis on urban aid. Rather it builds on McGovern's proposals for expanded public service employment, property tax relief, crime and drug assistance and it calls for new initiatives in housing and transportation.

The panel of Democrats that drew up the plan is headed by Mayor Kenneth A. Gibson of Newark and is composed of mayors, other public officials, scholars and experts in various urban areas. Should McGovern be elected, their work, probably would form the framework for shaping the next administration's urban policy.

The panel concluded that the solutions to many urban problems "must be found locally and must be directed locally, but the leadership and the support and the resources of the federal government are an essential part of the answer."

Many of the new proposals in the statement were in the area of housing. One was that "the Federal Housing Administration will be turned upside down, with new leadership, new staff and an end of sweetheart relationships with unscrupulous developers and speculators, and a new commitment to America."

"The panel proposes that the federal government provide proportionately more of its housing assistance directly to the people, since as much as half of existing subsidy dollars go to middlemen and never reach the needy families whom the funds are intended to benefit."

The proposed housing policy would include the following:

—Movement away from public and subsidized housing projects to housing allowances that would permit families to find their own housing wherever they choose.

—Institution of housing warranties that would give any purchaser of new federally aided housing "rights against his builder comparable to those now enjoyed by a new car buyer against his manufacturer."

—Policies against "exclusionary zoning, large acreage requirements or collusive real estate practices" that deny decent working families" the freedom of choice to live in the suburbs or elsewhere.

—A new financing mechanism, such as a development bank, that would permit the construction of more public service facilities at lower cost.

"Housing must be recognized once again as a pressing national need and assigned an appropriately high priority in the federal budget," the panel said.

As to transportation, the McGovern panel called for conversion of the highway trust fund into a "transportation trust fund" with its $6 billion a year, now earmarked exclusively for highways, to go to create "a balanced, multimodel transportation system." States and cities would have "great flexibility" in use of the funds. Present federal assistance to mass transit would be increased.

FOR property tax relief, McGovern has proposed providing $15 billion a year to the state and local governments. The panel said three-fourths of this would go to the states to help pay educational costs now covered by property tax levies. The remaining one-fourth would be allocated among the states to bring about an equalization of the local tax structures.

White House aide slaps at McGovern

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

In an unusually sharp White House reference to Geroge McGoven, President Nixon's top domestic adviser said Saturday he remembers in his youth "that the minister's son was the biggest liar in the class."

McGovern, the Democratic presidential nominee, is the son of a minister and a former Methodist minister himself.

John Ehrlichman, head of the President's domestic Council, commented to reporters at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., that McGovern's effort to portray the current economic situation "as worse than it was when the previous administration went out is patently false.

"I remember very well when I was a kid that the minister's son was the biggest liar in the class," Ehrlichman said. "I'm afraid that maybe we've got something of that kind confronting us in this political election."

Ehrlichman was being asked whether the September cost of living increase would be damaging in the election. The government cost of living went up another 3.5 per cent in September, the biggest monthly rise since last February.

This shouldn't be politically damaging, Ehrlichman said, "if poeple understand it's just a one month's swing."

McGovern, meanwhile, was having some strong words of his own for Nixon as he campaigned through Pennsylvania.

Saying the break-in and bugging at Democratic party headquarters was linked to the White House, McGovern said, "that is not the way for a President to teach respect for law and order in this country."

McGovern drew a big crowd to Behlehem's Civic Center plaza which Gov. Milton J. Shapp, a Democrat, called the largest in the area's history.

Nixon, meantime, was saying in a paid political radio broadcast if he is reelected, "I will not begin at this stage of my life to shy away from making hard decisions which I believe are right."

Ehrlichman told reporters the prospects were not good for the $30.5 billion appropriations measure for the Health, Education and Welfare and Labor departments.

Vice President Spiro T. Agenew lectured Republican precinct workers in the Chicago suburb of Hillside, Ill, on the dangers of reported Friday that complacency.

7 fail to file campaign funding

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Seven of the 224 candidates for the California Legislature have failed to file campaign contribution statements and may face legal prosecution, Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. said Saturday.

Brown said in a statement that candidates who fail to file can be convicted of a misdemeanor, which caries a possible $500 fine and six months in jail, or in some cases a felony, punishable by a possible $1,000 fine and five years in prison.

But he said he would give them a "reasonable amount of time" before action is taken. The deadline was last Wednesday.

THE CANDIDATES failing to file were listed as follows:

Senate — Thomas J. Miles, Oakland, a Republican running against Sen. Nicholas Petris, a Democrat, in the 11th district.

Assembly — John O. Sutorius, a Sunland Democrat running against Republican Assemblyman Newton R. Russell of Tujunga in the 62nd district Al Solliday, a West Hollywood Republican running against Democratic Assemblyman Alan Sieroty of Beverly Hills in the 59th district; Ranold J. "R. J." Kennedy, a Penryn Democrat running against Republican Assemblyman Eugene A. Chappie of Cool in the sixth district; and three members of the Peace and Freedom Party: Anita Lee Stephens of Redondo Beach, 46th district; Lee Stearns of San Jose, 25th district, and Charles J. Vail of Concord, 10th district.

O'Brien asks full disclosure

Lawrence F. O'Brien, Democratic national campaign chairman, urged President Nixon Saturday to disclose the financial arrangements by which he obtained the Western White House.

The Spanish-style mansion and 22-acre estate in San Clemente were purchased for $1.4 million in the summer of 1969.

"Someone has borrowed $1 million to pay off the original promissory note and has put up the entire property as collateral," O'Brien told a news conference in Los Angeles.

"MR. NIXON'S role in this transaction is shrouded in mystery. Did he borrow $1 million to pay off the sellers? If so, from whom?"

Title to the Western White House is held by the Title Insurance and Trust Co., a subsidiary of TI Inc., O'Brien said.

TI Inc. is headed by Rocco C. Siciliano, former undersecretary of commerce who is the only business member of the federal Pay Board.

"Full disclosure in this instance is even more urgent in view of Mr. Siciliano's membership on the Pay Board, a position requiring unquestioned independence," O'Brien added.

A report of President Nixon's net worth issued by the White House Sept. 16 failed to list more than $1 million worth of the property he controls in San Clemente, the New York Times reported last week.

THE White House staff said at the time of the purchase that Nixon paid $100,000 down, assumed a $240,000 mortgage and controlled only a quarter of the acreage and the house, the Times said.

However, title to the full property, which is not subdivided, is held by TI Inc., according to property records, the newspaper said.

Clawson to Tuohey: I'll walk alone

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Congressman Del Clawson, R-Downey (23rd District), has made it clear to his Democratic challenger, Atty. Conrad Tuohey of Fullerton, that as he treads the boards of his drastically revised district, he'll do it alone.

Tuohey, heartened by the reapportionment which put 70 per cent new territory into the 23rd District, left only Bellflower and Downey of Clawson's original cities in the district and wrought a Democratic registration advantage, calls Clawson's "song and dance routine about being a loner . . . in truth a callous indifference toward the people."

Tuohey said Clawson's written refusal to debate said, "As a campaigner I am a loner, standing on my own record and advancing my own ideas."

CLAWSON, says Tuohey, "isn't all that much a loner. He has hired the public relations firm of Spencer-Roberts and I am sure that the people of the 23rd Congressional District can look forward to the finest campaign that money can buy."

In the Clawson stillness, however, Tuohey has countered with a flurry of press material, making these points:

He demanded that Clawson return the "tens of thousands of dollars he has charged the government for postage-free mailers to hundreds of thousands of residents in an area which he does not represent." (The new 23rd whose boundaries are not effective until 1973.)

TUOHEY cited ratings of eight organizations ranging from ultraliberal to ultraconservative showing that Clawson "votes to the right of John Schmitz," Birch Society member and American Party presidential nominee.

The fact that Orange County supervisors are considering spending $75,000 to hire a Washington lobbyist "is a glaring indictment of the county's congressional representation."

Unemployment is increasing in the district and Clawson "has obstructed any measures that would ease it," was against food stamps to families of fathers idled by labor disputes; twice voted against 13 added weeks of unemployment compensation in high unemployment areas; voted against funding the Emergency Employment Act; was one of only 16 who voted against supplemental funding of already enacted unemployment compensation payments; voted against eight of nine major bills for the home building industry; consistently voted against mass transit, highway construction and increased appropriations for air and railway improvement.

Such is Tuohey's case, awaiting the response of loner Del Clawson.

DE BAUN ENDORSED

TEACHERS AID CHEL

The Association of Better Citizenship, political action arm of the California Teachers Association, will present a $1,000 donation to Atty. Fred Chel, Democratic candidate for Assembly, 39th District, at 4 p.m. Tuesday in Longfellow Elementary School Auditorium at a meeting of the representative council of the Teachers Association of Long Beach.

REFUGE CEREMONY

Congressman Craig Hosmer, R-Long Beach, will present a framed certificate and the pen used by President Nixon in signing the Seal Beach National Wildlife Refuge bill into law, at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Seal Beach City Hall to the mayor and council of Seal Beach.

LBSU NIXON BLOC

Eleven of LBSU's 17-member Student Senate have endorsed President Nixon's reelection, according to Jim Aynes, cochairman of Young Voters for the President.

CMI DEBATE

Proposition 19, the California Marijuana Initiative, will be debated at a public meeting of Long Beach Young Republicans at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Brass Penny Inn, 700 Henry Ford Ave. Lt. James Miller, Long Beach Police Dept., will speak against; Mark Johnson, of the CMI group, will speak for the measure.

APARTISAN ATOM

Congressmen Craig Hosmer, R-Long Beach, and Chet Holifield, D-Montebello, veteran members of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, will address a combined meeting of the Los Angeles and San Diego sections of the American Nuclear Society Friday in the Disneyland Hotel.

Their joint talks will be entitled, "An Apartisan Look at the Atom." Holifield is a former chairman of the Joint Committee. Hosmer is the ranking minority member.

HAYES TALK

Supervisor James Hayes will speak at the Bellflower Business and Professional Women's Club's annual Civic Participation Dinner at 7 p.m., Nov. 2, in Puccini's Restaurant, 17720 S. Pioneer Blvd., Artesia. Reservations for the $3.75 tickets may be made with Jo-Ann Cleveland at Alert Escrow, Bellflower, by Oct. 30.

AN R FOR A D

Republican Donald Hayhurst, former candidate for Congress in the 34th District, has announced his endorsement of Democrat Terry Moshenko for the Orange County 70th Assembly District.

Hayhurst said his decision is based on incumbent Republican Assemblyman Robert Burke's "extreme right wing views and his failure to support President Nixon in the June primary."

SURROGATE DEBATE

State Senate Majority Leader George Moscone, D-San Francisco, and Congressman Alphonzo Bell, R-Los Angeles, will debate "Should it be McGovern or Nixon in '72?" at a Town Hall of California noon luncheon meeting Oct. 31 in the Biltmore Hotel's Biltmore Bowl.

SANDOVAL SALUTE

Mrs. Stella Sandoval, 1967 appointee of Gov. Reagan to the California Fair Employment Practices Commission, will be saluted by the Orange County Committee to Reelect the President at a 7 p.m. Thursday dinner in the Royal Inn Monopoly Room, Anaheim. President Nixon last week named Mrs. Sandoval to the National Advisory Council on Economic Opportunity.

Braude 'expertise' rapped by Hayes

Supervisor James A. Hayes Saturday accused his 4th District opponent Marvin Braude of posing falsely as a financial expert.

Hayes said Braude, throughout the campaign for the supervisorial seat, has been telling voters that he is an expert on fiscal management and has been able to cut the expenses of the City of Los Angeles.

"The facts are the opposite and it is time everyone knows about it," said Hayes.

He said that since Braude became chairman of the Los Angeles City Council Finance Committee, which makes recommendations for the city's spending programs, "the city's budget has skyrocketed $155,712,515. The Los Angeles tax rate has increased 15.67 per cent. This makes him an expert spender not a saver as he claims to be.

"In addition, in the last three years the city has been forced to begin the fiscal year with a deficit ranging from $18.5 million for this year to $39 million for last year.

"This means," Hayes said, "that the city has been forced to lop off proposed programs or to find new money — usually more taxes — to balance the Braude budgets."

Noting Mayor Sam Yorty's suggestion last week that federal revenue-sharing money be used to erase the remaining 1972-73 deficit of $15.4 million, Hayes said, "The taxpayers of Los Angeles are the losers because Braude was unable to provide the city with a balanced budget so this federal assistance could be used in areas which so sorely need money, such as our schools, police department, fire department, recreation and park programs and environmental protection projects.

"This is the kind of inefficiency my opponent wants to bring to county government. The county can't afford to have him around."

Hayes said that for the first time in decades Los Angeles County was able to reduce property taxes this fiscal year by 41 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

"It is my intention to keep taxes down," he said. "It is also my belief that the county can reduce its spending by more economy and efficiency without any sacrifice in its service to the citizens. I continually have proposed elimination of overlapping duties and consolidation of services not only within the county government structure but between the cities and the county."

Hayes said the library systems, drug abuse programs and park and recreation projects could be consolidated with great savings.

"The people want constructive tax saving action that I am providing," said Hayes, "not the double talk Braude spreads by trying to make believe he is cutting taxes where he is actually increasing them."

One agency urged for emergencies

One agency should be given responsibility for emergency medical care in Los Angeles County, authorities recommended in a report Saturday.

The job isn't being done efficiently because responsibility is scattered among so many different agencies, the report of the Countywide Conference on Emergency Medical Services said.

There are 54 different telephone numbers to call for emergency care in the county, the report said.

BIRCH UNIT IN PROTEST AGAINST U.N.

The John Birch Society, Long Beach chapter, will have a public showing of the film, "The United Nations — Peace Dove Unmasked," at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Public Library, 4055 Bellflower Blvd., to mark the founding date of the U.N. as a "Day of Shame."

The Tuesday event will close a four-day campaign by the society to distribute anti-U.N. literature, show films and set up U.N. information booths at shopping centers.

Birch leader Bill Kelly said the U.N. used its anniversary date last year "to demonstrate its total subservience to its Communist masters when it voted to expel the Republic of China from membership and to seat instead the murderous tyranny of Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai."

Lawyers' group opposes Prop. 18

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Prop. 18, the proposed "obscenity" statute, could cause the banning of pictures of Michaelangelo's classic statue of the nude "David" and suppression of Shakespeare's works, a group of 29 lawyers contend.

The lawyers, who call themselves the Statewide Lawyers Committee Against Proposition 18, made the statements in a 44-page report they issued on the measure proposed by State Sen. John L. Harmer, a Republican from Glendale.

The report, released Friday, said one section of the proposed measure appears to exempt bona fide museums, art galleries and public libraries from prosecution.

But, the report added, another section makes such institutions liable to prosecution if located "within one mile measured in a straight line of any building used as a private or public elementary or high school."

The lawyers also objected to the proposed measure on grounds it would remove from the present law thz provision that works can be declared obscene only if they are "utterly without redeeming social importance."

"That part is specifically taken out," said San Francisco attorney Stanley Friedman. "This law would in no way allow courts to look at books, movies, or anything else as a whole, but defines obscenity strictly in terms of any representation of sex."

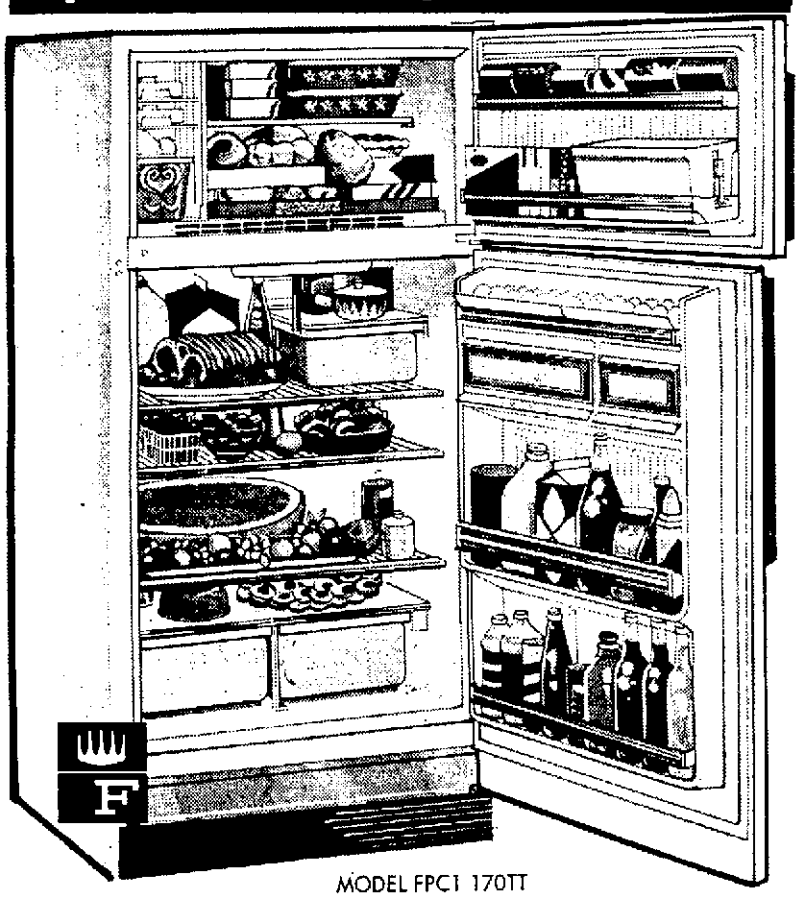

Meanwhile, Charles Manatt, the California Democratic party chairman Saturday urged voter rejection of Prop. 18, which he labeled "a return to book-burning."

In a letter to Democrat state party leaders, Manatt said, "in the guise of protecting the morals of minors, 18 scraps the present statewide Penal Code safeguards against obscenity; eliminates 'redeeming social importance' as a test; authorizes 'local option' obscenity laws differing from town to town and city to city and puts the police power of enforcement in the hands of neighborhood censorship squads."

Manatt continued, "These squads would be authorized to conduct raids without search warrants, to seize newspapers, magazines, books, motion pictures, TV films, works of art, records and other materials deemed offensive. As you can see, Proposition 18 sanctions the return of book-burning."

Bond, Chel toe-to-toe on 3 issues

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Bill Bond, Republican, and Fred Chel, Democrat, enter the last two weeks of their battle for the East Long Beach-Signal Hill 39th Assembly District seat in a toe-to-toe media confrontation over issues of truthfulness, qualifications and communication methods.

Frank X. O'Neil, Bond's campaign manager, Saturday accused Chel of being untruthful to the public and his own campaign staff about his financial ability to send a mailer to inform voters where he stands on the issues, "what his philosophy is and why he suddenly wants to drop his law practice and become a legislator."

O'NEIL referred to Democratic State Central Committee cochairman Cora Cocks' recent claim of Chel's inability to afford a $10,000 district mailing piece.

"Undoubtedly she was not told," said O'Neil, "that during the same week she made this statement Mr. Chel filed with the Secretary of State a financial report indicating that he had received a total of $16,862 thus far for campaign purposes.

"A mailer in this district costs approximately $7,000, not $10,000. It is obvious that Mr. Chel can easily afford to meaningfully communicate with the voters if he had the desire."

O'Neil said he is deeply concerned that Chel "is giving his campaign workers the excuse that he doesn't have the money to communicate with the voters when in fact he does. I am forced to conclude that either what he is hiding is a vacuum or a political philosophy that must not even be in keeping with the mainstream of his own party.

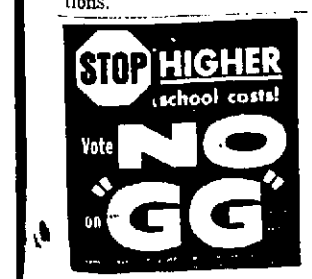

"IT IS obvious that Chel does not want to compare his qualifications with Bond's because he is not even in the same ball park. And I know that being candid about one's political philosophy can cost one votes. However, I would assume that Mr. Chel would have realized by this time that the voters would demand to know everything about him since he has seen fit to become a candidate for one of the most important offices in this state."

Speaking for candidate Chel, Richard Cartwright, Mrs. Cocks' state committee cochairman, said Bond has been "telling" the voters what he thinks in a costly direct mail campaign while Chel has been walking the district "listening" to those whom he seeks to represent in Sacramento. Isn't that the kind of assemblyman we want?"

On qualifications, Cartwright said Bond's claim of 13 years' experience has been as a Los Angeles County bureau employe "consisting of carrying out bureaucratic directives from those in higher echelons."

CARTWRIGHT also hit Bond's contention that the occupation of lawyer is irrelevant in the state Assembly.

"Fred Chel, as an attorney at law, represents people and their problems," said Cartwright. "Representing people is his one and only endeavor. He listens to their problems and tries to solve them. He knows the law, how it is made and how it functions."

Screen the screen

We live near the Los Altos Drive-In Theatre, 2800 Bellflower Blvd., and since they put up their two additional screens the noise keeps us awake. We and our neighbors also object to the theatre's unsightly appearance. Do the theatre owners intend to do anything about these problems? Mr. and Mrs. E.W., Long Beach.

Pacific Theatres Corp., owner of that drive-in, is aware of the problems and has sent representatives to meet with you and other residents to try to work out some solutions. Robert Selig, a Pacific executive, told ACTION LINE, "We want to be good neighbors." He said more landscaping with fences, trees and flowers is planned and work will begin soon. "We are trying to maintain careful control of the audience" to eliminate auto honking, and have "renewed our efforts to see that all speakers not being used are turned off," Selig said. A petition, signed by many of your neighbors, calling the enlarged drive-in a public nuisance was rejected by the Long Beach City Prosecutor's office on the basis that the problem is a civil, not criminal, matter.

City search

I've read in several books on the history of the Mormon people about a frontier town established about 1838 in Missouri called Far West. Can you tell me where this town was located and what it is called today? H.A.G., Long Beach.

Nothing remains of Far West now except corner stones of an unfinished temple and two crude signs marking the sites of the planned temple and the town, according to Mrs. Henrietta Kranse of the State Historical Society of Missouri in Columbia. In 1836, the Mormons, fleeing religious persecution, came west to what is now Caldwell County in sparsely settled northwestern Missouri. There, about eight miles west of Kingston, they began building Far West. Within two years the square-mile settlement had grown to a thriving town of some 3,000 persons. But their community was plagued by dissent. The Missourians objected to the presence of a people who practiced a religion peculiar to the age and region — as had the Mormons' earlier neighbors — and on Aug. 6, 1838, violence broke out. The Missourians declared that "Mormonism, emancipation and abolitionism must be driven from our land." The newcomers surrendered after a three-month struggle and moved on, taking with them more memories of personal abuses, slaughtered livestock and destroyed crops.

Semi-support

How can a father who is ordered by the court to pay $180 a month child support get away with making only partial payments? P.D., Long Beach.

"Most people don't realize that a provision of the court-ordered support agreement states the father must pay the amount agreed upon only as long as he has the ability to do so." ACTION LINE was told by a spokesman for the child support division of the Los Angeles County district attorney's office. "If he takes a cut in pay, loses his job or simply can convince us that he just cannot live on what he has left after paying child support, he can make arrangements with us to pay a lesser amount, for a time at least."

Stewardi

I am almost 18 years old and would like to become a stewardess. But my parents say there are no jobs so it would be ridiculous for me to pay a lot to attend one of the commercial training schools. Is this true? K.H., Fountain Valley.

ACTION LINE found just two major airlines — Pan American World Airways and American Airlines — that currently have openings for stewardesses. As with most airlines, applicants must be at least 19½ years old and Pan Am stewardesses must speak a second language. Spokesmen for other airlines told ACTION LINE there are no openings now, and if and when some become available, stewardesses who recently have been laid off will be called for jobs first. Spokesmen also said that all major airlines have their own stewardess training programs for girls who are accepted as student hostesses. They agreed that none of the major airlines go to the private airline trade schools to hire hostesses and that job applicants who have attended these schools have no priority.

SECRET SERVICE agents do a little downfield blocking for Sen. George McGovern. Grid fan William E. Smith, 27, of Fleetwood, Pa., tried to attack the Democratic presidential candidate when his motorcade interrupted a close game between Smith's favorite Kutztown State and Cheyney State. Smith, questioned but not charged, said politicians "don't belong on the football field."

Grid fan tries blocking McGovern's field goal

KUTZTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — "I guess I just got ticked off." William Smith said Saturday, explaining why he jumped from his seat and made a dash for Sen. George McGovern.

It was late in the second quarter and the Kutztown State College football team was on a drive deep in Cheyney State territory, trying to score a touchdown to tie the game.

Smith, who describes himself as a "football nut" and an avid Kutztown fan, was on the edge of his seat. Suddenly, McGovern's motorcade pulled onto the field and along the sidelines. The Democratic presidential candidate was making a surprise visit.

"I guess I just got ticked off then," Smith, 27, Fleetwood, Pa. explained. "Everyone was leaving the stands to see what was going on and not watching the football game anymore."

At that point, Smith jumped out of his seat, leaped onto the field and began running toward McGovern, shouting "Get out! Get out!"

He was intercepted by Secret Service agents, who tackled Smith before he got close to his goal, handcuffed him and led him away for 30 minutes of questioning.

According to Smith, he didn't want to hurt McGovern, but "just voice my opinion" about the senator interrupting the game.

While Smith was sidelined, Cheyney defeated Kutztown 14-6.

He was later released and no charges were pressed. Smith later admitted he was embarrassed by the incident.

"I'm not involved in politics," he said. "I like to follow it, but I love football and in my opinion the two just don't mix."

Although Smith regretted the incident, he said "I would have done it even if it was Nixon. They (politicians) don't belong on the football field."

McGovern said later he did not even see Smith.

Foe's rockets slam base; battle rages near Saigon

SAIGON, Sunday (UPI) — Communist rocket fire slammed into the big Bien Hoa air base near Saigon early today and fighting swirled 13 miles from the capital.

Military spokesmen said 59 of the 122 mm rockets hit the Bien Hoa base, and seven more fell in the city nearby in the first such attack on the base since Aug. 31. Three persons were killed and eight wounded in the city, a provincial capital, 14 miles north of Saigon, and 18 Americans and 10 South Vietnamese were injured at the base. The rockets also destroyed a government UH1 Huey helicopter and damaged a U.S. Air Force fuel truck, the spokesmen said.

The mayor of Saigon, Army Col. Do Kien Nhieu, ordered military security in the capital tightened as the fighting swirled around its northern and eastern outskirts.

FIGHTING IN THE area 13 miles from the city continued for the third consecutive day early today around the militia post at Hoa Nhut hamlet, which Communist forces seized Thursday.

In three more clashes in the Highway 13 area from 16 to 23 miles north of the capital, a total of 12 Communists were killed and four government soldiers wounded, military spokesmen said. Another battle 28 miles east of Saigon resulted in six Communists and one government ranger slain, they said.

Nine waves of U.S. Air Force heavy B52 bombers struck suspected Communist positions around all sides of Saigon, dropping a total of 750 tons of bombs within 45 miles of the city. The closest raid was 20 miles away and shook buildings in the city.

Eight waves of B52s struck targets in North Vietnam as close as five miles from the port of Dong Hoi. A total of 18 other B52 missions pounded Communist troops and supplies in South Vietnam.

Heavy fighting also was reported today on South Vietnam's northern front. Military spokesmen said 65 North Vietnamese were slain in Quang Tri Province fighting in which government casualties were three dead and 11 wounded.

On the central front, spokesmen said 39 Communists died in two battles near An Loc which resulted in 13 South Vietnamese slain and 14 wounded.

16 swim from Greek airliner

ATHENS (UPI — An Olympic Airways plane crashed into the sea Saturday night just short of the runway of Athens Airport and 16 of the 49 persons aboard, including the pilot, swam to shore through a driving rain storm.

The survivors scrambled ashore at a seaside youth camp before police helicopters and coast guard boats converged on the crash site about 100 yards from shore in the Saronic Gulf in a search for other survivors.

A police spokesman said two bodies had been recovered and that it was likely the other 31 persons unaccounted for had been trapped inside the aircraft, which sank in about 40 feet of water.

Police discounted earlier reports of 18 survivors having reached shore, saying the count was the result of confusion at the youth camp.

A spokesman at the Ministry of Merchant Marine said it was possible the plane had been struck by lightning.

The plane, a Japanese-built two-engine YS11, was en route to Athens from the island of Corfu 250 miles to the northwest off Greece's Ionian seacoast.

closed in a joint allied peace proposal last January, is thought to be contingent in part on his acceptance of an interim replacement.

By the law of the constitution this would be Senate President Nguyen Van Huyen, an avowed independent. But reports Saturday said Thieu had proposed some additional candidates, including Ngo Khac Tinh, the education minister; Gen. Cao Van Vien, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff; Prime Minister Tran Thien Khiem and others not identified.

INFORMANTS ALSO said Thieu was accurately describing the situation in telling visitors there was no rift between him and the Americans, nor was he being pressured by them. Several senior South Vietnamese officials were reported to have asked Thieu for assurances on the latter point and got them.

It is likely, the informants add, that any announcement of an agreement or a new proposal by the allied side would come before the Nov. 7 election, although the plan itself might not go into effect until afterward. U.S. officials acknowledge that the election, in which Nixon is seeking a second term, may be responsible in part for the intensified negotiations.

Reports circulated by Vietnamese sources said the discussions between Kissinger and Thieu included a recent proposal by the Communists calling for Saigon to concede about 600 square miles of territory as "regrouping zones" in connection with a cease-fire.

Under the plan — which could not be verified through either U.S. or South Vietnamese officials — persons wishing to declare allegiance to the Communist side would go to these zones. At the same time, a tripartite government including Saigon officials, the Viet Cong and a third force would be established to work out a final political solution.

Lung cancer up 18 times '32 rate, Society says

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cancer of the lung, the variety that holds the least possibility of survival, is increasing so rapidly that the lungs are now the spot where cancer is found most often, the American Cancer Society said Saturday.

Lung cancer kills up to 91 per cent of its victims and its incidence in the U.S. has been growing steadily, ACS reported. The rate this year among men, who are most often affected, is 18 times greater than it was 40 years ago.

Despite the grim figures, the society said lung cancer "is a largely preventable disease, since most lung cancer is caused by smoking."

"Unfortunately, it is difficult to diagnose in time for cure," ACS said in its publication " '73 Cancer Facts and Figures."

THERE will be 79,000 new cases of lung cancer during 1973, the society estimated, 3,000 more than during 1972. The predicted incidence for lung cancer matches that for cancer of the colon and rectum —a disease that has stabilized in recent years in its incidence and mortality.

"Lung cancer will result in the highest number of cancer deaths this year—72,000—with colon-rectum next at 47,000 " the ACS publication said.

Lung cancer has relatively low incident among women, although it is increasing steadily. Breast cancer, with 72,000 new cases and 32,400 deaths expected in 1973, is the most common variety among women.

CANCER in all its varieties is the second most common cause of death in the U.S. after heart disease, the society said with a toll of more than 318,000 people, or 16.5 per cent of all deaths, according to the most recent federal statistics (1968).

The American Cancer Society estimates 350,000 persons will die of cancer in 1973, while 222,000 people will be saved from cancer. But, the ACS summary said, "about 111,000 cancer patients probably will die in 1973 who might have been saved by earlier and better treatment."

A cancer "cure" is counted when a person has been free of all signs of the disease for five years after last treatment. There are now 1.5 million Americans who formerly had cancer but have been otherwise healthy for more than five years, and another 700,000 persons treated recently who "will live to enter the ranks of those we call cured."

"ABOUT 53 million Americans now living eventually will have cancer," ACS said, "one in four persons according to present rates."

"The hopeful side of the cancer problem," the society said, lies in "the startling contrast between five-year survival rates for cancer detected and treated early compared to survival rates after it has invaded other parts of the body."

The great majority — 85 per cent — of women who contract localized breast cancer survive, but only 53 per cent are saved if the disease is not diagnosed until after it has spread, ACS said.

"Localized colon-rectum cancer shows a 69 per cent survival rate compared to 39 per cent when there is regional involvement. In uterine cancer, the survival rate is 81 per cent when the disease is localized and only 45 per cent when it has spread."

EVEN WITH lung cancer, the contrast is striking. For those whose lung cancer is not discovered until the disease has spread to other parts of the body, about 9 per cent survive. If the cancer is confined to the lung, ACS said, 29 per cent are likely to live five years after treatment, or be "cured."

Moderate temblor detected near Alaska

PALMER, Alaska (AP) — A moderate earthquake with a preliminary magnitude of 5.2 on the Richter scale and centered about 140 miles northwest of Anchorage, was reported Saturday afternoon by the Palmer Observatory here.

A spokesman at the observatory said the quake occurred at 3:52 p.m. EDT and was felt slightly in Anchorage and in Talkeetna, 75 miles north of Anchorage.

Nader and his raiders aim lances at Congress

By WILLIAM BROOM And GILBERT BAILEY
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — America's most celebrated tilter at windmills rode into battle late last spring flanked by 400 Sancho Panza's, many of them fresh from the nation's campuses.

The intent of Ralph Nader's most ambitious project to date was to present a profile of every member of the United States Congress that would lead to a much-needed overhaul of this branch of government.

The results of this brobdingnagian effort (484 20-page reports) are now in, and they are disappointing.

The average citizen who pays $1 expecting to find out everything he ever wanted to know about his congressman but didn't know what to ask will get no bargain. Most of the reports are long on words, but short on insight and understanding.

Only a very few of the 60 reports examined by this bureau reached a high standard in which the subject stood revealed with all his warts and halos showing.

"The Nader profilers did not pay too much attention to detail," said one member of our staff. "They made many errors of fact on minor points. The logical question to ask is if they can't get the minor details correct, then what is their credibility on the major points?"

The concensus in the bureau was that the Nader researchers showed much less bias than their subjects expected of them.

But the bias was there and it showed in a most peculiar way: if the congressman did not measure up to the youthful, idealistic concepts of the research team, he received an objective, low-key treatment.

RALPH NADER

The bias showed through most strongly when the Naderets found a congressman or senator they liked. These profiles are embarrassingly effusive in their praise. Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota for example, was virtually assigned the ability to walk on water.

The supervisors of the project exercised wretched quality control. Some reports were well-written, sensibly-organized, mostly objective. Others were subjective, biased and the product of shoddy research, and unsophisticated scholarship.

Another major problem: The subjects were not measured by a standard set of values. In the case of two California congressmen who voted the same way on a measure disapproved by Nader, the more liberal of the two was given a slap on the wrist, but the conservative was pilloried.

The fault seems to be that the profile writers, largely inexperienced students and lawyers, set out to write profiles in the style of magazine writers . . . not objective scholarsip, but advocacy scholarship. The product exposed their built-in biases and prejudices, and shed too little light on the congressmen's.

What's good about the product? A lot.

Despite their deficiencies, the profiles tell more about the voting record of congressmen through various tables, provide more information on districts and the men who represent them, spell out much about how the Congress works than the average voter can lay his hands on in such concise form.

Their release comes at a time when interest in congress is badly needed. The release date may be a little unfair to the incumbents because their opponents are not given the same tough scrutiny, but the incumbents already have overwhelming built-in advantages.

Nader made the point that many newspapers do not have Washington correspondents and that the papers get their news on Congress largely from the congressman's own mimeograph machine. In this case, the news is being made by the Nader presses instead of by congressional public relations men.

There are few startling facts in the reports. In the five dozen surveyed by this staff no really new information emerged. But the voting tables will be new to many citizens.

Two of our members put in a plug for the publication that presents much of the same information in more concise, accurate and objective form. It is "The Almanac of American Politics" — prepared by three bright young men from Harvard, Mike Barone, Grant Ujifusa and Doug Mathews. They blazed the trail along which Nader's researchers followed. In fact, a great deal of the hard data in the Nader profiles came from the Almanac.

The Almanac costs $4.95 in paperback. A complete set of Nader profiles costs $450.

Copies of the Nader profiles can be obtained by mailing $1 for each copy wanted to Grossman Publishers, Box 19281, Washington, D.C., 20036. Specify names of profiles desired

Hosmer depicted as 'A-power' boss

WASHINGTON — Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Long Beach, is pictured by his Ralph Nader profile as a man who has concentrated on one major interest—atomic energy.

"I felt the only way to get going on this nuclear idea," he told the Nader interviewer, "was to join the Joint Committee (on atomic energy) in Congress."

As a result, Hosmer left a job as an attorney for the Atomic Energy Commission to run for Congress, winning his seat in 1952. However, he did not win his committee seat prize until 1958.

"Hosmer currently holds the ranking Republican position on the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, the most powerful position dealing with nuclear power held by a Republican in the U.S. Congress," the report said.

"Although Hosmer is currently the second ranking member on the Interior Committee, according to members of the committee, 'he does not exert an active force on the formulation of committee policy' . . ." the report added.

"As a man intrigued by nuclear energy, Craig Hosmer has found a forum for his fascination and concern that is not obstructed by the legislative inconveniences, such as having to lobby to get bills passed, which impede the work of many of his fellow congressmen, the report concluded.

In another comment, the Nader report quoted an unnamed reporter as saying Hosmer "does not spread himself thin."

REP. CRAIG HOSMER

TWO ERRORS in the Nader profile, relatively minor ones, jar some of the findings of the reports. In one case, the name of a newspaper group, the Rid-

Hanna—'Savings and Loan' booster

WASHINGTON — Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., "has been a consistent proponent of the savings and loan industry" during his 10 years in Congress, the Ralph Nader congress project reported.

"Hanna presents a much more reserved posture toward the larger banking community," the report says.

The congressman represents the 34th District, composed of western Orange County and portions of Lakewood and East Long Beach.

Hanna explained his efforts on behalf of S&L's in the following way:

"I want to make sure we have a viable savings and loan institution as opposed to banks. Secondly, I think competition is very healthy. I'd like to see them competing for consumer finance. It would push the (interest) rates down."

The Nader report notes that as a Banking and Currency Committee member, Hanna voted on bank and S&L legislation while holding $16,000 in stock in Occidental Savings and Loan of Stanton. He disposed of the stock in 1969.

AMONG HANNA'S chief legislative accomplishments recently has been authorship of the Drug Abuse Education Act, which provides federal help to local communities der group, is spelled Ritter. In the second case, a former opponent of Hosmer is quoted as listing Johnny Johnson, a Long Beach political activist, as being "of the Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram," when he is not employed by that paper.

However, the report noted accurately that Hosmer can expect re-election. It also noted accurately the area's independence on defense contracts.

While Hosmer's efforts have been mostly devoted to atomic energy, some of his other efforts have been effective too, according to the report.

"Due in part to Craig Hosmer's efforts in Washington, McDonnell Douglas operations in Long Beach have not suffered significantly by the Defense Department cutbacks in recent years," the report said.

The report also cited his successful efforts for construction of a naval hospital in Long Beach and in the creation of the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Station.

TWO OTHER Hosmer legislation achievements are noted—the Colorado River Basin Bill of 1968 and an amendment in 1971 which extended special privileges, previously accorded only to the blind, to other severely handicapped persons in selling products and services to the federal government.

The report did not mention Hosmer's involvement in legislation strongly supported by Southern California water interests, including the Metropolitan Water District, nor did it connect some of his campaign contributions to individuals active in water matters. Joseph Jensen of Metropolitan for example contributed $2,275 in 1970.

Hosmer is the author of legislation for federal support for a key canal in the California Water Project.

However, the report did detail some of the controversies Hosmer's interest in atomic energy have created.

The League of Conservation Voters has given Hosmer a "zero" in his ratings on their chart of 100.

Hosmer has attacked some conservationists who have expressed fears about the safety of nuclear plants and has pushed legislation to speed the construction of the plants.

ON OTHER issues the report said:

"Over the course of the last two years, Hosmer has resisted every attempt to trim the defense budget . . .

"Craig Hosmer's conception of foreign relations is tempered by a cold-war outlook in international politics" although he is also quoted as saying he is currently going through "a rethink" on the subject.

"On environmental issues, Hosmer has gained a certain notoriety among ecologists . . . "Votes are cited against pesticide registration and a bill prohibiting the killing of sea mammals.

"Except for defense appropriations, Craig Hosmer has been notably consistent in refusing the support government spending."

The report used two comments from reporters to sum up Hosmer.

"He's a real conservative, establishment kind of guy . . . Hosmer is pretty representative of the (Long Beach) area."

Hosmer, who has seen his profile, said the report was "fairly accurate with a few mistakes" He cooperated with the Nader researchers.

The 21-page report was written by Sven Erik Holmes, edited by Rebecca Cooper, and researched by Catherine Villani and Glenn Rabenn.

REP. RICHARD HANNA

for education and self-help drug control programs.

Other passages in the 20-page report say:

"Though he claims to be a staunch defender of an unmolested environment, Hanna cast his floor vote in favor of completing the supersonic transport (SST)." He explained the ecology arguments aginst it were "off the mark."

"His absenteeism on the floor (of the House of Representatives) has been unusually high. In 1971 of 320 important votes selected by Congressional Quarterly, Hanna announced for only 59 per cent of them (Democratic average: 85 per cent)."

"Hanna has taken an unusually large number of trips to the Orient, both for congressional and personal reasons."

"Richard Hanna is an apt student of the congressional system. He senses the concerns and vested interests of his constituents and he puts forth considerable energy to champion their banner."

The report was written by Liza Bercovici and Robert Clark.

Anderson rated as moderate

WASHINGTON — California's 17th Congressional District (including West Long Beach, Compton and Paramount) is represented by a Democratic congressman with interests as diverse as those that make up his constituency, the Ralph Nader Congress project reported.

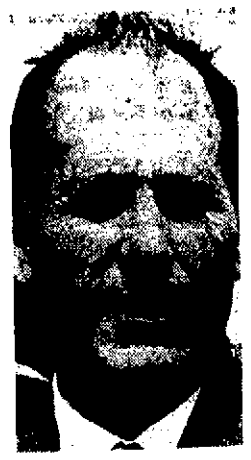

Rep. Glenn Anderson has introduced legislation which "touched most often on the subject area of environment, health and safety, his district, and welfare in that order of frequency the report states.

The researchers offered little insight into Anderson's level of performance or achievement in a report that was largely descriptive. Among the congressman's chief legislative interests were cutting back on foreign aid to Ecuador in punishment for arresting tuna fishermen, the Marine Mammal Protection Act, and the federal financial disclosure bill requiring congressmen to report outside income and business holdings.

THE PASSAGES describing his legislative and voting record add up to a generally moderate to liberal record. He voted in opposition to the Vietnam war and to limit the President's power to continue the war. He voted to reduce defense spending 2 per cent, but not the 5 per cent sought by some doves. He voted to limit the ABM system, but not to eliminate it altogether.

The interest-group ratings of his voting record were reported as follows:

The consumer Federation of America and the AFL-CIo Committee on Political Education gave him a perfect score. Anderson agreed with the National Farmers Union on 25 of 27 selected votes and with the Friends Committee on 11 of 12. He scored low with the Chamber of Commerce, agreeing only on one of 10 votes. The liberal Americans for Democratic Action gave him an 86 per cent record of agreement, and the Conservative Americans for Constitutional Action scored him with a low 15 per cent.

The report was written by Janet White and Richard Marold.

Nader profiles Holifield as one too long in Congress

WASHINGTON — Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Montebello, dean of the California Democratic delegation, is pictured in his Ralph Nader profile as a man who has stayed too long in Congress.

Holifield, whose district includes Norwalk, Santa Fe Springs, La Mirada, Pico Rivera, Los Nietos and Whittier, is the subject of one of the strongest attacks in any of the 484 congressman profiled by the Ralph Nader congressional team.

Holifield in rebuttal noted his bitter fight with Nader over a consumer protection bill in which he blamed Nader for the bill's eventual defeat. The congressman also refused to cooperate with the Nader congressional research project.

"Although his candor and hard work behind the senes made him a respected and influential figure in Congress soon after he arrived in Washington, Holifield has grown arbitrary in recent years . . . he is unwilling to challenge the seniority system or to part with any of the prerogatives it has bestowed on him," the profile charged.

"OF COURSE I've grown old. I've grown old in the service of the Congress and because of the experience and legislative expertise, I've gained I'm in a better position to serve my people than any young congressman," Holifield replied.

"He has become more willing to cater to special interests—Notably the atomic energy and defense related industries—compromising the commitments he made in his early career to work for the betterment of the environment, consumers, citizens and the disadvantaged in American society," the reports aid.

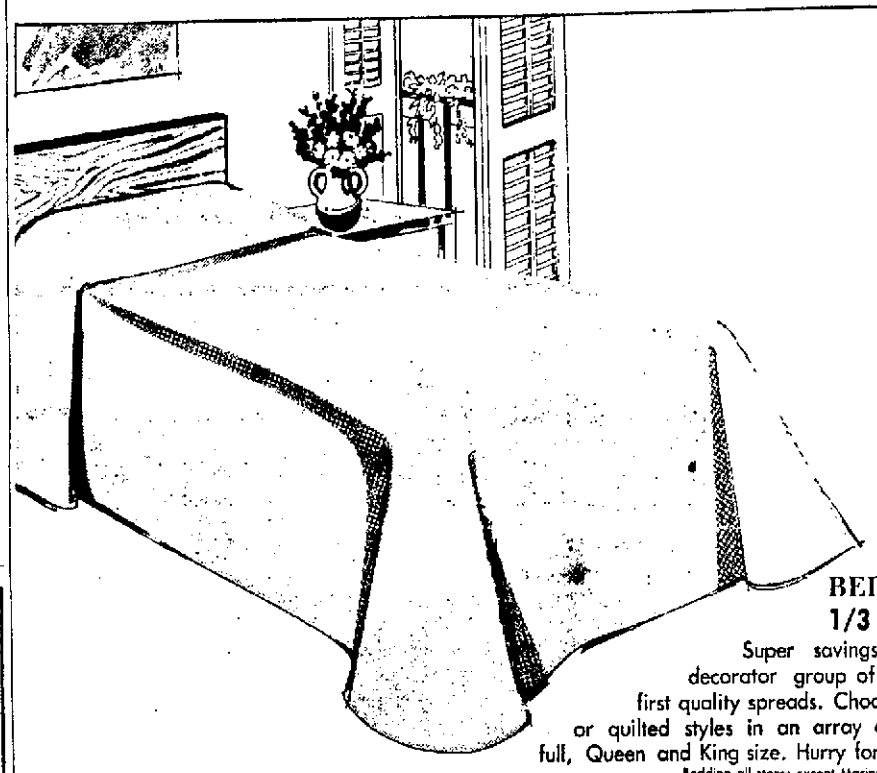

"There is no congressman with a better liberal record than I," Holifield answered, saying he voted for more than 200 environmental bills and supported labor and civil rights throughout his career.

The Nader profile in reporting on Holifield's voting record showed Holifield with a 46 per cent 1971 favorable record with Americans for Democratic Action and a 90 per cent cumulative record. The League of Conservation

Nader profiles of senators

Cranston—his star is on the rise

SEN. ALAN CRANSTON

WASHINGTON — Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., a long-distance runner all his life, has changed his style of running since he entered the U.S. Senate, according to his Ralph Nader Congressional profile.

"Alan Cranston is a sional profile.
several senses of the term) who learned to pace his energies," the report said, noting that his aggressive pace first irritated his fellow Senate members.

Today, the report added, "In the Senate Cranston is a man whose star appears to be on the rise . . . after only four years as a senator, Cranston is being discreetly mentioned as a possible future whip of the Democratic Party."

Cranston's success both in the Senate and in California is credited to a "balancing act" and to "political pragmatism."

In the Senate Cranston is no longer "extremely partisan and quite active politically," the report explained.

"Such an above-the-battle posture would have been unusual for Alan Cranston before 1968 . . . ," the profile added.

THE REPORT details Cranston's methods in the Senate.

"The California senator often offers his services to other senators, volunteering to lobby colleagues for their votes . . . Cranston has found that aid to other senators has also helped him with his own legislation . . .

"Cranston has been particularly effective in getting veterans affairs legislation through the Congress. Most members are perhaps successful in their own house, only to see the legislation fail upon entering the other house . . .

"I have worked up a good relationship with the key man on veterans' legislation in the House, Olin I. (Tiger) Teague, D-Tex. Before a conference, Tiger, I and our two staff people got together to decide what we can agree on in conference," Cranston told the Nader team.

"Result: legislation passes," concluded the profile.

CRANSTON HAS used somewhat the same methods in California, the report said.

It said he has fought against Vietnam war spending and the SST, irritating the defense and aerospace industries but supported the Lockheed loan and space shuttle contracts, thus regaining favor.

On farm questions he has supported Cesar Chavez' farm union but helped defeat a lowering of farm subsidies.

Cranston irritated oil companies with his legislation to ban oil drilling from the Santa Barbara Channel, but opposed moves to lower the oil depletion allowance.

"Such careful attention to his constituents are a tribute to Cranston's political pragmatism," the profile said.

The report listed a series of Cranston achievements:

—Guiding the Lockheed loan guarantee bill through Congress.

—Leading the fight against the hurricane recovery act, because of loopholes discovered in the earthquake loan program in California.

The profile also pointed out that Cranston supported the banking position on the "fair credit bill."

"What Alan wants to be is a great senator. If he can continue to keep his base in California, he is going to be a power in the Senate," the Nader profile quoted one Cranston associate as saying.

"'Alan has overcome his reputation as a lightweight,' says Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Penn.," the report added.

The profile was written by Lisa Bercouici, edited by Catherine Smith, and researched by John Murdock.

SEN. JOHN TUNNEY

Tunney—rated high as liberal

WASHINGTON — Sen John Tunney, D-Calif., is a Democrat who votes Democratic more often than most of his Democratic colleagues, according to a Ralph Nader profile of the junior senator from California.

"Tunneys rating by the liberal Americans for Democratic Action has remained high and has increased since his entrance into the Senate. Conversely, the Conservative Americans for Constitutional Action finds his 1971 performance even less congenial than his cumulative 1965-1970 (House) record," the report noted.

It also pointed out that Tunney's attendance record in the Senate has improved over his House record.

"The latter statistic is significant for during Tunney's last years of service in the House, his attendance record was among the worst in the body," the report commented, adding that in the Senate it is better than average.

He has had an active legislative record too, according to the report.

"OF THE MORE than 200 bills I have authored or cosponsored, I am proudest of my contribution to (the water quality control) that act," Tunney told Nader.

The bill has since passed both House and Senate and been vetoed by the Presigave him a 42 per cent record while the Committee on Political Education, an arm of the labor unions, listed a near-perfect union voting record.

"One major reason for some liberals' disenchantment with Holifield since the mid-1960s has been his hawkish stand on United States policy in Southeast Asia . . . Holifield has become one of the pentagon's most consistent supporters . . .," the profile said.

THE NADER profile also pointed out that Holifield's wife, Vernice, is on his congressional office payroll at $10,634.88 per year.

"She is my most valuable employe," Holifield answered, "and she receives next to the lowest salary in the office. Under the provisions of House regulations her employment is legitimate."

The report noted Holifield's brother-in-law served as a bill clerk in the House until his death and that Holifield had hired a grandson and the son of a fund raiser as interns. Holifield said that he has employed "40 to 50" interns" with no personal relationship.

In other areas the Nader report criticized Holifield for:

—"Abdication of military oversight responsibility—and the failure to dig into waste of taxpayers' money" as chairman of Government Operations.

—Crippling the investigative role of the General Acounting Office.

—Arbitrary actions as a committee chairman.

—Berating witnesses before the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy who testified about possible nuclear hazards.

In almost every case, the Nader profile said Holifield's present stands are the opposite to those he took when he first came to Congress.

HOLIFIELD SAID in reply, "I've supported defense appropriations because I believe that it is necessary to have a strong military position to back up our diplomatic negotiations with the Soviet Union and other countries."

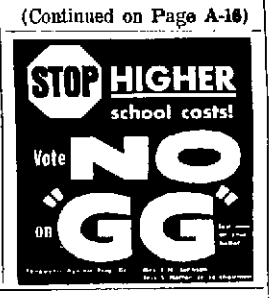

He stressed the need to build nuclear power plants and said that under his leadership nuclear programs have been switched from "almost 100 per cent military to 55 per cent peacetime uses."

On the question of the congressional seniority system under which leadership positions go to the senior congressman, Holifield said:

"I worked within the system and I never criticized it and I do not criticize it today. The best wey I know for a congressman, a lawyer or a surgeon, or any other professional person, to gain the experience necessary for expert judgment is through service."

He added, "I voted for the 1946 reorganization. I voted in the Democratic caucus for the reform bill. I supported the 18-year-old vote."

THE NADER profile concluded, "After 30 years in the House, Chet Holl-

Young people bid for Congress

By ED ZUCKERMAN
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Young people are seeking election to Congress in unprecedentedly high numbers this year.

The major political parties are fielding 46 candidates who are 30 years old or younger — 23 Democrats and 23 Republicans.

Ten of the youthful office-seekers are considered to be in serious contention to win their contests.

Two of the young candidates are already serving in Congress—Rep. Mendel Davis, D-S.C., and John B. Breaux, D-La.

Davis, 29, is seeking his first full House term. He won a special contest last year to become the mid-term replacement for the late Rep. Mendel Rivers, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

Davis, who was Rivers' godson and had worked as an aide to the military committee, survived a three-way primary contest with 48.6 per cent of the vote several weeks ago to secure a berth on the November ballot. He is facing a tough challenge from his Republican opponent, State Rep. Sidi Limehouse. The contest for the traditionally Democratic seat is rated a toss-up, according to observers.

Breaux, a 28-year-old attorney and law partner of former Rep. Edwin Edwards who recently vacated his seat to become governor of Louisina, was sworn into office after winning 55 per cent of the vote in a Sept. 30 run-off primary. He filled the seat immediately, because it was vacant and because he has no opposition in the fall election.

PERHAPS BEST known among the young candidates are antiwar activist John Kerry of Massachusetts and women's liberationist Ms. Elizabeth Holtzman of New York City, both running as Democrats.

Kerry, 29, a leader of Vietnam Veterans Against the War, won national recognition last year when his organization defied court orders against their encampment on the U.S. Capitol mall. The Justice Department obtained an injunction against the demonstration against the down when veterans refused to leave the grounds.

Kerry's testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee catapulted him into the national spotlight as an eloquent speaker against Nixon administration Indochina policies.

Kerry, aided by antiwar groups and liberal organizations such as the committee for an Effective Congress, spent at least $135,000 to win his primary campaign.

His Republican opponent is 34-year-old Paul Cronin, a former state representative and aide to former Rep. Bradford Morse, R-Mass., who resigned from Congress to become a United Nations undersecretary. Cronin, like Morse, is a liberal and the outcome of the contest is uncertain.

Dennis Murray, Democratic nominee for congress in the Long Beach-Southwest Orange County 32nd District, says he believes he is one of the six youngest candidates in the nation for this election. He turned 26 last Sept. 4. Only Michael Shapiro, Democratic candidate in the Southern California 28th Congressional District, is younger, at 25, than Murray among California office seekers.

MS. HOLTZMAN, a 30-year-old Brooklyn attorney, is considered unbeatable in her race against Republican Nicholas Macchio Jr., 34, also a Brooklyn attorney.

Ms. Holtzman pulled off the political upset of the year when she defeated 84-year-old Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., dean of the House and chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, in the primary. The central thrust of her campaign was Celler's adamant refusal to bring action on the equal rights for women amendment which languished in his committee for decades until Congress, utilizing a rarely invoked discharge petition, wrested the bill from his grip.

Six other young candidates are given "good to fair" chances for winning election, despite facing incumbent office-holders.

—In Indiana, Democratic challenger Phillip Sharp, 30, faces two-term Republican David Dennis, an archconservative. Sharp, by contrast, is a liberal political science professor at Ball State University where a large student population will have an affect on the outcome.

—In Michigan, Democrat M. Robert Carr, a 29-year-old attorney, is expected to give eight-term Republican Charles Chamberlain a rough time. Chamberlain has a poor environmental record and was named one of Environmental Action's "Dirty Dozen." Carr, former aide to Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., the founder of "Earth Day," is concentrating on the 44,000 students at Michigan State University in East Lansing.

—In Minnesota, Democrat Richard Nolan, 28, brings legislative experience to his attempt to oust three-term Republican John Zwach. Nolan, a former aide to Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., served two terms in the state legislature. Zwach won with 51.8 per cent of the vote in 1970 but redistricting puts him in a better position this time.

—In New Jersey, Republican William Dowd, 28, is running against four-term Democrat James J. Howard. Dowd is a former aide to President Nixon and is getting White House help in his contest, the second time he's sought the seat against Howard. The incumbent House member beat Dowd in 1970 with 55.2 per cent of the vote.

—In Texas, Republican Alan Steelman, 30, is using his former White House affiliation in his contest against four-term Democrat Earle Cabell. Steelman, an economic development consultant, was former executive director of the President's Advisory Council on Minority Business Enterprise.

—In Wyoming, Republican Bill Kidd, 28, is making out like a bandit against two-term Democrat Teno Roncalio. Polls give Kidd, a "wild" conservative and scion of a wealthy Republican family, the edge over Roncalio whose 1970 victory was decided by 608 votes. Kidd, financed by oil interests, claims the state should send a young man to Congress to start building seniority. Roncalio contends his youthful opponent lacks political experience.

Tunney rated as a leading liberal

dent because of its $24 billion cost. The House and Senate in the closing hours of the congressional session overrode the presidential veto.

The Nader profile said that Tunney's tough stand on water pollution control legislation led "to a short-lived and for Tunney, embarrassing clash with the chairman of the Senate Public Works Committee, Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va."

The chairman pulled Tunney off the conference committee, whose job it was to compromise House and Senate versions of the bill, even though Tunney had already released a press release announcing the appointment.

In addition, the profile pointed out Tunney's active part in investigating the ITT scandal earlier this year and his opposition to the appointment of U.S. Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst.

"Many observers have criticized Tunney's voting record, especially his not-so-firm stands on Vietnam and the super-sonic transport," the profile said.

One piece of major legislation, an antinoise bill, authored by Tunney, was approved by the House and Senate after the profile was completed.

THE REPORT commented extensively on Tunney's election campaign, noting that he was left with a huge debt after the campaign. The report added, "Tunney is not a poor man. As a matter of fact, during the 1970 campaign he estimated his net personal worth at $395,000."

Finally the report said of Tunney:

"He is young, popular, and has at least four more years to help shape and create national policy in the Senate. John Tunney has come a long way from that time when he wrote his wife in the early 1960s: 'People really think I ought to run for Congress. Can you imagine that.'"

The report was written by Christopher E. Cobey, edited by Sallie Helm and researched by John Murdock and Tim O'Hearn.

Gaze into cultural crystal ball

Census maps age directions

By JACK ROSENTHAL
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Like a pearl in an oyster, there is a crystal ball of sorts embedded in the endless rows of tiny numbers of the 1970 federal census reports. It rests in a category demographers call "The Age of Structure."

What they refer to is the differing size of different age groups in the population. The crystal ball possibilities arise from the knowledge that people at different ages have broadly predictable needs.

THERE ARE some striking ups and downs, indeed, in the current American age structure. There are now about 12.1 million people aged 47 to 51. But there are only 11.1 million aged 37 to 41 — the clear result of low birth rates during the depression.

The most striking bulge in the age structure exists among those between age 6 and 25. This is the baby boom generation, and its size can be illustrated by noting there now are 2.1 million people aged 38 — and 4.3 million aged 12.

The predictable — and unpredictable — impact of this enormous youth bulge on society was one of the major developments of the 1960's, as it was of the 1950's. The statistical footprints stand out sharply from a page of figures in the new United States summary entitled "School Enrollment by Age."

FOR INSTANCE, in 1970, there were nearly as many 18-and 19-year-olds still in school as there were total people of those ages in 1960.

It is not just that there are many more people of school age. It is also that much higher proportions of people are going to school and staying longer.

Thus, almost 90 per cent of 16 and 17-year-olds were in school in 1970. In 1960, it was 81 per cent. In 1920, it was 43 per cent.

The combination of more young people and higher rates produced a mammoth change in the figures. In 1970, there were 58.6 million persons between age 5 and 34 enrolled in some kind of school. That represented a stunning 34 per cent increase over the 1960 total of 43.8 million.

The maturing baby boom generation exerts increasingly greater influence on higher education. Probably the greatest impact has been on one of the fastest growing institutions of American life, the junior college.

Total university enrollment douled in the 1960's, to a 1970 total 3 million. But junior college enrollment quadrupled, exceeding 2.3 million. And educators forecast that just by 1975, even this total would double.

Fourth in a series.

THE LARGEST junior college in the country typifies this spectacular growth. In 1960, Miami-Dade Junior College began at an old Miami airport and enrolled 1,428 students. Last September, it enrolled 38,106 on three handsome campuses worth $45 million.

There is a future as well as a past side to the age-structure coin. With the leading edge of the baby boom now in its mid-20's, the impact it has had on education is now starting to be felt in different ways.

One of the first is in housing. A generation ago, for a young unmarried person to move out of the family home provoked raised eyebrows. But now, rapidly, it has become commonplace.

"UNCOUPLING" is what demographers call this phenomenon, and they cite figures showing that just between 1964 and 1970, the number of young people setting up housekeeping has jumped by more than 130 per cent.

There has been a parallel, though not quite so dramatic, jump — of 50 per cent — in the number of adults over age 65, also uncoupling. The move to apartments, for example, rather than allow themselves to be a burden on their children.

The total effect of such movement, by young and old, has been a huge 50 per cent increase in one person households. And the almost certain prospect is that such households will increase even more sharply in the near future.

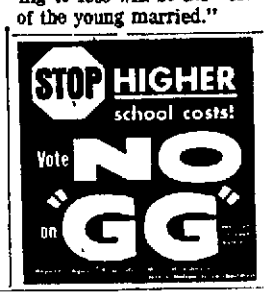

Conrad F. Taeuber, director of the 1970 census, notes that between 1945 and 1965, about 48 million Americans reached age 20. Between 1965 and 1985, about 78 million will.

NOR WILL household changes be limited to single persons. Taeuber, one of the nation's leading demographers, foresees massive rises in total household formations.

The annual total has been running at something under a million a year. It is already starting to go up and, he says, "may reach as much as 1.5 million per year before it begins declining again."

The signs are already evident from what once would have sounded like a contradiction in terms: suburban apartments. In the 1960's, they increased so fast — 96 per cent — that there is now one suburban apartment for every two in the city.

The crystal ball possibilities are plain, whether for those who manufacture spatulas or those who make housing policy. And small wonder that George H. Brown, the director of the Census Bureau, believes that the years leading to 1985 will be the "era of the young married."

Teacher surplus seen into 1980s

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A decline in birthrates will cause a continuation in the present teacher surplus until the 1980s, according to the new head of the Association of School, College and University Staffing.

Victor Lindquist, placement director at Boston University, says the decline in births is not the only factor affecting teaching jobs.

Many high school students, he explained to the association's three-day meeting in Atlanta, are now choosing not to go to college.

"A lot of kids are saying, 'there are no jobs, so why should I go to school?'" he said. He cited the example of an auto mechanic who earns as much or more than a teacher.

But Lindquist predicted the surplus of teachers would serve to upgrade the profession, reduce the number of students to each teacher and eliminate the small percentage of teachers who are not certified.

HE ADDED young teachers just out of college were finding it hard to find jobs where they want them. Most of them, he said, are having to take jobs in rural areas before finding positions in cities.

Lindquist said placement personnel should advise young teachers concerning supply and demand in the profession. "They have been reluctant to do so in the past," he admitted.

"Before," the director told the meeting, "you could almost auction your teachers off to the highest bidders." But now, he said, a student has to start sizing things up before he leaves school and "appreciate the competition."

Author up the McGovern trail

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Robert Townsend, author of a best-selling critique of the corporate world, campaigned here for Sen. George McGovern, but says the presidential candidate's weakness is "his inability to fire anyone."

Townsend, who wrote "Up the Organization," told a businessman's group here Friday he was pitching for McGovern, however, because he feels President Nixon is an "Archie Bunker with a law degree."

McGovern's "weakest point," Townsend said, "is his inability to fire anyone. He needs a couple of guys around to whistle-blow."

2 PUPPIES CROSS REA PICKET LINE

NEW YORK (UPI) — A French poodle, stranded at Kennedy International Airport by the REA strike, has given birth to two puppies.

Officials at the American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals said Saturday the dog was bound for some place in Connecticut.

Skies clear, flood waters begin falling in Southwest

United Press International

Heavy autumn rains that flooded portions of Arizona and New Mexico moved across the nation Saturday, but flood waters that claimed at least seven lives in the Southwest began receding as skies cleared over the area.

A few showers were reported in the Arizona mountains, but most of the flooded area basked in sunshine.

At the height of the flooding Friday, dikes broke and water poured over the banks of three eastern Arizona rivers, causing millions of dollars in crop damage as well as loss of life.

Four persons were killed when a road washed out on a Navajo reservation, a 4-year-old boy drowned in a rain swollen ditch in Tucson and a 22-year-old man was washed off a bridge in Sabino Canyon near Tucson. In New Mexico, one woman died when a bridge collapsed and another person was reported missing in the same accident.

The clearing weather in the Southwest provided the first chance for a major search effort for a missing single-engine plane with four Texans aboard. The plane vanished Wednesday on a flight from Cortez, Colo., to Salt Lake City, Utah.

But elsewhere, San Angelo, Texas., was hit by more than one inch of rain in one six-hour period and Oklahoma City, Okla., and Abilene, Tex., both received well over a half-inch in the same period. Varying amounts of rain and drizzle were reported all the way from southern Canada to the Rio Grande.

'Skin' tests due on LBJ library

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Workers will start inspecting the travertine marble "skin" of the Lyndon B. Johnson library Monday to see what has caused some of the facing to crack, loosen and fall off the 18-month-old building.

Thirty or 40 slabs of the beige marble will be taken from the giant building, so University of Texas officials can determine how much of the façade will have to be removed and reset.

The university filed a $10,000 suit against T. C. Bateson Construction Co. of Dallas and the Federal Insurance Co., holder of a Bateson performance bond, after cracks and missing slabs developed on the library's walls less than a year after it was dedicated in May, 1971. The suit is pending in a state court.

Ralph S. Kristoferson, director of the university's office of facilities planning and construction, said the difficulties with the marble facing "do not represent a structural failure with the building."

Union head terms REA strike 'bleak'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Union and management negotiators began talks here Saturday in an effort to end a nationwide strike which has stopped all REA express surface deliveries except medical supplies.

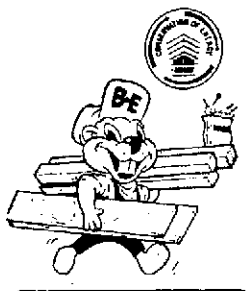

"It looks very bleak," said John Carlo chairman of a New York local of the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks, as he picketed outside REA headquarters, where the talks were going on.

The union has worked without a contract since July 1, 1971, and has asked that any settlement reached be retroactive to that date.

Carlo said the 15,000 strikers wanted only parity with workers doing similar jobs with other companies and "nothing over the 5.5 per cent wage guideline. We only want what is due us."

REA said the union was asking a 30 per cent raise over an average current weekly salary of $165.

Besides drivers, clerks and freight handlers are involved across the nation.

OIL-SOAKED TREE TRUNKS AND OTHER DEBRIS FLOAT IN LAKE POWELL'S SAN JUAN ARM —UPI Telephoto

Lake Powell oil spill blocked

PIUTE FARMS, Utah (UPI) — A debris-filled oil slick rested behind barricades in Lake Powell Saturday, where work crews renewed efforts to clean up the spill before it advanced down the 186-mile-long waterway.

The massive slick was held in an arm of the long lake at Zahn Bay, where calm contrasted with the raging current that had carried the oil down the San Juan River from New Mexico.

"You might say we're now in phase two of the clean-up," said Jack Hallowell, an Environmental Protection Agency public information officer.

Hallowell said 50 barrels of "free oil" were in the lake and were being held by a wood boom and a natural "logjam" of debris two miles ahead of the man-made barrier.

He said the workers would attempt to place a boom across the lake to catch any free oil coming through.

The oil spill began when a pipeline broke Oct. 10 in New Mexico. The oil ran through an irrigation ditch and into the San Juan where it flowed 138 miles before it was stopped by three booms last week.

Pounding rains flooded the river, and officials cut the booms away to let the mess move into the calmer waters of the lake.

'No plan to end controls'

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (UPI) —The heads of the Cost of Living Council and the Price Commission told the nation's leading corporate executives Saturday not to plan on an early end to wage and price controls.

Donald Rumsfeld, director of the Cost of Living Council, told the fall meeting of the Business Council the administration would have to decide "in January or early February" whether to ask Congress for new legislation to continue or to modify the present economic stabilization program or to end the controls completely. The law which permitted the controls expires April 30.

"The decision has not been made. I say that flatly," Rumsfeld said. He added, "the President has not expressed publicly or privately what he wants to do."

Nonetheless, Rumsfeld and Price Commission chairman C. Jackson Grayson Jr., told the businessmen representing about 100 of the nation's major companies, to concentrate on living with the present system instead of second-guessing the administration on when the controls might end.

Grayson said he found no consensus among the executives on the wisdom of the administration's economic policy; but he said he detected "a general sentiment for continuation of controls."

Earlier radio talk aids Boggs hunt

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A report of radio transmissions Monday that may have come from the missing plane carrying House Democratic Leader Hale Boggs — discounted earlier in the week — led searchers Saturday to concentrate their hunt on an area near Juneau.

Five California men, all citizens' band radio operators, told a news conference here that evidence indicates they may have talked last Monday with pilot Don E. Jonz, who reported he was combatting 70 mile per hour head winds and was low on fuel.

JONZ was pilot of the Cessna 310 that vanished on a 560 mile flight from Anchorage to Juneau with Boggs, Rep. Nick Begich and a Begich aide aboard.

Air Force Maj. Henry Stocker, coordinator of the massive five-day-old search, said a daylong interview of the radio operators "helped us to better understand previous inconsistencies based on our initial information, and although the general area we're talking about has been searched repeatedly, an intensive search of that area will continue."

Some 50 planes were in the air Saturday, and Stocker said the hunt would focus on the Mansfield Peninsula, about 12 miles southwest of Juneau.

The Californians — Al Miller and Victor Parker of Nevada City, Ronald Crawford of Olivehurst, Roy Harris of Grass Valley and Joe Tatum of Butte — were flown to nearby Elmendorf Air Force Base Saturday to meet with search officials.

THE RADIO operators said they received a transmission about 10:20 p.m. Pacific Daylight Time Monday — nearly eight hours after the twin engine plane's fuel should have been exhausted, the Air Force said.

But Stocker said it is possible the extra flying time could have been added if the light plane had landed on a strip of land or beach, and later had taken off again. Other reports from the radio operators indicated a light plane had landed on a beach and had been trying to take off again.

Autoworkers, GM parley on strikes

United Press International

United Auto Workers and General Motors bargaining teams met Saturday to try to resolve grievances against a cost-cutting management team that triggered strikes by 12,500 workers at GM plants in Kansas, Wisconsin and Texas.

Strikes at Janesville, Wis., Arlington, Tex., and Kansas City, Kan., were expected to end by Monday or Tuesday as part of the union's new strategy of "hit-and-run" strikes — short strikes that do not drain the union's strike fund.

Three strikes called last week were nothing more than "long weekend" walkouts and three strike deadlines in the coming week are set to expire Thursday night and Friday.

The series of "quickie" strikes have been directed mainly at the General Motors Assembly Division (GMAD).

The union has accused the recently formed GMAD with "slashing back assembly line manpower while demanding as much, or more production, issuing heavy disciplinary layoffs, and attempting to discard important provisions of agreements" with formerly separate divisions.

GMAD was set up to consolidate basic manufacturing and assembly operations under one management group. It now operates 18 plants, including the Norwood, Ohio, plant which was struck for a record 174 days over the same issues.

The short-term strikes disrupt GM production at a time when GM's divisions are heading for record sales. Unless a strike lasts more than one week, the workers do not receive any strike benefits from the union.

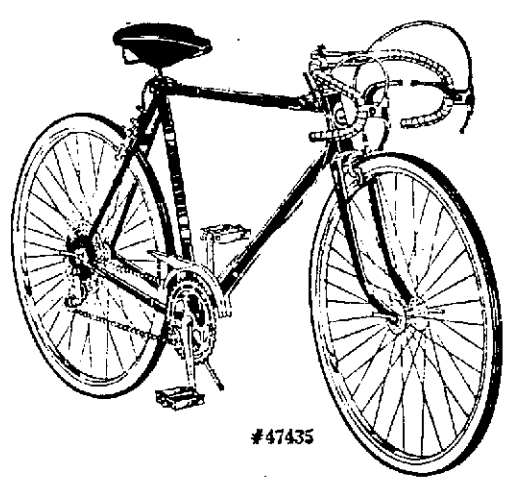

GM could counter the union's new strategy by refusing to go along and reopen the plants until all issues are resolved. The company, so far, has indicated no plans to lock out striking workers.

Pesticide Act signed into law

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon signed into law Saturday the Federal Environmental Pesticide Control Act of 1972 which would require all U.S. pesticides to be federally registered or approved.

It also would classify pesticides for general or restricted use, with provision for restrictions in addition to a certified applicator requirement in cases where a pesticide could injure the environment as well as health.

NIXON said the measure represents the most significant legislation in this field since the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act of 1947.

"The law required the registration of pesticides but it did not address the problem of misusing properly registered pesticides and it did not control pesticides which move solely in intrastate commerce. The new law remedies these defects. It prohibits the use of any pesticide inconsistent with its labeling, it extends federal registration to all pesticides including those distributed or used within a single state, and it takes a number of additional important steps to improve and strengthen the regulatory process," the President said.

"AS A result of this new law, the federal government, for the first time, will be able to exercise adequate control over the use of pesticides. We will now be able to insure that we can continue to reap the benefits which these substances can contribute to the well-being of America, in terms of maximized agricultural production, without risking unwanted hazards to our environment and our health," Nixon said.

The measure will also prohibit the misuse of pesticides, add civil to increased criminal penalties, and otherwise strengthen enforcement; require pesticide-producing establishments to be registered; authorize indemnification of certain owners of pesticides which are suspended, then cancelled; and provide for regulation of pesticide and container disposal.

Selective Service jobs are routine, dull these days

By WARREN L. NELSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — During the era of youthful opposition to the Vietnam war and attacks on the establishment, Selective Service was right up front taking a large share of the flak, having its offices sacked and its records drenched in cow's blood.

Now the draft is being phased out. The pace of business at selective service headquarters, just a block from the White House, has slipped into routine and a number of employes who signed on in the turbulent days of draft reform are looking for more interesting jobs elsewhere.

"Nobody really cares about us any more," one official said, clearly longing for the days when selective service employes thought they deserved combat pay.

The 4,450 draft boards around the country will not fold up next June 30 when the draft officially ends. They will remain in business doing almost everything they have done in the past — except to draft men.

Eighteen-year-olds still will be required to register. There will still be an annual draft lottery, and thousands of men with low numbers — perhaps as many as 100,000 each year — will be given physical exams just in case the draft should be needed again.

ALL THIS will continue because the selective service law does not expire next summer. That law is permanent legislation. What does expire is the authority to order men into uniform.

Should something unforeseen happen to send U.S. troops off to war again, the draft machinery would still exist and could deliver men as soon as Congress passed the necessary legislation.

The remaining worry at selective service headquarters is that young men, figuring conscription is part of history, will neglect to take the time to see they are classified properly.

"Suppose a kid's the sole support of his mother and thereby eligible for deferment, but he doesn't tell his draft board about it," one official said. "Then he could find himself in the trenches fighting in the great Cucamonga war of 1974."

"In other words," he said, "The problem we'll have is apathy. Guys may not even bother to register. And unless this system works, it's a waste of money — and it can affect national security if we are lulled into believing we have a workable standby draft."

FOUR YEARS AGO a little public apathy was what selective service most wanted. It seemed then that a generation of irate youth was about to revolt against a system which they said old men sent young men off to die in battle.

In 1970, President Nixon tabbed Curtis W. Tarr to head selective service, shoving aside Lt Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the man who designed selective service as an Army major in the 1930s and then headed it from its inception in 1940.

Tarr came in with a band of young reformers and a mandate to give selective service a new image and a new substance.

The change has been substantial. The switch to a lottery system as a means of choosing those who must serve has been the most visible change, along with the end of deferments that often gave smarter and wealthier men a way out. Some new figures also give a statistical view of how much selective service has changed inside.

Back in 1966 almost a quarter of the 16,000 unsalaried men who served on local draft boards were over 70 and 12 were over 90. Now no one is over 70.

Back in 1966 no one was below 30 and only 5 per cent were in their 30s. As of July a quarter of the 20,000 board members were 39 or younger, including 656 aged 18 to 29.

In 1966 only 1.3 per cent of the board members were black. Now 10 per cent are black — close to the 11 per cent that Negroes form in the general population. Oriental, Indian and Spanish-speaking minorities have gone from 1.7 per cent to 5.6 per cent. And there are 874 women serving where there were none six years ago.

THE NUMBERS do not tell the whole story as far as officials are concerned. They feel that under Hershey the system was designed to be paternalistic. Control rested in the local boards — at least one to every county — comprised of the community's elite. Those men were to make the decisions and "The attitude just did not allow for much questioning," one official said.

The role of the local boards has diminished considerably now. The only real discretionary authority they have is in determining who shall be granted conscientious objector status or declared free of any obligation because of personal hardship, such as being the sole support of one's mother.

Local boards now must be prepared to give the registrant written reasons for turning down a request. In the past it was hard to appeal because the registrant did not even know why his request had been denied.

Perhaps most important the deferments have been phased out. Before April 23, 1970, when the process began, 1.8 million young men, mostly from middle and upper income families, enjoyed student deferments. Another 411,000 had occupational deferments. 23,000 others enjoyed agricultural deferments and 4 million fathers had paternity deferments. Few ever saw military service.

Now all that is gone. Also gone are the demonstrators who had often camped out on the doorsteps of selective service headquarters.

Radio satellite batteries down

A satellite that rebroadcasts radio amateur broadcasts for long-range transmission will be shut down for three days because its batteries have been worn out by overuse, its owners said in Los Angeles Saturday.

The satellite, paid for by the amateurs, was launched last Sunday atop the ITOs-D three-dimensional weather satellite from Vandenberg Air Force Base.

CONSUMER NOTES

"Consumer Notes" is published as a public service each Sunday in the Independent, Press-Telegram. The weekly digest is prepared by staff reporters with information from various agencies and news sources.

Raisin roulette

Consumers wondering about the prices for food items this fall can stop wondering. Most items will cost more, with a few exceptions.

Beef — record-breaking beef supplies from American and foreign cattlemen will cause a moderate price reduction, or at least a little less than the costs per pound this summer.

Pork — prices are going up and pork is in short supply. Better luck next year.

Vegetables — lettuce, tomatoes, cabbage and carrots were priced lower this summer (according to the Bureau of Consumer Affairs) . . . they obviously weren't affected by the 40-cents-per-head of lettuce Long Beach shoppers saw in late spring and early summer). Prices are expected to level off in late fall, with the harvest being supplemented with imports from Mexico.

Dairy products — Up. Up. Up. Although cheese still remains a cheap source of protein and a good buy for the dollar.

For immediate bargain hunting, the Bureau of Consumer Affairs suggests canned applesauce, rice and dry beans. And forget about raisins, dried fruit and nuts, because they're going up in price, along with the American morning staple — coffee.

The big burn

The Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Product Safety is seeking changes in gas and electric cooking ranges, which are responsible for an estimated 100,000 burn accidents annually — or about a fifth of all injuries from home appliances.

The agency is seeking three major changes in cooking range design. Changes, if any, will be voluntary because Congress has not passed laws about safety of ranges:

—Relocation of control knobs to prevent them from being turned on accidentally.

—Relocation of signal lights to provide a more effective warning that burners are on.

—A method of ensuring that a person uses the proper size burner to eliminate the risk of clothing and pot holder fire when they get too close to the flame or heating element.

Massage machine recall

Sears, Roebuck and Co. issued a warning to consumers who may have purchased a belt massager.

It seems the experience of being massaged by a multispeed belt unit can be a shocking experience. Model number 449.29110 is the culprit and according to a Sears spokesman, about 11,000 units of this model were sold between December 1969 through this month when they were taken off the market.

The model number is on the underside of the motor housing. The machine may also be identified by a push-button lighted switch.

Persons having this model at home, should unplug it and call the nearest Sears store.

Deck the halls

Although it's only October, the FDA is casting a critical eye toward Christmas — decorations, that is.

The FDA is hoping to get a head start on potential fire and electrical hazards before consumers start buying Christmas decorations.

Hazards have been identified as easily broken glass ornaments, exposed lighting circuits, flammable decorations and flammable trees — both real and synthetic.

The Consumer's Insurance Information Bureau reports about 50 fatalities from fires caused by faulty decorations every Yule season.

Meanwhile, the American buying public will spend about $1 billion on goodies to make their season's greetings brighter.

Cereal ads make kids yell 'gimme'

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Any mother with one or more of the gimme group at home can attest to the power of dry-cereal advertising. But it's getting harder to understand just what the kids are yelling "gimme" for.

How can a member of the corn flakes generation be expected to understand demands for such things as Freakies, Baron von Redberry and Sir Grapefellow, Froot Loops, Pebbles and Count Chocula and Franken Berry ("the monstrously delicious cereal")?

WHERE DO youngsters learn about such things? Well, on a recent Saturday morning, an estimated 25 million kids were watching network television. And network television is where the four major cereal manufacturers put some $45 million worth of advertising last year.

What did all those children see and hear? They saw a lot of crazy cartoon characters, for one thing, and they heard a lot about crunchiness (apparently a vital ingredient for cereals) and they also heard many references to "eight essential vitamins."

"So crispy, you almost have to eat them with your fingers in your ears," is the message for Ralston Purina's Chex cereals.

"Tastes like a bowl of noisy fruit," says the spot for Pebbles, made by General Foods Post division.

"A frootful snootful," promises the commercial for Kellogg's Froot Loops.

KIDS also learn of orange, pink and purple breakfast delights, of some that taste like peanut butter and of some that are sprinkled with marshamallows. And, perhaps more important to them, the kids learn that a box of Pebbles might contain a toy pelican powered flintmoboat. And they discover, for 75 cents and a "purchase seal" from General Mills's Trix, they can get a Wham-O 27-color pencil.

Almost sounds like a fairy story — but it adds up to $800 million in annual sales of ready-to-eat cereal. A fairy story should have some trolls, and there are trolls aplenty:

—Those at the Federal Trade Commission who have charged the big four ceral makers with monopolistic practices.

—Those of Action on Children's Television, a Boston-based organization who would like to eliminate advertising aimed at children.

—Those who want to use TV to educate tots on the nature of advertising and nutrition.

And those who are making the "instant breakfast" and pop-out-of-the-toaster goodies that are cutting into the cereal market.

The cereals with the strange names and far-out colors and flavors are of the presweetened variety. This is not the biggest category of ready-to-eat cereal, but certainly it is the fastest growing and now accounts for 30 per cent of the market.

According to John C. Maxwell Jr., an analyst for Oppenheimer & Co., the only one of the big four manufacturers — Kellogg, General Mills, General Foods and Quaker — to expand its dollar volume last year was General Mills, which has created the wackiest names for its new brands. Kellogg showed a gain in units sold.

THE NATION devours more than one billion pounds of ready-to-eat cereals a year. One industry source says 70 per cent of this is gobbled up by people under 20 years old. A more sophisticated source breaks it down to 38 per cent by the under-13 set and 31 per cent each by the 14-to-44 and 45-and-over groups.

Curiously what seems to have given the whole business a boost is the July, 1970, blast by Robert B. Choate, a former Nixon administration consultant on hunger. His charge that most cereals had little nutritional value made headlines coast to coast.

He ranked 60 brands in descending order of nutritional value. Kellogg's Corn Flakes, Rice Krispies and Sugar Frosted Flakes (which he ranked 38th, 39th and 58th) were last year's first, third and fourth best sellers, in terms of units. General Mills' Cheerios (which he put in 25th place) sold second best.

The only explanation Maxwell had to offer was: "It's the same as tobacco. Tell them it's not good for them and they'll buy it. People love to sin."

CHOATE said recently that sales did drop during the first six months after his disclosure. He noted that, of the 40 brands that got the worst marks, 36 have stepped up their nutritional content.

A glance at some of the new commercials indicates that advertisers are moving in a direction that may please some of the critics.

More than one of the new commercials show them advertising cereal along with bacon and eggs, orange juice and toast. Or they include voice-over lines like "good breakfast featuring Post Super Pops."

Premiums have always been a part of ready-to-eat cereal marketing. ("Send two box tops and 25 cents to . . .") Nowadays they have become almost mandatory, with in-pack premiums the more popular type. The ideal in-pack item, according to an expert, is plastic. It is stamped and packaged in one piece, then assembled by the child. It should cost 2 to 3 cents.

Premiums stir unhappiness in many of the critics.

"I'M DOWN on all the reward mechanisms — bonuses or prizes — that have to be used to sell a mediocre product," said Choate.

"I noticed how many promote the toy and not the product," said Mrs. Peggy Charren, president of Action on Children's Television.

Someone else notices, too. The Television Code Board of the National Association of Broadcasters has set new guidelines for all commercials. They state that no premium offer shall exceed half of the commercial time or 20 seconds, whichever is shorter.

Allende declares strike broken

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — President Salvador Allende said Saturday Chilean workers have smashed efforts by small businessmen to paralyze the nation. He said conditions will be back to normal by Tuesday.

Allende accused opponents of his Marxist-led government of planting "elements of infernal destruction" along highways in attempts to halt trucks and buses during the 12-day crisis.

The army, meanwhile, said troops killed a retired army officer who failed to halt for questioning during the midnight-to-6 a.m. curfew period in Santiago. He was the second person killed by military patrols since the curfew went into effect last week.

Bus drivers ended a 24-hour walkout and returned to work, but state airline pilots, physicians, merchants and members of other professions continued their strikes.

They were striking in support of truck drivers who walked out Oct. 11 following orders from Leon Vilarin, president of the Truck Owners Federation. Vilarin called the strike to protest a proposed federal trucking authority in southern Aysen Province. The drivers said the plan was a move toward nationalization of their industry.

Allende told a news conference at the presidential palace that "the strike, which tried to become a general strike, has failed and failed absolutely."

The Socialist president said that "only the workers can paralyze Chile and they have refused to support the strike. The country will return to its normal tranquility Monday or Tuesday."

Filipino chief reapportions land

New York Times Service

MANILA — President Ferdinand E. Marcos issued a martial-law decree Saturday alloting five hectares (12 acres) of land for each tenant farmer in the rice and corn - growing areas of the Philippines and limiting landowners to seven-hectare (12½ acres)

Diplomatic sources familiar with the problem of land reform considered the declaration sure to please the masses of land-starved Filipinos but less certain of rapid or large scale implementation in view of the inordinate difficulties of so radical a redistribution of land and the lack of qualified manpower and money to carry it out.

THE INTENDED breakup of the large estates, mainly in central and northern Luzon, the country's principal island, would make landowners of approximately 715,000 tenant farmers and involve the transfer of about 1.5 million hectares, or 3.75 million acres.

The presidential decree, issued amid great ceremony at Malacanan Palace, is short on specification. It instructs farmers receiving land to organize themselves immediately into cooperatives. The large landholders were told that they could retain their seven hectares only if they themselves farmed them.

Diplomats, pointing to a long postponed history of stillborn land reform measures in the Philippines, were skeptical. They said that the technical problems of surveying and changing title requires a large and qualified work force and a long time. They said they were unaware of the existence of an organized staff of such dimensions.

The diplomats also looked askance at how reimbursement of owners and advances of feeds, fertilizer and equipment for the new owners is to be funded. The penury of Filipino tenant farmers is so great that land ownership alone will not allow them to put their land into production.

IN ISSUING the decree, the president took the occasion to paint a positive picture of the first months of his martial-law rule. He said notably that the government, helped by the military, had re-established civil order throughout the county.

But he said that Communists and their front organizations, as well as criminal groups, were regrouping for a counter-attack on the "new society."

Irish violence claims victim 615, policeman

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A policeman died of gunshot wounds Saturday night, raising Northern Ireland's death toll to 615 in three years of sectarian violence.

Constable Gordon Harron, 30, was the 13th policeman slain in the British ruled province this year.

He was shot in the head four days ago while on traffic duty in Belfast. Gunmen in a stolen car also shot and wounded another constable who was with Harron.

Guerrilla bombers struck Saturday in Belfast and Londonderry, wrecking two barges and a garage. No one was injured in the blasts.

Six masked gunmen hijacked two sand barges in Lough Neagh, a large lake west of Belfast. Before placing their bombs, the raiders ordered two men off the craft at gunpoint. The barges were estimated to be worth $84,000 each.

Earlier this year, two Irish Republican Army guerrillas accidentally blew themselves up while planting a bomb on a sand barge on the banks of the lake.

In Londenderry, security authorities said IRA guerrillas blew up a garage in the city's outskirts with a bomb containing 15 pounds of explosives. It was the third attempt this year. Two previous ones were foiled by army experts who defused the bombs.

Abortive coup in Egypt reported

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Travelers arriving Saturday from Cairo said about 300 Egyptian army officers and soldiers were arrested last week following an abortive attempt to overthrow the government of President Anwar Sadat.

The informants said the attempted coup was put down less than an hour after it started. They reported a brief fire fight near the Al Hussein Mosque in the eastern outskirts of Cairo, but they had no word of any casualties.

THE TRAVELERS said some diplomatic sources in Cairo had confirmed general information on the attempted coup, but their versions differed in detail. Nothing had been published in Cairo about it.

The informants said rumors about the coup attempt have circulated in Cairo for more than a week.

According to the reports brought out Saturday, the attempted coup was timed for 5:30 p.m. Oct. 12, the first Thursday night of the holy month of Ramadan, when most of the Egyptian cabinet was scheduled to attend evening prayers at the Al Hussein mosque.

The British Broadcasting Corp., which also reported the coup attempt, said the rebel officers were protesting what was described as Egypt's failure to wage full scale war against Israel. The BBC report said the rebels also objected to Egypt's proposed union with Libya.

AN EGYPTIAN army captain, one of the rebel leaders, was reported to have harangued a crowd outside Al Hussein mosque, denouncing Sadat's close ties with Libya and calling for war with Israel. He was arrested.

None of the reports reaching Beirut gave the names of any of the leaders. There was no indication of top level involvement in the coup attempt, or any mass support of it.

Toll rises to 4,000 in Uganda's purge

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan sources, including exiles in several East African countries, estimate that 3,000 military personnel and 1,000 civilians have been killed since President Idi Amin took power in a coup 21 months ago. They say thousands more have been beaten, detained or intimidated.

The sources say Amin is steadily purging the country of African intellectuals as well as religious and tribal opponents considered potential threats to the Kampala military regime.

AMIN'S AIM is to eliminate any possible nucleus of future opposition and he may be near that goal, the sources say.

On the surface, life in Kampala is close to normal following the defeat of anti-Amin guerrillas who invaded from Tanzania a month ago. Military guards have been withdrawn from government offices and road blocks have been dismantled.

But the Ugandans, drawing on reports received from Uganda, picture the country as deeply dislocated by a campaign to consolidate a dictatorship in which Uganda's Moslem minority is dominant. They say:

—Hundreds of shops are closed in the exodus of noncitizen Asians ordered by Amin, producing shortages in consumer items from salt and sugar to shoes and toothpaste. Fewer than 10 shops were reported still open in Mbale, a town of 15,000.

—Departure of the Asians who operated most of Uganda's small businesses has thrown as many as 75,000 Africans out of work. Many employes have left towns to live with relatives on rural family plots.

—In some African villages, only women and children remain. The men have been rounded up by soldiers or have fled into the bush. A new decree giving troops powers to arrest without warrants has only legalized the already chaotic security conditions.

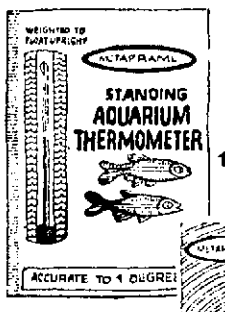

—Many schools are closed or holding half day sessions because Asian teachers, along with American and European volunteers, have left the country. Some industrial plants are preparing to close whenever machinery breaks down because repairmen are no longer available.

—Local government has virtually stopped functioning in some districts.

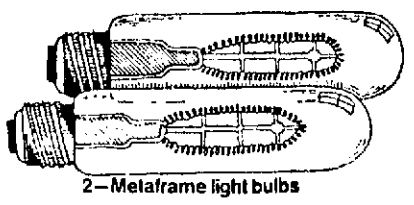

—A secret network of soldier spies has undermined discipline in the army. Soldiers are encouraged to go over their officers' heads and take complaints personally to Amin.

MIDNIGHT CENSUS FOR VAGABONDS

LONDON (AP) — As millions of Britons slept snug in their beds in the chilly October weather early Saturday, volunteers carried out a nationwide census of tramps and vagrants sleeping out.

In London, 1,500 volunteers checked park benches, shop doorways and derelict buildings, discreetly shining torches and trying not to waken the sleepers. Similar surveys were made right up to 4 a.m., in Glasgow, Edinburg, Liverpool, Birmingham, Leeds, Cardiff and other major British cities.

A spokesman for the St. Mungo Trust, which carried out the census, said: "The aim is to help us know where mobile medical units and advice centers are needed."

No figures were immediately available from the census.

Russ relax emigration for Jews

MOSCOW (UPI) — In what appears to be a loosening of the controversial higher education tax laws on emigrating degree holders, 60 more Jewish families will be allowed to leave for Israel without paying, Soviet sources said Saturday.

The latest figure brought to 139 the number of Jewish families who have been told since Wednesday that they can leave without reimbursing the state for their free schooling.

The 60 families included 30 in Kishinev, capital of Moldavia, and 30 in Moscow. The sources did not say how much tax had been waived.

Known fees waived for 59 other families totaled more than $500,000.

Permission for 30 other Jewish families to leave the Soviet Union without paying the "education tax" was granted by authorities Friday.

THE waivers coincided with the signing in Washington of a Soviet-American trade agreement designed to boost trade between the two nations to $1.5 billion annually by 1975.

Soviet officials said last week the law would be used flexibly on an individual basis.

A Soviet educator said, "We shall use a differentiated approach." He implied the applicant's state of health and his financial straits also would be considered.

The law calls for graduated payments to reimburse the country for the estimated cost of an emigrant's free higher education, which could be as high as $30,000 for a doctor of sciences, the highest Soviet academic degree.

Although the law became effective Aug. 3, the decree has yet to be published. Communist spokesmen have said it will appear soon.

BEFORE the waivers began, Moscow Jews criticized the law as "cruel and unjust" and urged Soviet authorities to "abolish it or at least review it."

They said Soviet specialists with university diplomas repay their education by labor within five or six years after graduation. They also said "although the decree imposes a levy on all people leaving the Soviet Union, it is virtually directed against Jews as the only nationality leaving the country in considerable numbers."

May Co's merriest Christmas plan!

For the first time, we're offering our Santa Sticker program to all of our charge account customers. What does this mean? That you can defer payment for any purchase made from right now through December 31st, until next February!

How does it work? Just put a Santa Sticker on any charge sales slip purchase that you want to defer. Then, you won't even see the bill until your regular statement date in February 1973. And there'll be no interest or carrying charges added. It's just like you didn't make your purchase until February. This way, the Christmas season stays jolly, and so do you. Thanks to May Co's Santa Sticker program.

How do you get them? Right now all our regular charge customers are receiving Santa Stickers in their October statements. You can get them by calling the May Co credit office. Tell them you want to open an account and receive your Santa Stickers, too. That easy! What? You don't have an account? Here's a quick application for you to fill out and send in.

'Red abbot' a problem for Vatican

By BARRY JAMES

ROME (UPI) — Under the glittering mosaics of one of the world's most famous churches, a mild-mannered, pacifist abbot grapples with the modern world and its problems.

The Vatican finds him "uncomfortable" and is trying to have him deposed, according to sources there.

Nonetheless, Dom Giovanni Franzoni, the 44-year-old Benedictine abbot of St. Paul's Outside-the-Walls, draws more people in Rome on a Sunday than anyone except Pope Paul VI.

On average, 2,000 to 3,000 persons attend his noon mass. They crowd all around the altar while a guitar-led choir of teen-agers prompts the singing. Anyone can go to the microphone and say a prayer.

From the pulpit, Franzoni attacks the Vietnam War, Italian military spending or the fascist-era concordat that still rules Italian-Vatican relations.

HE INSISTS that Roman Catholics must regard Communists as fellow human beings rather than enemies. Detractors call him "the red abbot."

Traditionlist Catholics and neofascists sometimes turn up at his services to jeer or provoke a fight.

Franzoni has formed a "lay community" of several hundred young people and workers, who study third world problems and Italian politics along with the Bible.

He supports conscientious objectors in a nation where they are banned by law and was pelted with rotten fruit when he addressed a meeting of war resisters from all over Europe.

Franzoni went on a hunger strike to protest the Indo-Pakistan war. He supports a dissident magazine called COM, which is highly critical of the Vatican. He caused right-wing protests by saying that Italy's annual military parade through Rome is a waste of money.

When St. Paul's basilica was built, it really was "outside the walls." But today the church stands in the midst of dreary housing developments. Franzoni has ordered his 40 monks out of the cloister and into the city, among the slumbs and the apartment blocks.

Vatican sources said Franzoni's radical behaviour might be overlooked in an ordinary priest or bishop far away from Rome, but not in the Pope's own backyard; not in an abbot who holds the rank of bishop and is in charge of such a prominent monastic community.

AS A RESULT, the sources said, Archbishop Augustin Mayer, head Benedictine from West Germany, has sought Franzoni's ouster.

Although Franzoni was elected abbot for life in 1964, subject to a revision every 10 years, some Vatican sources say that Mayer intends to replace him as abbot with his own secretary, the Rev. Giuseppe Nardin, 40.

"We feel as though we are under accusation, but there is no clear motive for accusing us, nor do we know exactly who is doing the accusing," Franzoni said.

In the ancient basilica, Franzoni's supporters accuse the Vatican of "repression," and sing a modern song: "We Shall Overcome."

TWA to reorganize Nigeria Airways

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — The Nigerian government signed an agreement Saturday with Trans World Airlines empowering the American company to reorganize Nigeria Airways into "an efficient and profitable airline by international standards."

The agreement will aim at improving the financial situation of the Nigerian corporation as well as its general efficiency.

But unemployment is still 30 per cent

Refineries pollute Carribean islands

Editor's Note: For the Puerto Rican and Virgin Islander the yearning was for more jobs, better pay, a better way of life. So the government lured industry to the Caribbean, and while some promises have come true, the specter of air and water pollution stalks the "Islands of the Sun."

By BEN FUNK
Associated Press Writer

On the south coast of Puerto Rico, sulfur dioxide smoke belches incessantly from a forest of smokestacks in a petrochemical complex. Riding the tradewinds to the northwest, it shrouds the mountains in acrid blue mist.

Filling the canyons and pouring through the passes, the clouds reach the large city of Mayaguez, 90 airline miles away.

On tiny St. Croix in the nearby U.S. Virgin Islands, an oil refinery and an aluminum plant spill tons of pollutants into the air.

Island governments, promising a better standard of living for impoverished masses, are luring "dirty industry" to the Caribbean in a growing tide.

"The big developers and industrialists promised us 15 years ago that the creation of one petrochemical complex here would generate 100,000 jobs," said Dr. Maximo J. Ceraime-Vivas, chairman of the University of Puerto Rico Department of Marine Sciences and the island's No. 1 pollution fighter.

"As of the last report to the government for 1971, the sum total of all jobs created by all the petrochemical industries here, including executives, was 3,153. Somebody owes us 97,000 jobs."

BUT THE Puerto Rico Planning Board claims 110,000 jobs have been created in the past 15 years by the petrochemical industries and other businesses which sprouted because of the oil boom.

Dr. Edward L. Towle of St. Thomas, president of the Caribbean Conservation Association, adds that, "Tourism is our basic economy. It hangs on clean water and beaches, sports fishing and sailing. But a wide area of the Caribbean is headed for environmental disaster.

"St. Croix gets oil spills two to three times a week when tankers hit submerged objects or crash into wharves. The big spills get the publicity, but it's the constant day-to-day seepage that is ruining our waters. You might call it death on the installment plan."

People lucky enough to have jobs are happy with the industrial revolution. For the first time, they have little concrete block homes that will not blow away in a hurricane. They buy used cars and TV sets. But, despite the migratory valve to New York and other cities on the mainland, Puerto Rico's rate of unemployment is still stuck at 30 per cent.

MANY ARE deeply worried as they witness the passing of a gentler way of life, see the beauty of the sea disappear in clouds of silt and toxic smokestacks utterly alien to Caribbean landscapes.

Despite warnings by crusaders like Ceraime and Towle that the fate of the islands rests on switching to clean enterprises with greater payrolls, island governments continue their competition for still more heavy industry, offering tax incentives and low production costs.

When Puerto Rico's Operation Bootstrap was launched two decades ago, Teodoro Moscoso was named the first head of the Economic Development Administration. He landed the first petrochemical complex, established by the Commonwealth Oil Refining Co. (CORCO). Today Moscoso is CORCO's chairman of the board.

"Puerto Rico has a very grave socio-economic problem," he said in an interview. "We don't want a dead environment, but we have to do a lot of compromising. We have to live with the industry.

"Compared with the need for jobs on this island our natural resources aren't worth a hill of beans. We have no mineral resources, no forest reserves, no great plains for agriculture. All we have is people, 800 to the square mile."

DOZENS OF refineries ring the 1,700-mile long Caribbean, receiving crude oil by tankers from Africa, South America, the Middle East and elsewhere for low-cost refining.

Now plans are under way to funnel huge amounts of Alaskan North Slope crude oil to 80-square mile St. Croix when the controversy over the Alaska pipeline is settled.

The Amerada Hess Corp. of New York has increased the size of its St. Croix refinery 11 times to 440,000 barrels daily in anticipation of Alaskan oil. It also has tried, unsuccessfully so far, to obtain government permission for a pipeline across Costa Rica.

Challenges by environmentalists have brought an indefinite postponement of the Alaska pipeline, but Jean Larsen, a research scientist on St. Croix and a battle against further oil installations in the Virgin Islands, says Amerada Hess has obtained additional land to increase the St. Croix refinery capacity again to a total of 900,000 barrels daily by the time Alaskan oil arrives. A New York spokesman for the firm denied that such plans were definite at the present time.

But the company has deepened its channel to 65 feet in order to receive supertankers.

THE VIRGIN ISLANDS Refinery Corp., VIRC, now seeks government approval for another, $100 million plant on St. Croix.

Promoters of the refinery point to U.S. Treasury Department figures which they say show that new industries pay nearly 10 per cent of Puerto Rico's annual corporate tax revenues of $120 million.

The proponents say that industries which enjoyed tax exemptions prior to 1971 now pay $10 million a year in taxes. Puerto Rico's total annual government budget is about $1.2 billion.

The Virgin Islands Conservation Society demanded in a petition to the government that the residents of St. Croix be given the right to decide on further industrialization that "can so drastically affect the quality of life on the island." It also asked the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for a full investigation. No environmental impact statements have been filed.

The VIRC wants to build on Sandy Point, a peninsula ringed by sand beaches that jut out into blue Caribbean waters to enclose part of the harbor at Fredericksted, one of the cleanest and prettiest towns in the Caribbean.

The easterly trades, the VIRC contended, would carry its noxious gases away from the town. But Larsen said his tests proved that both winds and tides are extremely variable at Sand Point and Fredericksted would be doomed to catastrophic pollution.

IN PUERTO RICO, the first refinery was built by CORCO on the south coast near Guayanilla to process 20,000 barrels of Venezuelan crude oil daily. Then Union Carbide moved in alongside CORCO, Gulf Oil established a complex near San Juan, Phillips Petroleum at Guayama and Sun Oil at Ybucoa. Together the firms now refine 373,000 barrels daily.

As toxic wastes poured into air and water, the CORCO-Union Carbide area gradually turned into an industrial wasteland ringed by pollution-killed trees.

Hot oil affluents pour through two discharge canals into the Caribbean. Driven by tradewinds and ocean currents, they flow westward in a stinking black stream, hugging the shoreline. Nobody swims on this coast, nobody fishes.

Cerame said untreated wastes from the CORCO-Carbide complex cover 20 million square feet of Tallabea Bay bottom to an average thickness of almost two feet, weighing 1.3 billion tons. "The affluents are highly toxic," he said. "In portions of the bay, oxygen has been totally consumed."

A STUDY performed for the Commonwealth Department of Health concluded that the waste output of the complex was equivalent to that of a city of 540,000 inhabitants.

Inside the complex, roaring fires reach skyward from cracking towers as waste gases are burned by satellite industries feeding off byproducts of the oil refining process. In Guayanilla, a city of 16,000 just downwind, the heat of the flames can be felt.

Ten miles westward,

Passing of gentler way of life

along the coast, Cerame parked his car at Guanica Bay, once a resort area of spectacular beauty that was destroyed by a chemical plant. Discharges by the firm have left the once clear, sparkling water as black as ink. It is so acid it corrodes nails on boats.

The firm that did the damage packed up and moved out after the 17 years of tax freedom given to all incoming industries. Now another firm has taken over the plant and resumed limited operations.

As Cerame climbed out of his car, he was spotted by a group of fishermen who quickly surrounded him. He is a hero to the fishermen. He agreed to act as expert witness when 125 of them filed suit against CORCO-Union Carbide for irreparable damages to their fishing waters.

In its ruling, the court said, "These are materialistic considerations that upset the spirit, of course, but the right of the fishermen must yield to the necessities of Puerto Rico's industrial development."

The Puerto Rico Planning Board says that while some few people might be hurt by industrialization, the vast majority of the island's residents benefit from it.

To prove its claim, the board points to figures which say per capita income in Puerto Rico was $1,714 in 1971-72, up from $1,574 for the preceding year.

STUNG BY persistent attacks from Cerame and his associates, a group of industrial plant owners calling themselves the Guaypao Conservation Association, commissioned an environmental study of the area surrounding the CORCO-Union Carbide operation.

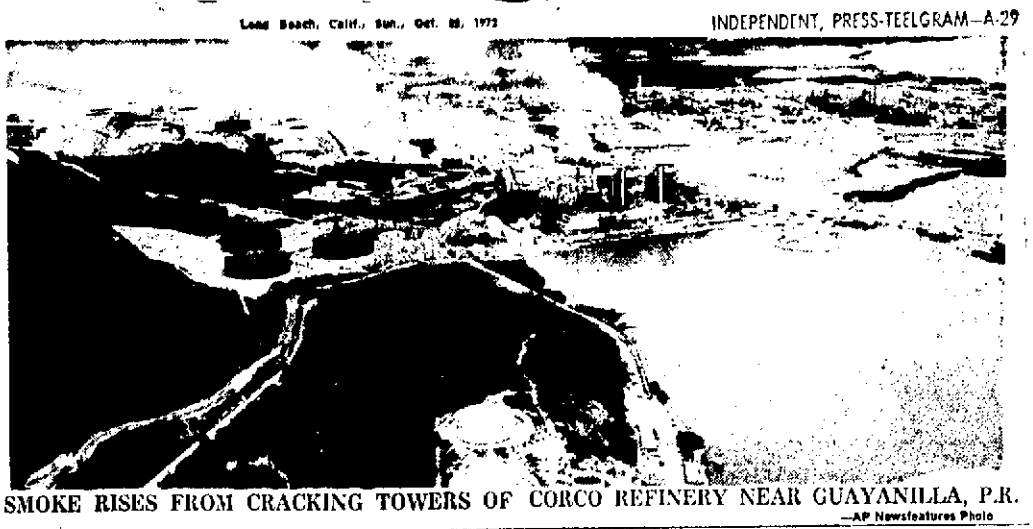

"During recent years," said the report that followed," "there have been complaints concerning the role of industry in degradation of the environment . . . Much of the indictment has come from fanatics. None has to date come from government enforcing agencies."

But the report went on to say that "excessively high and unhealthy levels of various air pollutants" existed within the complex, that water pollution levels were very high, and that the quality of air in the city of Guayanilla would fail to meet U.S. public health standards.

"And now," Cerame said, "we are looking down the barrel of copper mining in Puerto Rico."

The Kennecott Copper Corp. and American Metal Climax, Inc., both U.S. companies, are seeking to strip mine 70 square miles of the mountains of Central Puerto Rico. Again, the government backs the project, but the image of mining as a despoiler has brought a flood of protest and delays in granting applications for mining leases.

In a recent seminar, secretary Alister Hughes of the Caribbean Conservation Association said that if industrialists would drop their active hostility and join the fight to save the environmennt, it would be a wise investment in their own futures.

Second phase of Egypt's oil pipeline starts

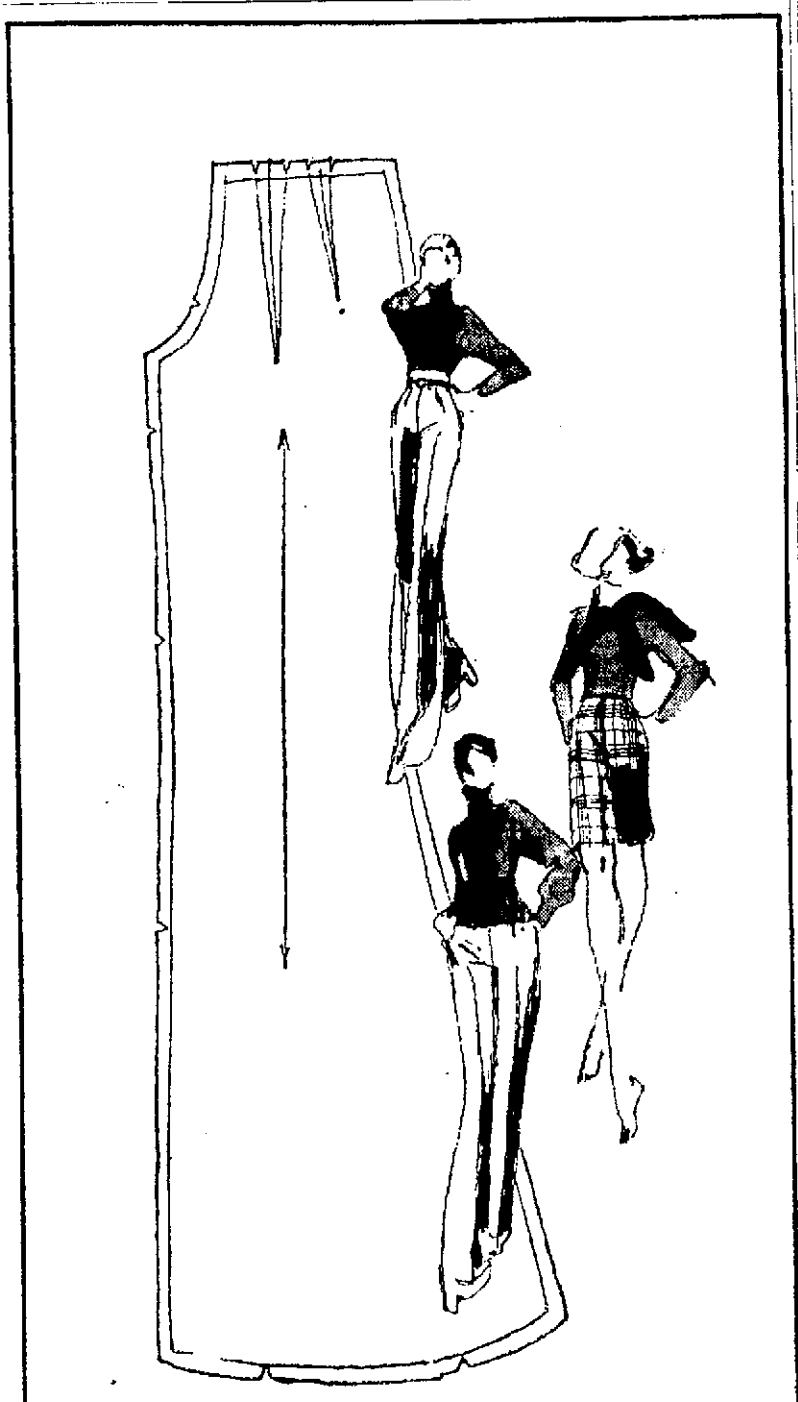

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The second main phase of preparation for the construction of Egypt's crude oil transit pipeline has been put into motion with the signing of an agreement between the Egyptian General Petroleum Corp. and the Compagnie Francaise des Petroles, it was reported here Saturday.

The Middle East Economic Survey, a weekly news bulletin specializing in oil affairs, said the agreement was signed in Cairo on Oct. 12.

The $330-million project calls for the building of two 42 inch pipelines running parallel between a point just west of Egypt's Mediterranean port of Alexandria and Suez. It is to carry 80 million tons annually of Westbound Persian Gulf Oil, by-passing the blocked Suez Canal.

USSR industrial output up 6.7%

MOSCOW (UPI) — Industrial output in the Soviet Union in the first nine months of the year was 6.7 per cent greater than in the same period last year, the Central Statistical Review Board said Saturday.

GREAT PLACE TO LIVE—NOT VISIT

Due for re-sanding

Miami–Beach just isn't there now

By FRANK EIDGE

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — A lot of people lately have found Miami Beach a great place to live but a dull place to visit.

It used to be the other way around — before the ocean sucked away much of the beach and high-rise hotels and condominiums encroached on what was left. Now many tourists find the seaside resort is mostly concrete and gilt that is showing tarnish around the edges.

The skinny island has a swelling tide of permanent residents, but its leaders feel that while live-in folks are fine, Joe Tourist still pays 40 per cent of the bills around here.

Playing host to both national political conventions last summer finally forced all factions guiding the city's fortunes to take an honest look at what Miami Beach is now and where it's going.

Instead of the riches they expected, the political conventions cost the resort money in loss of vacationers and rejected bookings for nonpolitical conventions.

Miami Beach has not fallen on hard times but the summer of '72 jolted many leaders into the realization that tourist prosperity is not around the corner unless the city changes with the times.

"WE'VE BEEN riding on our reputation for several years now," Miami Beach Mayor Chuck Hall said. "We have to have more than that."

The resort leaders are launching an all-out drive to regain Miami Beach's reputation as a leading tourist mecca of the world.

The No. 1 ingredient needed, they decided, was more sand — lots of it — to cover an area 15 miles long and 200 feet wide.

Erosion, helped by what Hall calls "the politics of the past," has robbed Miami Beach of much of its shoreline sand. The city limits portion of the ocean front is only seven miles long, but it is impossible to walk the distance on the beach. Many large hotels, bracketed by groins, have practically no beach at all.

The Army Corps of Engineers has finally settled on the most workable plan — dredge sand from the bottom, pump it onto the shore and keep replenishing it faster than the ocean carries it off. To put the beach back on Miami Beach will cost at least $28 million initially, and take about five years.

"But think of it," Hall said, "a 200-foot wide beach stretching for 15 miles — it will be beautiful, utterly incredible."

SAND WON'T solve all Miami Beach's tourist problems. Hall, who operates a travel agency in private life, and the hotel owners are aware that Miami Beach has become a haven for old folks.

At South Beach, a decaying area of yesteryear, reside the Social Security set and other low-income pensioners. To the north, the richer senior citizens populate the high-rise apartments and condominiums.

In between is Miami Beach's famed hotel row. Many of the older hotels are being pushed out of business by the high rises. The remaining hotels, the biggest concentration of such in the world, represent a huge investment, estimated somewhere over the billion-dollar mark.

These establishments are surviving by working hard to land conventions and offering package economy deals to honeymooners.

"There are 160,000 tourist accommodations — more than in all of Europe — along this coast from Miami Beach to Palm Beach," a hotel spokesman claimed. "That's a huge investment to protect.

"Tourism is the sixth largest industry in the country — $3 billion — and we're not getting our share."

THERE WAS a time, right after World War II, when Miami Beach was one of the top glamor resorts of the country. But gone are those "good old days" when the young thronged Collins Avenue, or waited in long lines at 4 a.m. to catch sight of latesupping celebrities at Wolfie's Restaurant or all-night cafeterias; when black market money and accumulated overseas military pay flowed like high tide through Indian Creek to the cabana bookies and plush illegal casinos.

Those were the days when they rushed new hotels to completion under flood lights, at a cost, extravagant in those times, as high as $23,000 a room. One large hostelry which went bankrupt was found to be carrying 13 levels of mortgages against the building.

Nowadays the big money is going into building high-rise apartments. There hasn't been a major new hotel erected since 1966. The hotelmen look with disdain on the towering apartments and condominiums.

"They don't improve the economy," one hotelman observed. "We pay heavy taxes and support hundreds of businesses. We buy in large quantities nearly everything we need from local people or local distributors.

"Senior citizens throttle a community. They don't want tourists and conventions around disturbing them."

The rise of high-rise apartment houses — 127 in the last five years alone — has brought a dramatic change to Miami Beach. In the seven-by-one-mile resort city where a million or more persons have gathered each winter since World War II, less than 20,000 were permanent residents right after the war. Now the permanent population numbers about 90,000.

THE MAYOR and some other leaders see this as a good thing.

"They're showing the world that this is a good place to live," Hall said. "Besides, unlike some, I think the high rises are pretty. It's too bad, though, that some were built right on the beach."

Banker Bart Goldberg, looking at his bank's figures, said that "the dollar volume of the tourist business remains as high as ever but it is now spread out over the full year and represents about 40 per cent of the economy, compared to 60 per cent a few years ago.

"I think we need to stabilize tourism and achieve a balance," Goldberg said. "We can't afford to lose the tourist industry."

All sources agreed that foreign competition, coupled with the modern ease of swift air travel, is siphoning off Miami Beach's tourists faster than the Atlantic is sucking away the sand.

"But Europe will never match our climate," Hall said. "We're got to add vital tourist attractions and get away from 'The City of Cement' tag some people have hung on us."

One hotelman put it differently.

"Tourists have changed," he said. "Nowadays they want stimulation, not a rest. They are more sophisticated and insist on value."

RESTORING the beach to a "glamor strip" wider than it ever was, is the major step toward luring tourists. In addition, Mayor Hall is pressing for bicycle pathways, hundreds of tennis courts and a garden-like beautification of causeways leading to the island and the major highways criss-crossing it.

"We're planning a 14-foot wide awning the length of Lincoln Road Mall with numerous sidewalk cafes selling the best food and drink, better than they have in Europe," the mayor said. "It will take a zoning change, but we'll do it.

"We're going to make Miami Beach an exciting place again for the young and the young at heart."

Vanishing crabs unsolved mystery

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — They're trying to solve a mystery at Fisherman's Wharf, the famed complex of fishing boats and restaurants that is one of the nation's biggest tourist "musts."

The mystery of the disappearing crab has perplexed both fishermen and scientists alike.

At the end of the crab season last June only about nine boats were working out of the wharf, bringing in a haul of about 320,000 pounds when combined with the other boats in the area.

For years the little boats had gone out the Golden Gate and brought back millions of pounds. In 1957 alone about nine million pounds were caught.

Then during the 1961 season the crab catch up and down the California coast was hard hit.

Dr. Harold G. Orcutt, laboratory supervisor at the Department of Fish and Game's facility in Menlo Park, says the decrease was "apparently due to natural cyclic patterns associated with changing natural oceanographic conditions."

In short, it had happened before.

BUT THE next year things weren't as easily dismissed. The catch in the Eureka area to the north increased: but not at San Francisco or the smaller ports of Monterey and Morro Bay.

Eureka is now the center for the California crab catch, a distinction once held by the San Francisco area which, before the turn of the century, provided employment for 90 per cent of the fishermen in the state.

The scientists at the Menlo Park lab do have a leading "suspect" in the case, however. All signs point to pollution, but no one can prove it.

"We just can't prove it and the decline in the population has not been supported by direct cause and effect relationships from natural or man caused factors," Orcutt said.

Walter Dahlstrom, an associate marine biologist at the lab and acknowledged by his colleagues as a "crab expert," thinks pollution is causing the problem but, again, can't prove it.

Phil Swartzell, also a marine biologist, points out that since governmental agencies have taken steps against pollution, shrimp and some bottom-feeding fish are being caught in more abundance.

"San Francisco Bay serves as a nursery for the young crabs who go out the gate later," Orcutt said. "We've been holding our own in the pollution fight recently, and that's a big step right there."

THE CRITICAL period in a crab's life, Dahlstrom said, occurs during this time in the "nursery," during the larval stage.

"Although there may be millions of them, even billions, they are subjected to all types of pollution," he said. "And if survival isn't good we don't have any strong year classes coming into season."

A "year class" born during the spring, Dahlstrom said, contributes to the fishing two or three years later outside the Gate, so the current crisis can be traced years back.

Dahlstrom thinks the San Francisco crab catch might come back in about two years.

"We've been having a good survival rate on the young crabs we've been tagging and these will contribute to the population growth," he said.

FRANK DAMATO would like to see the mystery solved. He has a bigger stake in the puzzle than even the scientists.

He recalled that once the San Francisco crab fleet numbered 70 boats at the start of the season.

Last season there were only about 20 boats at the beginning of the season and the fleet thinned out rapidly.

L.B. priest freed, deported by Filipinos

Father Bruno Hicks, the American Catholic priest imprisoned for three weeks under Philippines martial law, was reported resting in Hawaii Saturday after being deported by Filipino authorities.

The priest's mother, Mrs. Mary Hicks, of Long Beach, and a spokesman for for Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Long Beach, confirmed that the Franciscan missionary was deported from the Philippines on Thursday.

Father Bruno, 43, and a Franciscan colleague, Father John (Vernon) Peterson, 35, of Portland, Ore., who also was deported, were scheduled to fly to San Francisco this evening.

They were imprisoned after their missionary post in the Philippines province of Negros Oriental was raided under martial law proclaimed Sept. 23 by Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos.

The radio station headed by Father Bruno and run by a Filipino staff in that province was closed down, as were other media operations in the Philippines when Marcos announced he was cracking down on a budding Communist uprising.

Bruno had been critical of Marcos' government's handling of foreign aid and its treatment of that nation's poor.

Married during trial

Couple pleads guilty in slaying

A couple accused of the torture murder of a Santa Ana secretary, whose nude body was found beside a Garden Grove church Dec. 23, 1969, pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter.

It was a negotiated plea and thus ended their trial for murder before Santa Ana Superior Court Judge Ronald Crookshank.

Bertram Lebhar, 43, and his wife Theresa, 24, who were married in court during their trial, were handed suspended terms of from one to 15 years in prison, with county jail time for a year, as condition to probation.

Crookshank agreed to allow credit for time served in jail, where they have been held since last February.

They admitted the charge involving the death of Mrs Janet Summerlin, 26, of Santa Ana.

In another court, Mrs Rosemarie Jayne was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter in connection with the death of her husband, Jerald, 33, last March 25.

Mrs. Jayne, 29-year-old mother of three, was ordered to sentencing Oct. 31. The husband was shot fatally during a family argument in their home, 12352 Beck St., Garden Grove.

France's warplanes armed with A-bombs

PARIS (AP) — France's jet fighters have been equipped with tactical nuclear bombs of 15 kilotons each but the weapons will not actually enter service until early 1973, the newspaper Le Monde said Saturday.

Man knifed to death in L.B. bar

A man was stabbed to death following a commotion in a Long Beach bar early Saturday, and police are searching for two suspects in connection with the murder. Police reported Saturday that the victim, identified only as George Chuck, Jr., possibly of Long Beach, died shortly after receiving two chest wounds in the Red Lyon bar, 2020 E. Anaheim St. Bartender James Busch told police there were approximately 20 patrons in the bar at the time of the 1:57 a.m. stabbing, but they all left shortly after the incident.

BUSCH SAID he was taking up glasses in preparation for closing and had his back to the victim when he heard a commotion in the hallway near the rear exit.

He told police he turned around to see two white males fleeing through the back door as Chuck was staggering out of the hallway, bleeding profusely.

Busch described one suspect as being in his mid-20s, approximately 5-feet, 8-inches tall with a medium build, medium-length, dark hair and wearing a large waist length jacket and brownish-red trousers.

He said the other suspect was possibly in his early 30s, about 6-feet tall, thin, with medium-length, black hair, and was wearing a white T-shirt and blue Levis.

THE BARTENDER told police he had overheard a conversation shortly before the stabbing in which the victim said, "If you're going to show it to me, show it from the other end."

But Busch said he did not think there was a problem and paid little attention to the conversation between Chuck and some other customers. Busch also told police that he did not know if the men talking to Chuck were involved in the stabbing.

He said a female customer had been talking to Chuck just prior to the incident, but left the bar before the stabbing occured.

BUSCH SAID the woman called out to Chuck as she left saying, "Come on, Brooklyn, let's go," but Chuck did not follow. The bartender told police he did not know either Chuck or the woman who had been talking to him.

Investigating officers took glasses and a pool cue from the bar, hoping to find some fingerprints, a police department spokesman said.

Chuck, described as a white male in his mid-20s, approximately 5-feet, 10-inches tall, 175 pounds, with medium length, dark brown hair and a mustache, was pronounced dead at the scene.

The body was taken to the Los Angeles County Morgue where it was identified Saturday.

Summary of Secret Witness rewards cases

SECRET WITNESS

As part of these newspapers' Secret Witness program, summaries of all cases in which rewards are offered are printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Thursday and Sunday. The summaries follow:

—a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone involved in the manufacture of hash oil. Long Beach police say that hash oil is a dark, tarry-like substance usually sold in quarter-ounce vials for $150 or more. Police further believe that there may be a criminal laboratory in Long Beach producing the new hallucinogenic drug said to be 50 times more potent than marijuana, from which the oil is derived as a concentrate.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Ernest Brown, 28, who was shot to death in an "execution style" slaying in an alley behind 740 E. Anaheim St. on last July 17. Passersby heard the gunfire and discovered Brown's body, shot three times in the body and once at close range behind the ear, lying face down alongside a cement block wall.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Mrs. Linda Sue Smit, 18, who was strangled in her Santa Ana apartment at 2919 Bristol Ave. on July 26, 1972. Mrs. Smit's body was discovered by her husband, Eric Smit, when he returned home from work at 11 a.m.

— Rewards totaling $4,000 will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Mrs. Velma Harris, 44, shot to death in her Long Beach home at 5020 Centralia St. on Aug. 17, 1971. Her body was discovered by her husband, Ralph K. Harris, 47, when he came home from work at 11 a.m. Mr. Harris has posted a $2,000 reward in the case, and this amount is being matched by the Secret Witness service.

—A $1,000 reward is being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Jan Marsh, 14, of Lynwood, who was strangled on the night of Nov. 3, 1969. Her body was found lying on a residential lawn in the 4100 block of Virginia Street in Lynwood early the following morning.

— A $7,000 reward, the largest thus far offered, is guaranteed for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers of Cyril and James Ball on Dec. 26, 1970. The father-and-son businessmen were shot numerous times in the head in an "execution type" slaying in their Long Beach sporting goods store at 345 Long Beach Blvd. shortly after 4 p.m. The killers took about $1,000 cash and more than 20 handguns before fleeing. Witnesses told police they saw three young men in or around the store at about the same time.

The first suspect was described as between 18 and 21 years old, 5 ft. 7 in. tall, weighing about 145 pounds, "curly and dirty" blond with shoulder-length hair. He wore glasses and had on a buckskin jacket with fringe on the back and blue jeans.

The second suspect was described as 25 to 30 years old, with short, wavy blond hair and "always smiling." He wore a tan coat and dark trousers. The third suspect was described as between 22 and 28 years of age, thin, with long brown straight hair and a full, bushy moustache. He wore dark clothing.

—A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrests and convictions of the members of a Long Beach area auto theft gang who steal cars from throughout the Southland and then, at one of a number of auto repair shops, strips them for parts.

—One thousand dollars are being offered as a reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Vicki Lynne Miller, 16, of Buena Park, who was bludgeoned to death in late October or early November of 1970. Her body was found in Coyote Creek about a mile from her home and a mile from her school on Nov. 15 of that year.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the men who fatally beat, tortured and burned disabled World War II veteran Clarence Huigar, 53, of 1386 Peterson Ave., after breaking into his home at about 10:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 19. Huigar died of his injuries 25 days later, on April 13. The men are described as Negroes in their mid-20s, one 6 ft. tall, weighing about 180 pounds, with a medium-length Afro hair-do, and the other 5 feet 4 inches, weighing about 150 pounds.

—A $2,000 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Mrs. Marguerite June Makeig, 50, shot in the head and killed when she returned to her home, 10608 Felson St., Bellflower, on the afternoon of Aug. 11, 1971. Mrs. Makeig had been shopping. When she walked into her living room, someone armed with a small-caliber handgun fired once, the bullet striking her in the head.

—Two thousand dollars are being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the men who killed Elliot C. Lawson, 38, during a hold-up at the Atlantic Inn, 1851 Atlantic Ave., at about 1:10 a.m. on July 16, 1971. The killer is described as a Negro, about 25 years old, 5-feet-7, 130 pounds, with a two-inch Afro hair-do. The man has a slender face, large eyes, a slender nose, and a smooth, medium complexion. He has a deep voice, is straight in posture and is well-groomed.

How you can be a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of other criminals. For this purpose, a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal, or the capture of a fugitive, in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information resulting in arrests and convictions in cases not published by Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. Do NOT give us your name. Or, write to Secret Witness at the following address: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name for yourself ... any name, as long as it's not your own ... and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.

Tear off and keep a corner of the last page, with the same code name and number on it. Mail your letter to "Secret Witness," P.O. Box 67, Long Beach 90844.

—A $2,000 reward is in effect for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of cab driver Michael A. Miller, 27, of Downey, who worked the night shift for the Southeast Taxi Co., Compton. Miller was found dead at about 11:20 June 8. He had been shot twice in the back of the head in the 200 block of East Reeve Street.

—A $2,500 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Independent, Press-Telegram pressman Frank M. Schiavone, 41, and his wife, Shirley, 44, who were shot from ambush May 9 upon returning to their home in Westminster after an evening out. Westminster police are seeking to question a man believed to have been the last person to have seen the Schiavones alive. The man was with them in Woody's Bar, Springdale Avenue and Garden Grove Boulevard, Westminster, shortly before they were murdered. He is described as a white man in his mid-20s to early 30s, from 5-feet-10 to 6-feet-1 in height, with wavy, dark brown hair, a medium-dark, olive complexion and a pock-marked square face with high cheekbones.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers of Long Beach auto wholesaler Robert Wilson Cogley, 44, shot to death in the parking lot of the Highway Center Liquor Store, Pacific Coast Highway and California Avenue, at 1:40 a.m. last Aug. 12. Cogley's killers are described as Negroes between 16 and 19 years old, and from 5-feet-7 to 5-feet-10 in height.

—A $2,000 reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of the killer of cab driver Donald Eugene Beard, 44, shot to death Dec. 24 in the 1200 block of Loma Vista Drive at about 4:20 a.m. Prior to his death, Beard told police a car containing five Negro men pulled up to the curb and that the man sitting on the front passenger's seat asked him how to get to Willow Street, aimed a pistol and fired.

14-year-old youth shot after dance

A 14-year-old Los Angeles youth was shot in the chest early Saturday as he left a dance at California State College, Dominguez Hills.

Cornel Jefferson Arterberry, of 1812 W. 94th St., was listed in fair condition at Harbor General Hospital shortly after the shooting occurred in the north parking lot on the campus.

Sheriff's deputies said the youth was leaving the Black Students' Union-sponsored dance at 12:23 a.m. when he was struck once in the right chest area by a bullet fired from a crowd.

Deputies at the scene dispersed a crowd of approximately 1,000 young persons without incident, but could find no motive for the shooting.

A Sheriff's Department spokesman said an investigation is being conducted, but there are no known suspects at this time.

For farm workers

Teamsters plan new drive

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A Teamsters Union official says his union will resume organizing efforts among farm workers after the November election because of the actions of farm union leader Cesar Chavez.

Einar Mohn, the Teamsters' western states leader, criticized Chavez' nationwide lettuce boycott.

"If he's going to continue going into markets, and he did it again today, and saying all lettuce not picked by his people is nonunion, then we're going to be fighting with him," Mohn said Friday.

About 70 per cent of California's iceberg lettuce is grown by farmers who signed contracts with the Teamsters two years ago.

The Teamsters later agreed that the United Farm Workers Union should have jurisdiction over field workers. The Teamsters retained the contracts it already had unless the growers volunteered to switch unions.

Mohn said any organizing drive will take place after the election so it will not confuse voters over proposition 22, the farm labor initiative.

"We oppose Proposition 22, just like Cesar and the AFL-CIO do," he said. "It's badly drafted and a very bad law from labor's standpoint."

No new leads in B of A robbery

BERKELEY (AP) — Police and FBI agents said they had no new leads Saturday in their search for five heavily armed men who escaped after robbing a Bank of America branch here and kidnaping a Washington man.

Police said the five men, armed with various weapons, wore stocking masks when they robbed the bank Friday of $1,088, then fled in a white van.

Officers said they later found the van's owner, Robert J. Johnson, 24 of Walla Walla, Wash., bound and gagged inside the van at Tilden Park several miles away.

Hearing set in Santa Ana

Fate of Orange Co. APCD in balance

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

A public hearing at Santa Ana Wednesday will focus on the fate of the Orange County Air Pollution Control District, target of former attacks by a three-man majority bloc of county supervisors.

The hearing will begin at 10:30 a.m. before the supervisors in their hearing room in the county administration building, 515 N. Sycamore St., and a packed house is promised.

It was triggered by Supervisor Ralph B. Clark of Anaheim, who said the APCD should be moved to the health department and Fitchen returned to his primary duties as agricultural commissioner.

As before, APCD Director William Fitchen appears more concerned with the district than with himself.

He admits he is the vortex of displeasure of the three supervisors, and that he has taken his whacks from others, too.

To him, it's part of the price of being a public official who is "out in front. That's where they can shoot at you."

He added: "and they do."

Latest to jump into the Fitchen fray is City Councilman Jack Green of Huntington Beach, who called for Fitchen's replacement after citing a bill of particulars thusly:

"Orange County isn't doing anything. It does no adequate job of monitoring smog levels."

LATER HE added: "Orange County is kidding itself that it doesn't have much smog. It doesn't even have the equipment to know."

And still later, Green complained that the county has "only three" monitoring stations and that none are in the coastal area.

With a relish, Fitchen fired up a fusillade: no one can criticize the district "for not doing anything, because it is."

Fitchen made no reply to personal attacks, but he defended the district with a fervor for which he has become famous.

He said he respects Green's right to a personal opinion of me, but his comments about the district are "very unfair and are not based on fact."

"MR. GREEN is not familiar with our operations, and to our knowledge has done nothing to acquaint himself with them," Fitchen declared.

Then he set out "the facts:"

Air monitoring by itself does nothing to relieve air pollution.

The county began air monitoring in 1955, expanded the operation in 1968, and lately has replaced all major monitoring instruments in three permanent stations and one mobile station.

Orange County's air monitoring satisfies the California Air Resources Board, which requires only two; and the federal government, which requires three stations. Each station represents a capital investment of $80,000 and requires a technician to operate.

The Environmental Protection Agency requires that the monitoring be done in areas of highest contamination. Orange County does that, he said.

The California Association of Port Authorities, comprising all of the state's major seaports, has voted unanimously to oppose Proposition 20, the "Coastal Zone Conservation Act," on the Nov. 7 ballot.

The group said the initiative measure, if passed, would do "vast and irreparable damage to the multibillion dollar port system in California.

THE ADOPTED resolution followed an analysis by a committee of port attorneys that the measure would bring the state's port lands under the jurisdiction of a statewide and regional committees "composed of persons who are neither responsible to elective officials nor the citizenry of the State of California."

The eight member ports, including those of Long Beach and Los Angeles, voted to oppose the proposition because:

"... this measure by threatening to halt virtually all needed port construction for a period of up to four years poses the danger of vast and irreparable damage to the multibillion port system of California and to the entire transportation of this state, thereby causing untold harm o the state's entire economy."

Bernard J. Caughlin, Port of Los Angeles general manager, was elected first president of the association and Loren T. (Tip) Cornish, director of Port Administration, Long Beach,was reelected treasuror.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN shippers engaged in West Coast-Far East trade routes are meeting to avoid a rate war that could result in chaos on transpacific sea routes.

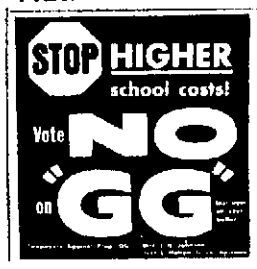

The problem being tackled is that there are more ships to carry cargo than there is cargo to be carried.

The talks are being held in San Francisco with 23 ocean carriers particpating.

THE SECOND MAN to put foot on the moon, Col. Edwin E. (Buzz) Aldrin, is one of 11 leaders in science, industry, and government meeting this weekend at the University of Southern California's Marine Science Center at the Isthmus on Catalina Island. The symposium is being held to promote the efficient exchange of technology between space and marine environments.

Conducting some of the seminars and discussions was Dr. Richard B. Tibby of San Pedro, director of the university's island facility.

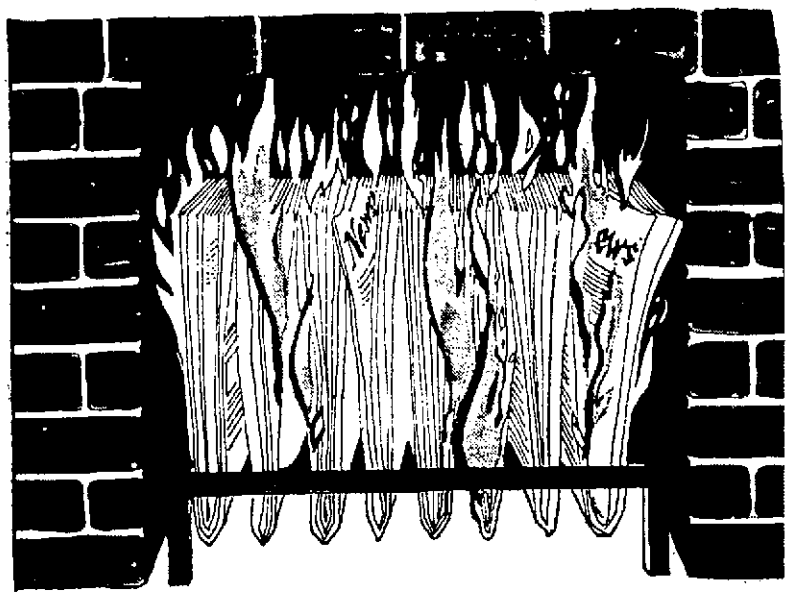

HARRY BRIDGES president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, is expected to draw a capacity audience when he addresses the Los Angeles-Long Beach Propeller club Wednesday at the Ports O' Call Restaurant in San Pedro.

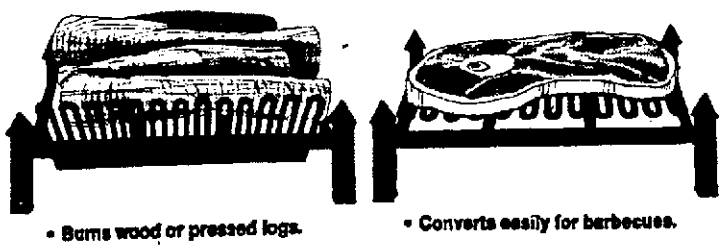

Make yesterday's papers today's burning issues.

The new Elizabeth Burner is a hearth-warming discovery. By using a unique movable grate, you can burn wood or pressed logs for a cozy hearth fire. With an easy change of the grids it becomes a friendly indoor barbecue. And for a real innovation just move the adaptable grate to convert discarded newspapers into a very cheerful fire with very little effort. A great way to dispose of old newspapers and save on fuel costs, too. Easy to install, to use, to clean. The Elizabeth Burner.

Actor Ken Maynard 'better' in hospital

Former cowboy actor Ken Maynard was "considerably better and stronger" Saturday, a Los Angeles hospital spokesman said.

Maynard, 77, was hospitalized for dehydration last Sunday and is expected to remain in the hospital at least 10 more days, a spokesman said.

Promises, Promises

Company executive (Pat Lang) finds office girl (Erin Boyd) more refreshing than the refreshments at the firm's Christmas party in Long Beach Civic Light Opera's presentation of the musical Promises, Promises. The production will be staged in the Jordan High School auditorium Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons for three weekends, beginning Friday.

'Gloria' is going to surprise everyone

NEW YORK — "Archie Bunker and Edith are going to be surprised — America's going to be surprised." Sally Struthers said, after stepping out of a long black limousine and sweeping into a long pink suite at the Waldorf Towers befitting a millionaire.

"Archie's little girl, as American as apple pie — and I have everything hanging out and flopping, and I'm scared of what my mother's going to say!"

The delightfully funny little blonde who plays Gloria in "All in the Family" was fearing the result of her next movie, "The Getaway." She plays a veterinarian's restless wife who flirts outrageously with a bank robber who comes to her husband to get a bullet removed.

"My mother in Portland, Ore.," Sally said, "has not got over that sex scene I did with Jack Nicholson in 'Five Easy Pieces.'

"She called me in Texas on this picture," Sally recounted, "and asked me, 'What did you shoot today? . . No nude scenes? . . . I said, 'No, but I undressed? . . . 'But Sally, I thought you told me you wouldn't . . . 'Mother, I got to break this image of the sweet All-American Girl' . . . Dead silence . . . 'But you promised!" . . .

"It was like that when she went to see 'Five Easy Pieces.' I offered to go with her. She said, 'No, if I don't like it, I don't want anybody to see me with you.' She went in dark glasses and raincoat. I waited for her afterward. It was like Death Row. She came into the house, walked right past me and shut the door! A mother," concluded Sally, sipping some champagne after a hard day giving interviews and posing for a fashion layout, "is always a mother. She has a marvelous sense of humor. I get my humor from her. But if I do something that's a little off-color the neighbors give her the arched eyebrow and she has to answer to the relatives."

Sally's been struggling to change her image from the sweet daughter for months now. On the program, too.

"CARROLL O'CONNOR had a July 4 party. Everybody'd been imbibing. I went up to Norman Lear and I said, "Uncle Norman, do you like the way I look?" I was glamored up. He said, 'Sure, Sally girl,' but when I reminded him of it, he said I was too glamorous to be Archie and Edith's daughter.

Sally vowed to me that she was going to write a show for the program in which she'd try on all the makeup in the store where Gloria works.

'Hanging Out'

King Vidor—his career is legend

PASO ROBLES (UPI) — Unheralded and unknown, King Vidor and his wife Florence arrived in Hollywood in their Model T Ford in 1915 with only 50 cents between them.

Vidor, a native of Galveston, Tex., had several small film credits at the time — nearly all documentaries on small town life and all made in Texas on borrowed money.

VIDOR and Florence, his boyhood sweetheart, took jobs as Hollywood extras and he also worked as a general handyman as he tried to sell his talents as a director.

His first break came from First National Studios which gave him a contract for a simple short about an old man and a boy on a Mississippi shanty boat titled The Jack-Knife Man.

But his now famous style of subdued realism did not come out until 1925 when he made The Big Parade.

His other top movies until his retirement from feature films in 1959 included Billy the Kid, Our Daily Bread, Duel in the Sun, Fountainhead, Ruby Gentry, Man Without a Star, and the epic War and Peace.

VIDOR, now 78, lives on his 1,248-acre ranch near this central California city — a perfect setting for the man considered the master of the American rural film.

Happiest Girl

Donna Fargo, whose recordings of Happiest Girl in the Whole U.S.A. and Funny Face hit the top of national record charts this year, will appear next Sunday in the John Wayne Theatre at Knott's Berry Farm, Buena Park. Performances will be at 5, 6:30 and 8 p.m. The country music weekend also will include appearances by Johnny and Jonie Mosby Friday evening and the Sons of the Pioneers Saturday night.

Outdoor show

A preview of what's new in 1973 motor boats and other recreational vehicles is featured in the 1st Annual Great Western Outdoor Show at the Great Western Exhibit Center in the City of Commerce.

Producer Paul L. Chastain of Long Beach describes the production as "of interest to the trade and general public alike." The show will close Oct. 29.

Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for youths 12 to 17 and free for children under 12 if accompanied by a parent. Prizes include "Termite" mini-autos, a $950 Portasphere camping or housing unit.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: The sun changes sign today at 2:37 a.m. Those born earlier are Librans, those later are Scorpions. Librans are truth seekers; today's Scorpions are strategists, delighted with unexpected challenge.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Review mutual holdings, pose questions. Personal differences are amenable to settlement.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Almost any plan brings opposition. Stick to routine and reason. Deliberate expression of your feelings is in order.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Resist temptation toward mischief. The news is interesting, awakens speculation.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Travel meets temporary limitations. Where you can work alone, do so. Serious study is subtly rewarded.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Career, business compete with personal demands for attention. Wholeheartedly enjoy congenial company.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Formal transactions and legal matters deserve close investigation. Romance may bloom.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Place your efforts to divert pressure, even where you start late -as is very likely-. Domestic questions become important harder to deal with.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Everybody who knows enough of your views now seems to have a firm opinion.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If there's a way for the story to be garbled, assume it is, check the facts yourself. Special tact with loved ones is needed.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Uncertainty plagues the simplest of negotiations. Collect the best information at hand. Shared projects tend to prosper.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The more definitely you assert yourself the more likely is resistance. Keep things simple where you have emotional investment.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Forcing issues produces unexpected results. Let well enough alone, back away from immediate reaction to the doings of others.

Were Irish overconfident?

Mizzou stuns Notre Dame, 30-26!

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Missouri, beaten 62-0 by Nebraska a week earlier, cashed in on fourth-down plays six times for touchdowns or to keep scoring drives alive Saturday in a 30-26 upset of No. 8-ranked Notre Dame.

It was the first defeat in five starts of the previously unbeaten Irish.

Notre Dame went up against Missouri as a four-touchdown favorite against a club which had won only twice in five starts.

But Saturday Missouri never trailed in an offensive battle in which neither team punted in the first half and both teams punted only three times in the game.

Notre Dame's sophomore quarterback, Tom Clements, almost got the Irish a tie in the fourth period, but twice two-point conversion attempts failed and Notre Dame fell four points short.

Notre Dame coach Ara Parseghian could offer no explanation for his team's jitters.

"Mistakes are part of the game and we certainly made our share," Parseghian said. "Missouri, on the other hand, consistently hit on clutch third and fourth-down plays.

"I have no explanation as to why we fumbled so much."

Missouri coach Al Onofrio bubbled with enthusiasm in the dressing room, calling it his biggest victory "since I've been a coach at Missouri.

"Missouri played the best possible game they could," Onofrio said. "You just never know what will happen in this game."

Missouri's Bob Pankey intercepted Clements' first pass of the game and returned 10 yards to Notre Dame's 46. From there Missouri moved to a touchdown in 12 plays with Leroy Moss running over from the 16.

Notre Dame had trouble handling the wet ball —

Troy stands alone in the ratings game

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

There were shouts and squeals of delight from a crowd of 59,171 Saturday as USC chewed up crippled Washington, 34-7, at the Coliseum.

But not all the cheering resulted from what was transpiring on the floor of the Coliseum.

"Final score," said the public address announcer, pausing for effect, "Missouri 30, Notre Dame 26." Bedlam.

Later, a roar that lasted 10 seconds erupted when the P.A. man revealed that the top-ranked and unbeaten Trojans had been given breathing room in the Poll Bowl. "Final score, Colorado 20, Oklahoma 14."

But all through an afternoon in which sophomore Anthony Davis sparked the Trojans with touchdown runs of 44 and 14 yards, there were ominous reports from the North.

"First quarter score from Berkeley—UCLA 14, Cal 0." On and on it went until the point became clear (UCLA 49, Cal 13) that something more than the "city championship" will be at stake when the Trojans and the Bruins gather for their annual slugfest on Nov. 18 at the Coliseum.

With Oklahoma relegated to the also-rans, the Trojans now stand unchallenged in the polls as the No. 1 college machine in the nation, and they figure to stamp out the opposition when they meet Oregon Saturday at Eugene and Washington State the following week at Seattle.

Washington coach Jim Owens sounded a warning when asked to assess the strength of the Trojans.

"They're a very impressive ball club," he said. "If they keep it up, they'll be a mighty fine team at the end of the season, too. But they have some tough games to play."

Owens, who now has lost eight in a row to his close friend, John McKay, went into Saturday's game with a handicap similar to a claiming horse carrying top weight against a field of stakes winners.

Related story, other photos on Page S-3.

Watching from the sidelines were his best quarterbacks, Sonny Sixkiller (gimpy knee) and Greg Collins (jammed thumb), the team's 1971 receiving leader, Tom Scott (knee), and the top running back, Darrel Downey (knee).

"Washington played an absolutely magnificent game," said McKay. "To have that many people out with injuries and still play that well was tremendous."

Also tremendous was the USC defense, which made the afternoon miserable for Washington's totally inexperienced quarterbacks. Denny Fitzpatrick and Mark Backman, who were dumped eight times for losses totalling 46 yards.

The Huskies were held to a minus seven yards in total offense during the first half and had only 120 for the game, many coming when McKay poured in reserves.

The Trojan defenders set up two touchdowns and a field goal with interceptions and another touchdown with a fumble recovery. They picked off five Washington passes, safety Artimus Parker stealing two.

Given the ball for nearly 40 of the 60 minutes, USC's offense managed 406 yards, 65 under its season average. The Trojans also had three passes intercepted in a sputtering performance.

"I said before the game and I'll say again that Washington is the best defensive team we've played this year," asserted McKay.

Chief among those hounding the Trojans was tackle Gordy Guinn, who took part in 15 tackles.

McKay came up with an offensive wrinkle for future opponents to ponder. He employed Anthony Davis, previous used only at tailback, as a wingback. Davis made his 14-yard

Sparky rests ulcer, Reds breeze, 8-1

Combined News Services

CINCINNATI—It was so easy for the Cincinnati Reds Saturday manager Sparky Anderson had to gulp down just one pill for his ulcer, a startling change from the first five games in the World Series when Sparky went through pills like they were candy.

Playing for the first time like the Reds who shot through the National League West and then eliminated Pittsburgh to win the N.L. pennant, the Reds riddled the Oakland A's, 8-1, to even the Series at three games apiece.

It all comes down to the seventh and deciding game today—weather permitting—when Jack Billingham starts for the Reds against John (Blue Moon) Odom who's been a hero AND a goat so far in the tense Series (Channel 4, 10 a.m.).

"I really didn't feel much pressure today," admitted Anderson even though he marched in four pitchers in his attempt to match the many moves of Oakland's Dick Williams. "I just needed one pill for the ulcer today, not like yesterday when I needed a dozen."

The Reds are trying to become the first team ever to win a Series after losing the first two games at home but Anderson has stuck to his guns all the way, even when he was down 2-0 and then 3-1.

"There's no way they can stop us now," interjected the hero of day, the Reds' Bobby Tolan, who singled twice, stole two bases and scored twice. Vida Blue started Saturday's game but was tagged for the Reds' first three runs, one of them Johnny Bench's towering solo home run in the fourth inning that landed in the second deck in left-

TENACE MENACED WITH GUN

CINCINNATI (AP) — "It scares me, but I'll play," said Oakland catcher Gene Tenace after hearing his life had been threatened if he hit another home run in the 1972 World Series.

"I'm not going to let it affect me," said Tenace after the A's had absorbed an 8-1 shellacking Saturday.

Police at Riverfront Stadium said a woman in line to buy a standing-room ticket reported hearing a man say:

"If Gene Tenace hits a home run today, he won't walk out of this ballpark."

Police later arrested Elwood King, 32, of Louisville, on an open charge. Officers said he had a loaded pistol and a bottle of whiskey on him.

Reggie Jackson, the injured A's outfielder, listened to Tenace being questioned about the threat and commented: "If you have to go Gene, at least it will be on national television."

Odds say Reds, rain

CINCINNATI — Harrah's Racebook at Lake Tahoe, Nev., has made Cincinnati a 3-2 favorite to win the World Series today.

However, the weatherman may out-odds 'em all. A 70 per cent chance of rain is forecast today with temperatures in the low 60s.

Bruins thrash Cal, set rushing record

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

BERKELEY — About the only thing California harvested from Strawberry Canyon Saturday was a truckload of raspberries.

They came in the form of hoots and jeers from the Cal rooting section and large red welts on the bodies of quarterbacks. Jay Cruze and Steve Bartkowski, sacked five times by Bruin defenders.

When UCLA's defense mercifully ended its ravenous attack, the Bruins had captured a 49-13 decision over their big brother Golden Bears.

Almost instantly the comparisons between USC, which conquered Cal by a 42-14 count a week prior, and UCLA were being drawn.

The question was posed of Bartkowki, the sophomore who spent much of the afternoon under the bodies of Tom Waddell, Gerald Peeke Rick Baska, Rich Gunther and Cal Peterson.

"USC is better defensively and UCLA is real good offensively. They're hard to compare", he said, "but Ohio State is right in there, too."

Senior split end Steve Sweeney wasn't as cautious.

"UCLA is better offensively than USC. The Trojans defensively are better. But Ohio State might be better than either of them."

That sets up some interesting thoughts, since it looks as if the Bruins-Trojan titanic will settle the Rose Bowl berth and, in all likelihood, the winner will meet Ohio State.

Colorado 'buffaloes' No. 2 Oklahoma, 20-14

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — "You always go into a game like this intending to contain them," Colorado coach Eddie Crowder said Saturday after his ninth-ranked Buffaloes stopped the nation's top offense and upset second-ranked Oklahoma, 20-14.

Whether or not you can contain them, Crowder continued, is why the game is played.

Chuck Fairbanks, the Sooner coach, credited the Colorado defense with doing a fine job on his powerful club, but added:

"It seemed every time we had possession in the second half, we had one bad play in the series and couldn't overcome it. They just outplayed us."

Crowder credited his fired-up defense — which intercepted three passes and recovered one fumble — and also his defensive coaching staff for their pregame preparations.

Buffs quarterback Ken Johnson did just that when

Mike Mitchell: A legend at 25

In his 25 years, Mike Mitchell of Santa Monica already has lived a full life.

Recognized as one of this era's most famous adventurers, the bearded, 6-3, 175-pounder recently completed a 7,000-mile voyage in a CEMENT SAILBOAT from Korea to California. During the 80-day trip, the Irish lad had a girl companion as shipmate.

MIKE MITCHELL
Proves cement floats

A year ago he guided a 14-foot boat — the smallest ever to make the crossing — from Hawaii to Long Beach Harbor in a solo voyage of 37 days.

On his first ocean crossing, Mike's boat was knocked over by a mountainous wave.

On the second trip with his female companion, Mitchell battled a typhoon that dismasted his cement sailboat, fought five other storms, and killed a man-eating shark with his bare hands. He also ate the shark he killed.

Anyway, the shark eating man will be around Long Beach Arena all week for the continuation of the L.B. Sailboat Show and will lecture Friday night at 8 on the trials and tribulations of crossing an ocean.

WHY WOULD ANYONE try to cross an ocean alone or with just a girl shipmate?

"To prove things," replied Mike. "The first time I wanted to see if I could do an ocean crossing in a small boat by myself. The second time I wanted to prove to everyone that a cement sailboat would float for 7000 miles. I also wanted to see if I could get along with another individual for three months."

Why did you choose a girl as a shipmate?

"I wanted a good cook and I prefer girls."

Since that proved Mitchell isn't completely cuckoo, he was asked about his woman companion, who served as his first mate — on the voyage only, mind you.

"Her name is Liz McDonald, and she's a mature 18," said Mitchell.

"I put an ad in the paper for a companion on the trip from Korea to California, and she was one of several who responded.

"When I explained the details of the voyage, she wasn't too interested.

"But the next day she called back and said she wanted to accompany me. So I hired her on."

WHAT DID YOU and Liz do for 80 days alone on the ocean?

"We worried about navigation and we made minor repairs," replied the matter-of-fact Mitchell. "Then we read a lot and thought a lot. We had some conversation, too, and did a lot of fishing. I was the captain and she was the cook."

Was it like being shipwrecked on an island with a member of the opposite sex?

"I know what you're trying to say," laughed Mike. "No matter what I tell you, people's imaginations will run wild. Put it this way — we enjoyed each other's company."

WHAT ABOUT your shark killing incident?

"It was scary, but it was an adventure. The shark was a 150-pounder and I hit him a couple times with a club, then wrestled him to death. Not too many friends of mine have wrestled a shark to death.

"Yet, I wasn't sure if he really was dead, so I tied him up alongside the boat for two hours. When he didn't move for two hours, I figured he'd had it.

Then Liz and I decided to treat ourselves by eating the shark. It was the worst thing I've ever tasted. It was very, very bitter. Really bad. The survival book says if a shark leaves a burning taste in your mouth that it's contaminated. Well, that fellow really burned, so we used the rest of him for bait."

WERE YOU ever scared about dying?

"No," laughed the rascal who won a league championship at Cleveland High in Reseda by high jumping 6-4. "I don't scare very easily.

"But I was worried about freighters. You have to sleep sometime, so that means your'e not always alerted to trouble. Once an oil tanker came less than 200 feet from our cement boat."

How did Liz take that incident and all the storm trouble?

"Very good," responded Mike. "But all the work was on my shoulders because she wasn't strong enough to handle big seas and high winds. But she didn't crack up once."

DOES SOMEONE SPONSOR YOU on these journeys?

"It depends. I had very little financial help the first time on the sea. I spend $5,000 in Hawaii for my first boat. That was my lifetime savings.

"I broke even on the second trip because I invested in a company which paid expenses.

"But I'm solvent now. I sell advertising and I live very frugally. I think I've got a future in lecture tours and I've already made a little money in speaking engagements.

"I really enjoy talking to people and if anyone's interested I can be reached at 556-1911."

WOULD YOU do something like this again and, if so, what's on the horizon?

"Yes, I'd do all of it over again. The challenge was there and we were able to overcome the forces of nature.

"I'm researching now for my next adventure, whether it be on the sea or in the air. I've been flying for seven years and just recently explored the Central and South America jungles, and the snowy Alaskan landscape. I ski on the water and the snow, and I skin dive.

"Everything like this is an adventure and it makes for a beautiful life."

When do you think your next adventure might take place?

"One month or six months. I don't know. When the proper thing comes along, I'll know."

Whenever your next adventure, will you take a lady companion along?

"Not necessarily," smiled the Irishman. "I got along equally as well alone as with a female companion. It depends upon the circumstances."

Pasadena pins first loss on LBCC, 29-14

By JIM MANGAN
Staff Writer

A five-yard offside penalty on a Long Beach defender as Pasadena City College was preparing to punt early in the second half opened the doors to a massive Pasadena offen- display, and before the show was over Long Beach City College had fallen, 29-14, before 5,350 fans on the Lancers' field Saturday night in the Metropolitan Conference opener for both squads.

Until the momentary lapse, the Vikings were in control of the game which was 14-7 in their favor after two second quarter Steve Towne-to-Allen Brown scoring passes.

But Pasadena took advantage of the error to continue a march which went 93 yards in 15 plays to tie the game late in the third quarter.

Then on the next play Pasadena linebacker Joe Westfall intercepted Towne's pass and scooted 35 yards down the right sideline to paydirt and Long Beach was never again in the game.

So badly were the Vikings outplayed from that point that LBCC had registered only one first down —and that on a penalty—in the final 14 minutes.

Meanwhile, with Elvin Momon, the Metro's leading rusher, carrying the ball on almost every play, Pasadena dominated the rest of the contest.

Momon, who entered the game with a 97-yard per game rushing average, wound up with 138 yards and two touchdowns.

His second touchdown was anti-climactic as was Jim Hatchett's 28-yard field goal.

The game started as an exhibition of how not to play football, with the edge, if any, going to Pasadena which started a string of 12 penalties for 97 yards in the first half.

Midway through the second quarter, Pasadena, deciding that Long Beach wasn't going to do anything with the ball, went 57 yards in nine plays.

Momon went the final 15 on a burst through the left side and Dan Liota made it 7-0 with his successful kick.

Suddenly Long Beach City College came to life.

Greg James returned a kickoff 30 yards and a piling on call added 15 more.

Then Towne hit Brown first for 14 yards and then for 28 and a score, and Eric George's kick evened the game at 7-all.

The second Viking score came even faster. Towne hit Brown for short distance and the sophomore split end took off for the goal line, 45-yards distant, shaking off two tacklers en route. George's kick was true again and the Vikes were seemingly in control.

The second half started off inauspiciously, with Pasadena struggling deep in its own territory. Then came that little offside, and the game had turned in favor of Pasadena.

Actually, the contest never reached its real conclusion. A frustration-filled free-for-all so cluttered up the field that the officials decided to call the game.

Nobody argued.

King's TD passes upend Monsoons

Tom King fired touchdown passes of 8 and 25 yards in the fourth quarter Saturday night to propel Artesia High to a 13-7 Suburban League victory over Mayfair.

Steve Wilson caught the first TD reception, Chris Ruiz the second to put Artesia on top before Pat Shay came back in the final 3:41 to throw a 30-yard scoring strike to Skip McGlip for Mayfair's lone TD.

The Monsoons threatened again in the final 1:31 before Artesia picked off its fifth interception of the game to seal the victory at Bellflower High.

Miami claims first legal win

MIAMI (AP) — University of Miami turned two Houston fumbles and a pass interception into touchdowns Saturday night to claim its first undisputed victory of the season, 33-13.

The Hurricanes, 2-3, who broke an eight-game losing streak compiled over two seasons when they beat Tulane 24-21 on an illegal fifth-down touchdown pass play last week, never trailed the defensively weak Cougars. Houston is now 2-3-1.

there was a daylong drizzle — in the third period and twice turned over the ball to the Tigers on fumbles to set up field goals of 25 and 20 yard by Greg Hill.

Missouri riddled Notre Dame's previously enviable defensive record by racking up 223 yards rushing and 106 passing. The Irish previously had allowed only 182 yards a game and only 60 through the air. The Tiger defense also limited the Irish, who had averaged 447 a game, to 356.

L.A. City's No. 1 team
Carson defeats Gardena, 19-15

By GARY ELLIS
Staff Writer

Carson High quarterback Keith Fulbright completed a desperation pass to flanker Wesley Walker with two seconds to go for a 41-yard score to lead the Colts to a 19-15 victory over Gardena Saturday night at Veterans Stadium.

Just 39 seconds earlier Gardena's Jeff Arnold had kicked a 25-yard field goal to put the Mohicans ahead 15-13.

But Carson, the No. 1 ranked team in the L.A. City, did not die.

Before a crowd in excess of 15,000 Fulbright was thrown for losses of 11 yards in two plays to put the ball on the Colt 38. On third and 20, scatback Rick Taylor, who had fumbled twice in the second half, gained 18 yards on a draw. With 14 seconds remaining, Fulbright completed a three-yard pass to Pat Silva for a first down.

With 10 seconds, Fulbright lofted a high pass to Walker who had beaten the Gardena secondary for the winning score.

It was a heartbreaking loss for Gardena, the No. 2 ranked team, and contender for the Marine League title. The Mohicans picked up five Carson fumbles but could never get untracked.

When they did, Carson topped them with the bigger play.

With less than two minutes to play in the game, quarterback Paul Okuda began connecting on passes for Gardena. He hit Raymond Burks for a 30-yard pass to put the ball on the Carson 44. After two short runs, Okuda fired a 25-yard strike to Daryl Black to place the ball on the Carson eight. With Carson on top 13-12, Arnold connected a 25-yard field goal and the Mohicans were back on top 15-13.

Carson, the defending L.A. City champions, started the game like a thundering herd.

Taylor, who gained 122 yards, broke up the middle and scored from 40 yards out to give Carson a 7-0 lead.

But for the next three quarters Carson played like Colts - four hoofs and no hands. After that score, they ran only 18 plays in the first half, to Carson's 34, but carried a 7-0 into the dressing room at halftime.

In the third quarter Gardena picked up a Taylor fumble on the 21 and scored quickly. Kevin Cole (13 carries-74 yards) lugged the ball three times for 25 yards and then Okuda scored from the four.

The PAT was wide.

Early in the final quarter Carson's Silva punted and Ken Hinton of Gardena broke up the middle, then raced down the sidelines for a 73 yard touchdown to give Gardena a 12-7 lead.

But Carson came right back. With 8:35 to go, Fulbright completed his first pass of the night for eight yards. Between Taylor's short runs and another completion, the Colts had the ball on the Gardena 30. On fourth and one, Fulbright faked a dive into the middle and sprinted around right end for a 30-yard TD to put Carson back in the lead 13-12, setting up Arnold's field goal and then the game winning pass.

Cerritos falls to Santa Ana, 20-6

By DAVE WIELENGA

Cerritos College, its offense sputtering, dropped a 20-6 decision to Santa Ana College in Saturday night's South Coast Conference opener on the Falcons' home turf.

Cerritos proved to be its own worst enemy, producing only six first downs and performing miserably on third-down situations. The Falcons could convert only one of 12 third-down plays and five of the 11 they missed were within five yards of a first down.

Santa Ana initiated the scoring, taking the opening kickoff 80 yards in 10 plays and getting on the board when tailback Mike Randall crashed over from the five.

The Dons made the margin 14-0 in the second quarter as all-conference quarterback Jerry Dyer moved his team 80 yards in only five plays, hitting flanker Rich McInturff with a 62-yard scoring pass.

Cerritos' lone TD came when Jim Zorn, a replacement for starting quarterback Rick Bethke, engineered a 66-yard drive, capped by his one-yard dive into the end zone with 2:41 remaining in the third quarter. Ron Ploger's attempted PAT was blocked and the Falcons never threatened again.

Cerritos could muster 206 yards, with a meager 61 on the ground. Santa Ana gathered 276 passing and another 129 rushing for a total of 405.

With the defeat the Falcons slipped to 1-2-2 and it has been six weeks since they last tasted victory.

the ground game became sluggish.

Colorado bounced back from a 7-0 halftime deficit with a pair of third-quarter touchdowns, and barefoot kicker Fred Lima added two field goals in the final period as the Buffs dominated the previously unbeaten Sooners.

Oklahoma got past Colorado's 40-yard line only twice — on a Colorado fumble that led to the Sooners' first touchdown and on a desperation scoring drive late in the final period.

After a scoreless first period, Oklahoma capitalized on a Colorado fumble at the Buffs' 35 and six plays later senior quarterback Dave Robertson scored from 17 yards out. With 1:13 left in the game, Greg Pruitt gathered in a 10-yard scoring strike from Robertson for the other Sooner score.

Texas stampedes Arkansas

DALLAS (AP) — Texas quarterback Alan Lowry overcame a monumental goof with two touchdown runs in 92 seconds Saturday night to hand the defending Southwest Conference champion Texas a 35-15 victory over Arkansas.

With Texas trailing 9-7 in the third quarter of the nationally-televised match, Lowry fumbled the ball out of the Arkansas end zone to blow a sure touchdown. But it only made the senior angry.

Lowry drove the Longhorns 51 yards and scored himself from six yards out to give Texas a 15-9 lead with 15 seconds left in the third period.

The dazed Razorbacks failed to cover the ensuing kickoff and Texas' Tommy Landry fielded it at the Arkansas 26. Lowry, a defensive back his first two years at Texas, bolted 16 yards and then sneaked over from the one-yard line for his second touchdown.

RICH ROBERTS

Odrowski finds promised land

"There's more teams now, so there won't be so Many cases where they'll say, 'Well, you're over the hill, you can't play anymore.' I know I'm gonna be here three years."—Gerry Odrowski.

It isn't Paradise, because Paradise isn't frozen over, and Utopia is the only other place that didn't get a franchise.

GERRY ODROWSKI
He's found a home

No, it must be the World Hockey Assn., and that munching you hear between the lines is the sound of a reporter masticating on a crow, which brings us to the happy warriors of the Sharks, for whom Los Angeles must truly be the promised land.

"It's a little more security," says Gerry Odrowski, who has passed this way before, but always as a visiting member of the establishment ruled by that Valhalla in Montreal, the National Hockey League.

But there's really no reason for Odrowski to have felt insecure. After all, he played for 11 teams in 13 years. Didn't he always have a job? "The NHL clubs never give you the assurance that you're going to be there all year," he says. "Well, they tell you that, but they can always send you down to the minors."

THE BEAUTY of the WHA, then, is that there are no minors to be sent down to. It's a new feeling for Odrowski and a lot of other hockey gypsies whose family's fates have been subject to the whims of general managers.

"It gets a little harder each year," says Odrowski, 34, who has three school-age children. "My wife was all for me coming here. We've been moving around for quite awhile."

Most of the players who jumped from the NHL were signed to long-term contracts, in case they would have a change of heart, but Odrowski, who is committed to the Sharks for three years, says, "I hope to play even longer."

As sure as there's a Bobby Hull, the WHA is for real, and Odrowski insists that no apologies are in order.

"We feel it's just like playing for a National League team. You can't say we're an unproven league because we have a lot of players that have proven themselves in the NHL. We stay in the best hotels, we fly everywhere, we get the same per diem -- $18 a day — we play the same, we dress the same — and everybody knows we're making a little more money."

GERALD BERNARD ODROWSKI has played for more teams in more places at the end of more bus rides than he can literally recall.

"Is this really my 12th team in 14 years?" he wondered. "Gee, I haven't counted 'em up lately, but it's been a long grind for me."

Gerry had to take a pay cut to turn pro. His first professional assignment was to Sudbury in the Eastern League at $3,500 a year, but he was chosen the league's top defenseman.

"I was playing senior (amateur) back in Sault Ste. Marie. You could make anywhere from $150 to $300 a week. My job was working in the body shop of a car dealer. I just walked around for a couple hours a day."

After Sudbury, Odrowski's career itinerary continued with Detroit, Pittsburgh, Quebec, San Francisco, Vancouver, Oakland, San Diego, Phoenix and St. Louis, before succumbing to the siren call of the WHA. He had three separate shots in the NHL, but never managed to hang on.

"Maybe I looked at 'em the wrong way. A guy gets the general idea that if they like you, you're there, and if they don't, no matter how good a season you have, you're gone. I know I've always done my job fairly well."

ODROWSKI'S PROBLEM, though, is that he has acquired a reputation of being one of hockey's most efficient penalty killers, on any level of competition, which may be a primary reason why the Sharks wanted him.

"The way our team looks," notes publicist Hank Ives, "penalty killing is going to be an absolutely vital part of our system."

The Sharks, in pre-season play, conducted themselves as worse cads than Jack the Ripper. Odrowski was called upon often to keep the puck away from the offended opposition until his uncouth teammates did their servitude.

"I guess I never had the killer instinct in me," says Gerry. "It's hard enough playing the game without looking for more trouble.

"I started killing penalties in Detroit, and it's tagged along with me everywhere I've gone. Like when I was in St. Louis last year, that's all they had in mind for me. I didn't get on the ice much."

However, St. Louis is one NHL stop about which Odrowski has few complaints. Blues owner Sid Salomon Jr. started taking his players and their wives to Florida after the season when they won the NHL's West Division a few years ago, and he has continued the practice in leaner years.

"He told the guys in training camp last year that no matter what position they ended up, they're going to Florida," Gerry says. "We had a heck of a time down there, all expenses paid.

"Mr. Campbell (NHL president Clarence Campbell) was talking to Mr. Salomon once, and he said, 'You'd better not treat your players like that. You're going to spoil them.'

"Mr. Salomon said, 'Well, they're human beings and I'm going to treat 'em like that.' "

SALOMON, OF COURSE, is an exception among NHL owners, which is no small factor in the birth of the WHA. Odrowski left St. Louis only because he sensed that his good thing there was only a tap on the shoulder removed from another trip to the minors.

"They treated me well in St. Louis," he says. "Besides the trip to Florida, we all had cars during the season, and they had a room for the wives to get together and wait for the players after the game. The other clubs I've been on would never think of doing things like that."

Among Odrowski's many employers has been Charles O. Finley, whose hockey Seals figure to be something less than world champions like his baseball A's.

"Most owners feel they have to keep the players under their thumbs, to make 'em play better," Gerry says, "so I imagine there'll be quite a few more guys coming over next year. There are no superstars here."

Ducks suddenly tough, win 15-13

Stanford can't crack Oregon defense

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — Junior Hugh Woodward kicked three field goals and halfback Don Reynolds raced 85 yards for a touchdown as Oregon rose from the depths of its worst season Saturday to ruin Stanford's hopes for a third successive Rose Bowl appearance with a 15-13 victory.

Oregon, which gave up more than 60 points in losing to Oklahoma and UCLA, put up a rugged defense that held Stanford to only five yards in the first half.

Woodward, who was in the game because Oregon's regular placekicker Keith Lively was injured, booted field goals of 37, 24 and 45 yards in the first half.

Reynolds, starting only his second game, took a pitchout from quarterback Dan Fouts late in the first period and ran from his own 15 to score.

Stanford, behind 15-0 at half, came back strong in the third period, driving 81 yards in eight plays with Eric Cross scoring on a 9-yard pass from Mike Boryla.

Then Don Garcia, who missed three long field goals in the first half, connected from 54 and 26 yards to put Stanford behind only 15-13. But, with 9:11 left in the game, he missed from 36 yards.

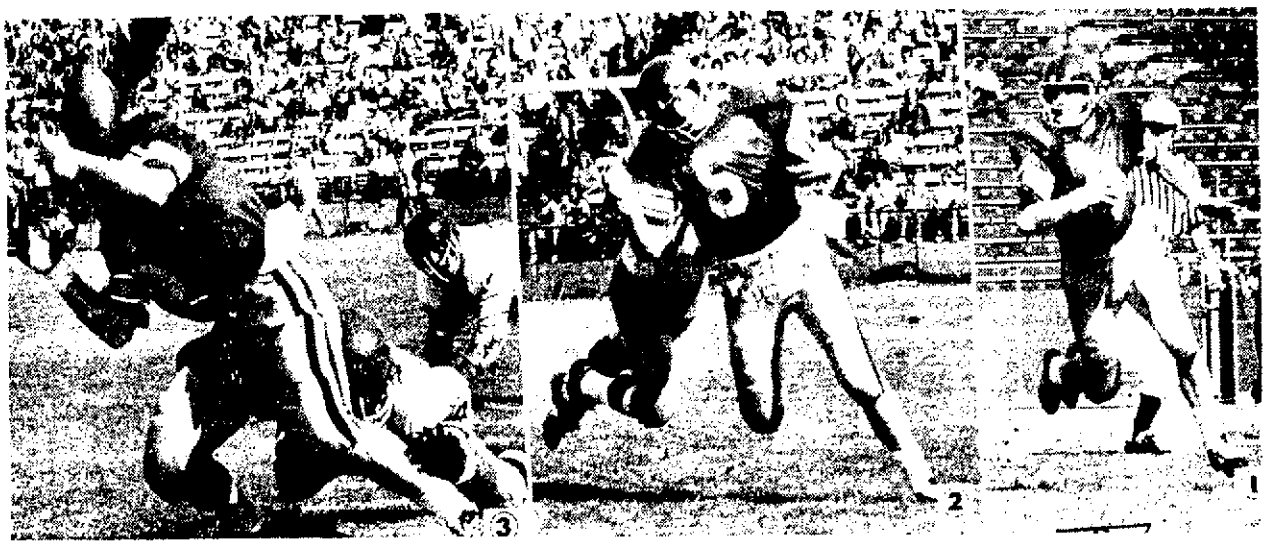

Oregon's Mario Clark intercepted two of Boryla's passes late in the game when the Ducks appeared to be in trouble.

"It was just a matter of time until they matured enough to play an entire game as they did today," said losing coach Jack Christiansen.

Ducks have 'matured'—Card coach

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — Stanford head coach Jack Christiansen said he knew it was a matter of time before the Oregon Ducks "matured enough to play as well as they did today" following Saturday's 15-13 defeat at the hands of the Ducks.

"It was like two halves of football," he said. "Oregon played well in the first half and we looked better in the second half. We had opportunities to score, but just couldn't take advantage of them.

"Oregon as we saw them on film was a good football team. It was just a matter of time until they matured enough to play an entire football game as well as they did today," he said.

Stanford was behind 15-0 at halftime, after placekicker Don Garca missed three long tries for field goals, and the Webfoots' normally porous defense held the Cardinals to five yards on the ground.

Dick Enright, the Oregon head coach, said the Webfoots had their offense planned to the option and the pass, but didn't count on the 85-yard run by sophomore Don Reynolds in the first stanza.

"That long run by Reynolds I'm sure gave them additional inspiration," Christiansen said. "I couldn't tell you if it was a missed block, being a step slow or what. It was a fine run."

Christiansen said his Cardinals made no major changes at halftime, but thought his men did a better job blocking and passing in the final two quarters.

"We thought we would get rushed," he said, commenting on the Oregon defense which held Stanford to 25 rushing yards. "But I think they rushed us more than they have other teams. Sometimes they would rush and we would be expecting something else."

No Sixkiller 'like playing with hands tied'--Jim Owens

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

The story of Washington's 34-7 defeat at the hands of USC Saturday was etched vividly on the sidelines.

There was Sonny Sixkiller, the crippled Cherokee, hobbling to and fro on crutches and thinking of what might have been. It was a long afternoon for Sixkiller just like it was a long afternoon for Tom Scott and Darrell Downey, too.

Scott, Sixkiller's favorite target and the leading Husky receiver last season, and Downey, coach Jim Owens' chief breakaway threat in the backfield, were as immobile as the quarterback. They spent the day leaning on canes and limping a lot.

Sixkiller may be sufficiently recovered from stretched tendons and bruised ligaments in his left leg to return in two weeks and Scott will also return before the season's end. But it was Saturday, against the team which is ranked No. 1 in the universe, when Owens really needed them.

"It's hard," the Washington coach conceded after the drubbing that was to be expected, "to play with one hand tied behind your back."

It was even harder for Denny Fitzpatrick.

Fitzpatrick is a pleasant 19-year-old from Gonzaga Prep in Spokane who was supposed to be redshirting this year, Saturday. Owens, with no choice, fed him to the lions—or at least to the Trojans.

Without a minute of varsity experience, Fitzpatrick found out Tuesday that he might be dressing for the USC game, Friday night, he discovered he was starting it as the Husky quarterback.

"This has been the strangest week of my life," Fitzpatrick allowed. "I never in my wildest dreams thought I'd be coming off a redshirt year to start against SC.

Fitzpatrick, admittedly deeply religious, could not lead either spiritually or physically in a disastrous first half when the Huskies showed a net yardage of minus 7 and amassed a mere one first down.

He was sacked four times, failed to complete a pass in six attempts while having one intercepted and committed a costly mistake by making a poor pitch to Glenn Bonner on third and nine from the Trojan 15 in the first quarter of what was then a scoreless game.

To his credit, Fitzpatrick persevered and scored the only Washington touchdown in the final period and then candidly announced: "I certainly found out I have a lot to learn.

"For a while, there, I didn't think we were ever going to score. But it's not the end of the world and it helped my confidence to have a decent second half."

"SC scored a lot of points but I thought our defense was outstanding," he said. "It was aggressive right from the start. The effort was there even if the result wasn't."

Owens singled out tackle Gordy Guinn, end Kurt Matter and safety Bill Cahill. Guinn made eight unassisted tackles and helped out on seven more.

"I'm exhausted," he said. "This was a big game for all our seniors . . . we've never beaten SC and we really wanted to. Everything considered, we didn't do all that bad."

Sixkiller said he felt "helpless and frustrated," observing from the sidelines with his left leg encased in a cast. "It's a sad empty feeling not to be able to do anything," he shrugged.

And he was not particularly impressed with the Trojans.

"They looked better two years ago (when they barely overcame Sonny and the Huskies, 24-23)," he said. "They didn't seem very aggressive today."

Owens did not exactly comply.

"They're the best I've seen, either on film or in person," he said.

Fitzpatrick was asked the same question.

"I can't compare because I haven't played against anybody," he said.

He has now.

Hoosier quarterback injured

Ohio State rips Indiana

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Fullback Harold Henson and quarterback Greg Hare each scored two touchdowns as unbeaten Ohio State whipped Indiana 44-7 in a Big Ten college football game Saturday.

Indiana lost its Big Ten passing leader, quarterback Ted McNulty, with a leg injury early in the first half.

Henson, a 6-foot-4, 224-pound sophomore rushed for 116 yards, his best day as a collegian, and scored on runs of 1 and 24 yards, pushing his touchdown total to 11 for the season. Hare scored on a pair of quarterback keepers of six yards each as the unbeaten Buckeyes posted their fifth victory and third in the conference for a share of the lead.

McNulty, also the conference's total offense leader, was the target of intense Ohio State defensive pressure. He was sacked three times before torn right knee ligaments forced him out of the game.

First reports indicated the slick passing senior, a product of Columbus, Ohio, will be out for the season. He was replaced by sophomore Rodney Harris with nearly three minutes left in the first quarter.

Harris, also pressured by the Buckeyes' big veteran defensive line, rifled a 33-yard pass to Mike Flanagan for Indiana's lone touchdown. That cut the Ohio State margin to 14-7 early in the second period.

Ohio State intercepted two of McNulty's passes in the first quarter. One interception was returned 30 yards by Rick Middleton to Indiana's one-yard line to set up Henson's first touchdown.

The Buckeyes piled up 386 yards rushing in 76 carries.

Syracuse beaten 17-0 by Penn St.

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Sparked by the running of junior halfback John Cappelletti, 12th-ranked Penn State overcame a rugged Syracuse defense to defeat the Orangemen, 17-0, before a record 60, 465 fans.

Cappelletti, who was a defensive back for the Nittany Lions last year, gained 162 yards on 24 carries, capping Penn State's scoring with a one-yard touchdown plunge with 56 seconds remaining in the game. It was his seventh touchdown of the year and his fifth in the last five games.

The victory upped the Lions' record to 5-1. Syracuse, which hasn't had a losing season in 22 years, is now 3-4.

Penn State's other touchdown was set up when Gary Sweat fumbled a Brian Marsella punt in the fourth period, and it was recovered by Carl Schaukowitch at the Syracuse 44. Eight plays later, senior quarterback John Hufnagel plunged one yard for the TD.

Michigan blitz subdues Illini

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Gil Chapman's 73-yard kickoff return for a touchdown featured sixth-ranked Michigan's 31-7 Big Ten victory over Illinois Saturday and crushed the hopes of a homecoming crowd of 64,290.

Chapman's brilliant return came after the Illini, down 24-0 at the half, had rallied for a third quarter touchdown on an 18-yard run by George Uremovich.

The victory was the sixth in a row for the undefeated Wolverines and third in confrence play to assure Michigan a share of first place in the Big Ten.

Winless Illinois suffered its sixth successive loss.

The Wolverines, off to a stuttering start when quarterback Dennis Franklin lost the ball on a fumble on the first play from scrimmage, then turned on its powerful ground game led by Franklin, Chuck Heater and Ed Shuttlesworth for three long scoring drives.

The defending Big Ten champions then capped the half on a 31-yard field goal by Mike Lantry for their 24-0 lead.

Gophers get first win, upset Iowa

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — Hard-running John King pounded for four touchdowns and churned out 173 yards rushing Saturday in leading Minnesota to its first victory of the season, 43-14 over favored Iowa.

King, a 210-pound junior, was assisted by Doug Beaudoin in spearheading a Gopher ground offense that totaled 492 yards. Beaudoin gained 135 yards in 18 carries.

It was Minnesota's first win under new coach Cal Stoll.

King's four touchdowns and 24 points tied a team record previously shared by Curtis Wilson (1967) and Jim Carter (1969).

The 43-point homecoming win was the biggest Gopher offensive showing in 23 years and enabled them to hang on to Floyd of Rosedale, the legendary trophy of a pig for which the two teams play each other.

Nebraska humming along

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Sophomore quarterback David Humm threw four touchdown passes Saturday, three in a 28-point second quarter, as Nebraska rolled to a 56-0 Big Eight Conference victory over outmanned Kansas.

The left-handed Humm set a Nebraska school record when he sailed his fourth touchdown pass, a 30-yarder, to Bob Ravelle with 9:49 left in the third quarter. He did not play after that and wound up completing 16 of 31 passes for 281 yards.

The Jayhawks did not make a first down until the last play of the first half and finished with only four against the Cornhusker defense.

Kansas' best scoring chance was in the first quarter when linebacker Eddie Sheats blocked Rich Sanger's punt out of bounds at the Nebraska six. But Dave Mason intercepted Bob Bruegging's third-down pass in the end zone, killing the threat.

Nebraska started the second quarter deluge on a fourth-down play when Humm flipped a 30-yard touchdown pass to Frosty Anderson, who got behind Mike Burton and caught the ball just before stepping out of the end zone.

Two possessions later, after a Kansas punt rolled out of bounds at the Cornhusker 28, Humm fired a 72-yard strike to Johnny Rodgers, who ran the last 40 yards untouched.

Walls leads Auburn past Tech, 24-14

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Randy Walls, who wasn't supposed to be much of a passer, went to the air Saturday and led Auburn to a 24-14 victory over Georgia Tech.

The young quarterback, trying to fill the shoes of graduated Heisman Trophy winner Pat Sullivan, connected on seven of 13 passes for 108 yards and a touchdown. Two of his throws were intercepted.

Passing wizard Eddie McAshan of the losers found himself bottled up by an Auburn pass defense which was supposed to be porous.

Walls, a sophomore quarterback from Brundidge, Ala., also did his share of running with the ball and put Auburn in position for its first touchdown by scampering 23-yards on one play and 30 on another. On both plays, he had dropped back to pass but found a hole and scrambled for the distance himself.

Armstrong's 232 yards key Purdue

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Otis Armstrong became Purdue's all-time single game and career rushing leader Saturday, pacing the Boilermakers to a 36-0 Big Ten homecoming football victory over Northwestern.

Armstrong scored on explosive 54 and 53-yard runs, one in each half, as he rolled for 232 yards in 32 carries to eclipse Leroy Keyes' record of 225 yards set in 1967 against Illinois.

Armstrong's career rushing total now stands at 2,612 compared to the old record of 2,478 yards set by Harry Szulborski in 1946-49.

The victory raised Purdue's season record to 3-3 and gave the Boilermakers a 3-0 conference mark and a share of the Big Ten lead with Ohio State and Michigan. Northwestern fell for the fifth time in six games.

The Purdue defense held the Wildcats to 82 yards rushing and 60 yards passing. The Boilermakers have not allowed a touchdown in 13 quarters.

Purdue ran 80 rushing plays and gained 478 yards while passing only three times.

Spartans blank Wisconsin, 31-0

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Quarterback Mark Niesen ran for a 56-yard touchdown on the rain-slicked artifical turf for Michigan State's longest gain this season and led the Spartans to a 31-0 victory over Wisconsin in Big Ten football Saturday.

The victory was Michigan State's first after four successive losses to national contenders.

The slight, 5-foot-11, 179-pound Niesen, a converted cornerback woke up a listless Spartan ground attack. State's emergency came midway in the second period after Wisconsin's shoeless Rick Barrios twice missed field goal attempts.

Alabama shades Vols, 17-10

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Third-ranked Alabama exploded for two touchdowns within 36 seconds late in the fourth period Saturday, the clincher coming on a 22-yard dash by quarterback Terry Davis with 1:20 to play, as the unbeaten Crimson Tide churned past Tennessee 17-10.

Alabama, harassed by a stiff Vol defense all afternoon, got the ball on the Tennessee 48 with just over two minutes to play and trailing 10-3. After Davis connected on a 10-yard pass, tailback Steve Bisceglia raced 36 yards to the Vol two. On the next play, Wilbur Jackson stormed over. Bill Davis then tied the game with his conversion kick.

Shortly after the ensuing kickoff, Tennessee quarterback Conredge Holloway fumbled on the Vol 22 and Alabama recovered. On the first play Davis swept right end for the touchdown which sewed up the Tide's sixth victory without a defeat.

With 70,000 fans and scouts from five post-season bowls looking on, Alabama took a 3-0 lead just before halftime. Cornerback Bobby McKinney ran a psss interception back 24 yards to the Vol 22. Bill Davis' kick carried 31 yards as the half ended.

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Florida's scrambling Gators mixed the running of Nat Moore and Vince Kendrick with a swarming defense Saturday and overpowered the Mississippi Rebels 16-0.

The Gators struck for a touchdown and a field goal in the first quarter and never let the Rebels get back into the Southeastern Conference game.

In handing Ole Miss its first shutout loss since 1968 (42 games), Florida showed a solid running game that produced a 42-yard touchdown march in the first period and a fourth-period score on three dazzling runs by Moore and Kendrick.

In between the Gator defense knifed through the Ole Miss offensive line almost at will, smearing quarterback Norris Weese repeatedly and never letting the Reb offense get untracked.

Tennessee was the last team to shut out the Rebels, 31-0, and it was Florida coach Doug Dickey who was at the Vol helm that day.

The victory was Florida's third against two defeats and evened Mississippi's record at 3-3. It put the Rebels' record string of 15 consecutive bowl games in jeopardy with Tennessee and Louisiana State still to play.

Rams' new deep threat debuts today

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

BROWN REID

Unless you count Harold Jackson, the one that got away, the Rams now have in their employ their best threat to catch the long, long pass since Elroy (Crazy Legs) Hirsch.

Gordon is his name and the streak is his game.

But the Rams may have to mail him the football. Acupuncture notwithstanding, there is some doubt that Roman Gabriel can still throw the bomb.

Richard Frederick Gordon, signed nine days ago after running out his option with the Chicago Bears, joins the Rams for today's 1:05 match of division leaders at the Coliseum—the Rams, 3-1-1 in the National Football League's National Conference West Division, against the Cincinnati Bengals, 4-1 in the American Conference East. However, it is also possible that Gabriel will be ready to throw long before Gordon is able to run long. Dick has been working out seriously for only a week, while Gabriel's arm has been improving steadily the last three weeks.

When his elbow hasn't hurt, Gabriel has started and the Rams have romped as he completed 34 of 65 passes (52.3 per cent) for 511 yards and four touchdowns, with only one interception. But his passes have been only of short-to-medium range because, in truth, he hasn't been desperate enough to throw long.

When the elbow ached, Gabriel completed only 6 of 23 (26.1 per cent) for 98 yards and no TDs, with three interceptions, against Chicago and Atlanta.

Season records

The Bengals' defense may put Gabriel to the test, and Ram coach Tommy Prothro would be as anxious as his rival, Paul Brown, to see if Gabe is up to it.

Like the Rams, the Bengals lead their conference in defense, spurred by Mike Reid, the piano-playing tackle who has crescendoed opposing quarterbacks eight times in the last two weeks.

Reid is accompanied on the hammer and tongs by rookie defensive end Sherman White, the No. 1 draft choice out of Cal, and strong safety Tommy Casanova, the No. 2 from LSU.

Casanova and Lemar Parrish have been particularly effective at turning punts into points, each running back one for a touchdown this season, something the Rams haven't accomplished in 11 years.

ANDERSON MUHLMANN

Defense is what Brown rebuilt in bouncing from first place in 1970 to last in '71 back to first at the moment. However, if the Bengals have a defensive flaw, it has been an inability to take the football away, collecting only four of 13 opposing fumbles and intercepting only four passes.

On the other hand, the Cincy offense has lost all eight of its fumbles. To compare, the Rams have lost 2 of their 8, while recovering 8 of the opponents' 11, with eight interceptions.

So there you have a young team against a mature team, which is probably the best reason that the Rams are favored by 10 points.

At rushing the passer, the two strong defensive lines are a virtual standoff, Cincy scoring 22 sacks to lead the league, and Rams 17. If Coy Bacon, Fred Dryer and Jack Youngblood always wanted to play in the backfield, they got their chance at Philadelphia last week.

At the same time, the Bengals were stunning the Kansas City Chiefs, 23-16, indicating that their dormant offense has come to life behind Ken Anderson, a second-year quarterback who won the job from Virgil Carter.

ROBERTS' ROUSER: Rams 20, Bengals 10

"He is no longer the raw kid you saw last year," says Brown. "They knew they could score. For awhile they were beginning to believe some of the things they read about the 'poor offense.'"

But Brown would not deny that there were two weeks in a row when the Bengals' failed to cross a goal line, relying solely on placekicker Horst Muhlmann for a 15-10 upset of Pittsburgh.

Muhlmann was discovered in Gelsenkerchen, Germany, by Kansas City coach Hank Stram. In his third year with the Bengals after a year on K.C.'s taxi squad, he has shown 11-for-15 accuracy on field goals, with a longest of 46 yards.

However, he has been unlucky on real grass away from Riverfront Stadium's AstroTurf, connecting on only 2 of 5 in the loss at Cleveland.

But Cincinnati's large German community has taken the 32-year-old former soccer player to its bosom. He has a local TV commercial for a German restaurant in which somebody asks, "Is the food good?"

To which Horst replies, "I can't kick."

RAMBLING: The Bengals have lost the last four games they've played on grass . . . The Rams haven't allowed a touchdown in six quarters . . . Bengal cornerback Ken Riley and middle linebacker Bill Bergey are doubtful, will be replaced by rookie Bernard Jackson from Washington State and second year man Doug Adams respectively . . . The Rams probably will be healthier than last week, although corners Gene Howard and Clancy Williams had leg miseries in midweek . . . One-time Cincy star QB Greg Cook is sitting out his third season in a row as hope grows dim that he'll recover from a torn shoulder muscle. He has had surgery three times . . . Anderson's 64-yard TD pass to Essex Johnson last week wasn't a bomb, just a short pass and a long run. The Bengals' leading receiver is tight end Bob Trumpy with 17 catches . . . Casanova got the game ball for his 65-yard punt return that broke up the Denver game, leading to a 21-10 win.

Cincy gets 'breaks'

Bench introduces Big Red Machine

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bert Campaneris walked to home plate in the ninth inning of Saturday's World Series game, grimaced over the Cincinnati Reds' 8-1 lead, and looked at Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench.

"We never lose three in a row," said Campaneris, Oakland's speedy shortstop who said the A's would win today's final game.

"You've never faced the Big Red Machine," replied Bench.

The exchange had no consequence in the Reds' runaway sixth-game victory, but it indicated the tone the Reds set in fending off another do-or-die situation.

"We've had our backs to the wall two games now," first baseman Tony Perez said in the Reds' surprisingly quiet dressing room.

"They're just getting the breaks, that's all," a smiling John (Blue Moon) Odom, the pitcher who will start for Oakland in today's decisive game, said in the A's clubhouse.

"We just have to cut down their breaks," Odom added.

The Reds' "breaks" Saturday included 10 hits — one of them a booming 400-foot home run by Bench off A's starter Vida Blue.

Manager Dick Williams said lefthander Blue pitched excellent baseball but no one could say the same about relievers Bob Locker, Dave Hamilton and Joel Horlen, the bottom three members of the A's eight-man pitching staff.

Blue, who left in the sixth inning with the score 2-1, will be in the bullpen with everyone else but Odom today.

"If it means money, I'll pitch righthanded," Blue said when asked if he'll be ready to do more throwing in the final game.

Joe Morgan, who said before the game he was particularly determined to hit Blue because of remarks Blue made downgrading the Reds, was quietly pleased with his two hits, first of the Series.

"Vida's a fine pitcher, I'm sure," Morgan told a flock of reporters. "But we faced Philadelphia's Steve Carlton all through the year, and he's the best lefthanded pitcher in baseball. We're used to seeing good pitching.

"I felt all along my not getting on base was the reason we weren't winning the early games."

SERIES--

field. Bench's homer gave the Reds a 1-0 lead but the A's tied it briefly in the fifth on Dick Green's two-out double.

The Reds snapped the tie in the fifth on Dave Concepcion's sacrifice fly that scored Hal McRae. Cincinnati knocked Blue off the mound in the sixth when Tolan singled and then Bench took two bad pitches. That brought Bob Locker out of the bullpen and he came running to the mound. He left almost as fast.

Tolan stole second on Locker's first pitch. Bench was purposely walked and then Perez singled to score Tolan and put the Reds on top by two, 3-1.

The Riverfront Stadium crowd of 52,737 really cut loose in the home half of the seventh when the Reds paraded 10 batters to the plate against Dave Hamilton and Joel Horlen who were making their first—and, perhaps, last — appearances of the Series.

Five runs scored as the Reds wrapped up their first Series victory at home since 1940. All they need now is one more. Tolan and Cesar Geronimo each singled home two runs in the seventh and Joe Morgan, who finally broke out of his Series-long slump, singled home the other.

Through it all, A's owner Charlie O. Finley, wearing his garish green jacket and gold slacks, slumped in his seat next to the Oakland dugout. Every so often he would glance down at the A's bullpen, looking for help. But even Charlie O. couldn't find any.

Cowboys, Indians go at it again in NFL topper

United Press International

The Cowboys and Indians will go at it again today and the time has never been better for the Redskins.

Washington enters today's shootout with Dallas for the National Football Conference Eastern Division lead (channel 2, 1 p.m.) in an excellent position — it doesn't have to face Roger Staubach.

Staubach, who brought the Cowboys a Super Bowl title last season, was activated Saturday after making steady progress from a shoulder separation that has had him sidelined since the second exhibition game against the Rams. But no matter how well he may be today, Dallas coach Tom Landry says he'll stick with Craig Morton as his starter.

The Cowboys have been struggling with Morton at the controls — he doesn't pose the running threat Staubach does — and only last week in a 21-0 victory over Baltimore did he move the club with consistency. But Landry feels it's too early for Staubach, especially when the conference lead is at stake since both teams enter with 4-1 records.

"Things would have to be disastrous before I would play Roger," Landry said earlier this week. "The game would have to be way, way out of hand, or Craig would have to be hurt. Craig is throwing the ball as well as he has all year. Last week he got rid of the ball for completions a few times as he was being hit. He is throwing exceptionally well.

Landry thinks it may be unwise to pull Staubach into such a pressure position so early. "It's just like coming off training camp for him," Landry explained. "I just hope we can get into the position (in future games) where we can play him some and let him get his timing down. It would be unfair for the public to look at Roger now and expect him to be the way he was in the stretch drive for us last year. And it would be unfair for us to put him in a real crucial situation."

Washington coach George Allen has returned Sonny Jurgensen to the starting quarterback role and the veteran passing star needs only 58 yards to become only the third thrower in NFL history to pass for more than 30,000 yards in his career.

The Redskins have won only one of the last seven games between the clubs — last season. Both teams have been playing menacing defense. Dallas hasn't been scored on in the last six periods and Washington, which clubbed St. Louis 33-3 last week, hasn't given up a touchdown in eight quarters.

Elsewhere in the NFL today, the New York Jets entertain Baltimore, Buffalo is at Miami, Denver at Oakland, Atlanta meets Green Bay at Milwaukee, San Diego at Detroit, St. Louis at the New York Giants, New England at Pittsburgh, New Orleans at San Francisco, Philadelphia at Kansas City and Cleveland at Houston. Minnesota is at Chicago Monday night.

The Colts-Jets game marks the debut of John Sandusky as Baltimore's head coach. Sandusky was named Monday to replace Don McCafferty, fired after the Colts dropped their fourth game. Sandusky has named Marty Domres to start in place of veteran John Unitas at quarterback. The Colts, meanwhile, must stop Joe Namath, who passed for 496 yards and six touchdowns in the first meeting between the two clubs.

Earl Morrall, subbing for the injured Bob Griese, gets his first start as Miami, the only unbeaten team in the NFL, takes on Buffalo while Oakland, the AFC Western leader, will attempt to stop a fired-up Denver club. Surprising Green Bay, alone in the NFC Central lead, takes on Atlanta, battling to overtake the Rams in the NFC West and Detroit, looking to rebound after being bounced by the Packers Monday night, must contend with San Diego's solid running attack.

The Giants, with the longest winning streak in the NFC — three games — hope to move into a second-place tie in the East with the Dallas-Washington loser — if there is one — by beating the Cardinals and Pittsburgh, hot on the heels of Cincinnati in the AFC Central, sends its rugged defense against New England.

The outlook doesn't look too bright for the only winless teams in the league — New Orleans and Philadelphia. The Saints take on a San Francisco team smarting from back-to-back losses to the Rams and the Giants and the Eagles face Kansas City, also upset by Cincinnati last week.

ROSE OUT IN FULL BLOOM

PETE ROSE is Cincinnati's chief player in charge of hustle, cheer leading and head-first dives as shown in Saturday's sixth game of World Series. Hustle was evident in fifth inning with leaping catch (left, above) in left field of fly by Angel Mangual. Cheers were led for Bobby Tolan who scored one of five runs in seventh inning (left). Head-first dive came below in seventh under tag by Oakland's Sal Bando. Rose had walked, advanced to third on base hit by Joe Morgan.

GAME OF THE WEEK
Washington 17, Dallas 13

The National Football Conference's Eastern Division leadership is on the line today. Sonny Jurgensen rates with Craig Morton now that he's replaced Billy Kilmer for the Redskins.

Last year the 'Skins surprised the Cowboys at Dallas, 20-16. Dallas returned the favor at Washington, 13-0. Dallas leads over-all series, 15-8-2.

touchdown run from that position.

"We had Lynn Swann out with a knee injury and Dave Boulware got so tired he couldn't talk," said McKay. "We'll be playing Davis more and more."

Davis was happy.

"I just want to play," said the 5-9, 190-pound sophomore who was 1970 L.A. city player of the year. "Most teams are keying to stop our outside stuff. This gives us something to counter it."

Davis had 92 yards in 16 carries from tailback and wingback.

The Trojans had to work hard for their first touchdown, going 72 yards in 11 plays before fullback Sam Cunningham plunged over from the 2. J.K. McKay made a sensational third-down catch at the Washington 2 to keep the drive moving.

Three minutes later, Davis circled right end, shook free from three tacklers in a toe dance down the sideline and rambled 44 yards for a touchdown that gave USC a 14-0 lead.

Field goals of 22 and 26 yards by Mike Rae in the second quarter boosted the Trojans to a 20-0 halftime lead. The Huskies managed only one first down before the intermission.

Parker intercepted a pass and returned it 19 yards to the Husky 18 to pave the way for a Trojan touchdown 2:10 into the third quarter. Davis, operating from a wingback slot, bolted off tackle, shot to the outside and outran Washington defenders to register a 14-yard score.

Linebacker Charles Anthony's interception sent the Trojans on the way to their final touchdown. USC made 67 yards in 10 plays, helped by a 36-yard pass interference penalty against the Huskies. Cunningham scored from the 1.

Fitzpatrick, playing in his first collegiate game, led the Huskies to their touchdown, driving them 52 yards in 10 plays with five minutes to play. The sophomore quarterback ran 10 yards for the score.

Neither team exhibited much enthusiasm for battle when James Sims (No. 41) of USC and Glen Bonner of Washington engaged in a kicking and punching match.

Milling players from both clubs were separated without much damage being done. However, the officials ejected the Trojans' Parker (No. 14) and Bonner.

"I think they got their numbers mixed up," said McKay.

The USC coach was asked what his reaction had been to the announcement of the Oklahoma-Colorado score.

"I didn't hear about it until we got into the locker room," he said. "I thought the Wishbone couldn't be stopped."

He was teasing, but the final answer will come on Nov. 18.

End 5-game skid

Kings turn back Black Hawks, 3-1

Wing Serge Bernier and defenseman Gilles Marotte drilled third period goals to spark the Kings to a 3-1 National Hockey League victory over the Chicago Black Hawks Saturday night and snap a five-game King losing streak.

Bernier banged in his own rebound at 1:48 of the final period to beat Black Hawks' goalie Tony Esposito from in close to give the Kings to a 2-1 lead.

The Kings, 2-6, added an insurance tally at 14:48 on Marotte's power play goal as he connected on a 50-foot blast from just inside the blue line for his second goal of the season.

The Black Hawks, 4-3, took a 1-0 lead at 16:27 of the opening period on a power play goal with Lou Angotti beating Kings goalie Rogie Vachon's from five feet. Vachon then turned back Ciago's attack with spectacular saves for the remainder of the game.

The Kings could muster only two shots on goal in the first period but Bob Berry, leading NHL goal scorer, got the Kings rolling with his seventh marker of the season. Berry deflected the shot past Esposito taking a perfect pass from Bernier.

Kings' coach Bob Pulford said, "I feel it was our best effort as a team. Defensively, we played extremely well the last 40 minutes. It was a big win for us.

"We came out the first period and didn't play well, but as the game went on we got stronger. That's the type of game I want us to play."

Asked if he thought Chicago came out in the first period and tried to blow the Kings off the ice, Pulford replied: "Yes, but that's what we were going to try to do to them.

"I thought Rogie (Vachon) was extremely sharp tonight."

FIRST PERIOD — 1, Chicago, Angotti 1 (White) 16:27. Penalties — Long, K, 2:02; Maki, Chi, 10:06; Corrigan, K, 11:07; Russell, Chi 12:12; Kozak, K, 12:40; Corrigan, K, 16:14; Korab, Chi 19:54.

White bemoans Bears' errors

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

BERKELEY — Mike White could only shake his head in disbelief and disappointment. But he wasn't blaming any of his players for California's 49-13 defeat Saturday.

"The mistakes offensively and defensively are the fault of the coaching staff and, as head football coach, I take full responsibility," he said forthrightly. "Offensively, these are the same mistakes that have plagued us all year. One mistake breaks down a whole play."

The Golden Bears were intercepted five times, UCLA running two back for touchdowns and converting a third into a TD. Cal was not without breaks, as well, but was able to turn only one of five fumble recoveries into six points.

"Our inability to sustain any drives not only hurt the offense, but put tremendous pressure on our defense. Strange as it may sound, I do feel our defense played well.

"But we just made some mental mistakes there, too, and when you have UCLA's explosive backs, if one man makes a mistake, it's usually disastrous."

Disaster came in the form of .55 and 45-yard touchdown runs by Kermit Johnson, a 48-yard scoring scamper by second-string quarterback Rob Scribner and a 71-yard non-scoring romp by third-team QB John Sciarra.

White is sick and tired of the opposition breaking the big plays instead of his Bears. "It was the same thing against Ohio State, Colorado and USC — and now UCLA. Each of them has people making big plays to compensate for mistakes.

"Somebody doesn't do his job, and somebody else does it for him. We don't have it yet."

The personable first-year head coach was asked about his quarterback situation. Jay Cruze started, had some success operating the running game, but the Bears fell behind by three touchdowns and sophomore Steve Bartkowski was inserted and Cruze exiled to the bench with 7½ minutes to play in the first half, never to return.

"We decided to start Jay, play him awhile, then go with Steve for awhile and see how the game went. As it turned out the catch up type game, which we seem to be playing every week, is more suited to Steve so we stuck with him."

Cruze hit five of eight passes with one intercepted during his short stay. Bartkowski connected on 10 of 24 with four thefted and one touchdown.

Cruze was sacked once for a four yard loss. Bartkowski four times for 30 yards. Failure to establish a running attack (60 yards in 41 tries) and the deficit on the scoreboard forced Cal to the air and ignited the fierce Bruin pass rush.

Cal's No. 1 weapon was a kicking game which averaged 53 yards on four punts and missed field goals of 53, and 52 yards —just as good as punts. White wasn't kicking about that.

Tyler taken down

UCLA rolled up school record 532 yards rushing Saturday against Cal, including 11 on this carry by Randy Tyler. Bears' Bob Curry (35) made tackle. No. 65 is Bruin Randy Gaschler.

Wings, Sabres still unbeaten; Orr returns

Combined News Service

Left winger Nick Libett's third goal of the season at 17:21 of the second period proved to be the winner as the Detroit Red Wings stretched their unbeaten streak to five games by downing Toronto, 3-1, Saturday night.

Rick Martin's goal in the second period kept Buffalo undefeated in the Eastern Division of the NHL as the Sabres tied St. Louis 1-1. The standoff enabled Buffalo to remain tied with the Red Wings.

Power - play goals by John Bucyk and Fred Stanfield lifted Boston to a 4-2 victory over Pittsburgh. The win squared the Stanley Cup champs' record at 3-3 and marked Bobby Orr's return to action following off-season surgery on his left knee.

Montreal also retained its unbeaten record with a 5-3 triumph over Vancouver as Marc Tardif scored two goals. The Canadiens had to overcome a 2-0 deficit to get the win.

In a battle of the New Yorkers, Bobby Rousseau's goal at 7:05 of the third period gave the Rangers a 2-1 verdict over the expansion Islanders. A standing room crowd of 14,665 saw Rousseau knock in a third rebound after Pete Stemkowski had taken the first shot at goalie Billy Smith.

John Stewart fired his first goal of the season on a break-away with 79 seconds left in the game to power expansion Atlanta to a 3-2 win over Minnesota.

THE FIAT 128 FOUR-DOOR SEDAN BRINGS YOU GOOD NEWS FOR YOUR KNEES.

The trouble with most small sedans is that while they help solve the serious problems of space on the road, they create serious problems of space inside the car.

One of the most remarkable things about the front-wheel drive Fiat 128 you see pictured above is that, while on the outside it's 10 inches shorter than the Volkswagen Beetle, on the inside it borders on the cavernous.

For example, in the front, you get the exact same headroom you get in the slightly more expensive Cadillac DeVille, more hip room than a Toyota Corona or a Dodge Colt, and the same leg room as a Chrysler Newport.

And in the back, where small cars are really small, you get 2 inches more knee room than the Volkswagen Beetle, 10 inches more hip room than a Chevy Vega, ½ inch more headroom than a Lincoln Continental, and more room to get in and out of the back door than any four-door sedan we know of.

And you get all this for $2,089.00.

(This is the manufacturer's suggested retail price POE the West Coast. Of course, transportation, state and local taxes, optional equipment and dealer preparation charges, if any, are additional, as with any other new automobile.)

All of which is one of the big reasons why, in Europe, where the average family averages more people than in America, they buy more Fiats than any other car.

Lakers tackle Bulls

Goodrich debuts tonight at Forum

Gail Goodrich comes off the injured list to make his season debut tonight as the Lakers meet the Chicago Bulls at the Forum at 7 o'clock.

Plagued by a severe groin pull, Goodrich missed the entire exhibition season and the team's first five NBA games. The seven-year veteran was the league's fifth-leading scorer in 1971-72 with a 25.9 average.

Chicago suffered a worse misfortune early this week when center Tom Boerwinkle underwent knee surgery and will be lost for the season. The Bulls work all their plays off screens by Boerwinkle and No. 1 center Clifford Ray.

In a desperation move, Chicago acquired Dennis Awtrey from Philadelphia and traded Kennedy McIntosh, its No. 1 draft choice last year, to Seattle for veteran Garfield Heard.

Arnie skys to 75; Knudson leading

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Arnold Palmer blew a two-shot lead with a fat 75 Saturday and Canadian George Knudson stormed into a five-stroke lead in the $150,000 Kaiser International Open golf tournament.

Knudson, as usual wearing dark glasses despite the cloudy, overcast skies, blazed in with a six-under-par 66 on the 6,819-yard Silverado Country Club course and posted a 54-hole total of 201 — 15 under par.

It was the best three-round total of a par-72 course on the pro tour this season and gave him a big lead over defending champion Billy Casper, alone in second at 206.

Palmer, who enjoyed a two-stroke lead when play started, bogeyed two of the first three holes he played and never really recovered. He made only one birdie all day.

Jack Nicklaus, the pre-tournament favorite, had another 69 but was a distant eight strokes back at 209.

"I haven't given up yet," said the 43-year-old Palmer, who hasn't won in the last 15 months.

Shaken up

UCLA quarterback Mark Harmon was shaken up in first quarter of Saturday's game at Berkeley but was able to return to action in Bruins' one-sided 49-13 win over California.

UCLA TROUNCES CAL—

332 of them coming via a school rushing record.

Not only did the Bruin single game mark tumble on the slippery turf of Memorial Stadium, but so did the one-season standard. UCLA has 2,672 yards in seven games to 2,668 by the 1946 Rose Bowl club.

Pounding the Bears into submission were Kermit Johnson, Rob Scribner, John Sciarra and James McAlister.

Kermit, resembling a runaway F-111, totalled 107 yards on only four carries in the first quarter, scoring twice within a five-minute span. His game total was 139 at a 13.9 clip.

Scribner came off the bench midway through the first period when Mark Harmon was knocked dizzy, and he proved he's the most productive second string quarterback in the world.

Playing the rest of the first half and seeing only spot duty between Harmon and Sciarra after intermission, Rob darted and weaved 101 yards on 13 carries, scoring on a 48-yard rugby-like scamper in the fourth quarter.

Sciarra bolted 71 yards on a wide receiver reverse and gathered 28 other yards on quarterback keepers.

McAlister was the Bruin workhorse up the middle, making 21 trips into Bear country for 87 yards. But his blocking was just as instrumental, if not more so, in keeping Cal off balance.

The Bruin game plan was to work the outside heavily and when the Bear secondary came up, to concentrate on the run, zap them with the pass.

The outside attack worked so well, the Bruins stuck with their average of seven tosses, completing three for 63 yards.

Twice in the game's opening minutes, Harmon went heavenward. His first went 33 yards into the willing arms of Brad Lyman on a third-and-eight play at the UCLA 25.

The next down, from the Cal 42, was a Harmon bomb that sailed high over the head of a wide-open Jack Lassner. That was the last thing Harmon remembered.

He committed the first of seven Bruin fumbles (five of which they lost) three plays later. When UCLA regained possession, Mark danced 23 yards through left tackle, but suffered a blow to the head, and in came Scribner.

On his third snap from center, Rob made a split-second pitch to Johnson before being spilled and watched intently as Kermit turned the corner at left end, eluded tackler Bob Kampa and bolted 45 yards to get the Bruins on the scoreboard.

After a missed field goal, McAlister tried the right side, Randy Tyler the middle and Scribner around left end to set up a 55-yard explosion by Johnson between guard Steve Klosterman and tackle Al Oliver on the right side.

UCLA cruised 46 yards in five plays for its third TD after Jimmy Allen made the first of his two interceptions seconds into the second period.

A 19-yard Scribner-to-Gene Bleymaier pass set up McAlister's dive from the one.

Down 21-0, Cal abandoned its running attack, which at times proved tough on a Bruin line that has a tendency to relax with a substantial lead.

Five times Cruze went to the air, on screens, curls over the middle or deep to Sweeney as the Bears moved from their own 20 to the Bruin 21.

There Sweeney, who caught six for 148 yards and one score — his record 13th as a Bear — dropped a perfect third down toss. Then Cal was flagged for delay of game on fourth-and-four and Randy Wersching's 33-yard field goal attempt sailed wide.

From that point, even the pikers sitting high in the trees on Tightwad Hill knew what Cal's intentions were. There was little doubt once Bartkowski entered the fray with 7½ minutes of the first half remaining.

The Bruins gave up a TD on his first march, but little else until the reserves were nicked midway through the fourth quarter.

Harmon played the entire third stanza and one series into the fourth, taking UCLA 69 yards in 11 plays. He spun over left tackle for the score himself. Then the Bruins developed a case of dropsy.

Efren Herrera's ensuing onside kick recovery was wasted when McAlister fumbled at the Cal 36 and Sciarra's 71-yard reverse went for naught when Russell Charles coughed it up at the Cal eight.

Cal tallied after that turnover, but grew desperate with a 35-13 deficit. Linebacker Herschel Ramsey snatched a Bartkowski bullet with 4:17 to play, but Sciarra fumbled at the Cal 12.

Bartkowski fired five more times before Alton McSween recorded the Bruins' fifth interception and returned it 75 yards for the final touchdown in the closing seconds.

Navy hands Air Force first defeat

It was the 16th-ranked Falcons' first defeat of the year and evened the Middies' record at 3-3.

Air Force came from behind with 6:36 left in the game on a 60-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Rich Haynie to split end Bob Farr. That made the score 17-14.

Then Navy took the ball on its own 20 and drove to the Air Force 5-yard line, with Howard carrying six times. Quarterback Al Glenny pitched and Howard cut inside two tacklers to score the winning touchdown.

Air Force scored first on a one-yard sneak by Haynie in the first period. Falcon freshman kicker Dave Lawson kicked a 37-yard field goal early in the second period before Navy running back Cleveland Cooper scored from 32 yards out to make the score 10-7.

Fresh Pepper surprises at Oak Tree

Fresh Pepper rewarded her owner's $5,000 gamble Saturday as she charged from last place under a masterful ride by jockey Jerry Lambert to win the $99,825 Oak Leaf Stakes before 26,977 onlookers.

Fresh Pepper, made eligible to the mile and one-sixteenth event only last Monday by payment of a $5,000 supplementary fee by her owner, Max Gluck, overhauled 4-5 favored Sphere in the final sixteenth and then drew away to tally by 2½ lengths in 1:43 4-5.

Sleek and Fleet, second choice in the betting at 5-2, missed runnerup honors by only a neck, with Steady Course fourth in the field of nine two-year-old fillies.

The winner, a bay daughter of B. Major and Rare Bouquet bred in Kentucky by the Elmendorf farm, earned $59,895 and rewarded her backers with $19, $5.40 and $3 across the board. Sphere, the odds-on favorite on the strength of a 10-length victory in her one and only start two weeks ago, paid $3.20 and $2.40, while Sleek and Fleet returned $2.60.

The Oak Leaf Stakes marked only the third outing for Fresh Pepper.

"I was told she wasn't real quick out of the gate," said Lambert, "but that she'd turn in on the last quarter, Gordon (trainer Campbell) said that if she was far back the first part of it not to get in a hurry. When I had to take up at the start, it didn't help any, but she's a small filly and gathered herself together quickly.

"Around the five-sixteenths I was letting her start her run gradually and had to steady for a few strides because it looked like they were bunching up pretty good up front. When I let her run, it was just a matter of finding racing room."

Shoemaker made no excuses for Sphere, saying, "She just ran out of air."

Fresh Pepper provided Lambert with his third win of the afternoon as he moved into a tie for the top spot in the Oak Tree standings with apprentice John Ramirez. Each has 15 winners.

Two jockeys were spilled shortly after the start of the third race when even-money favorite Thoroly Bold bolted through the temporary railing extending out of the six-furlong chute.

Neither Fernando Toro, who was aboard Thoroly Bold, nor Manuel Ortiz, who was unseated when Royal Claimer ducked away from the bouncing rail after it was hit by Thoroly Bold, was injured.

FRESH PEPPER broke to the inside and was shuffled back, lunged to the final turn, rallied along the outside to wear down SPHERE in midstretch and went on to draw away. SPHERE broke in stride to share the early lead, dashed back and lost ground midway while moving to the outside, rallied into the stretch to be first then lugged inward and gave way to the winner. SLEEK AND FLEET moved nearer between horses on the far turn, responded in the drive and finished willingly. STEADY COURSE went to climbing early, settled on the far turn, raced in hand while blocked at the five-sixteenth then could make little impact when clear. WIND SPIRIT took up on the first turn, raced wide and tired in the drive. KING'S EDGE alternated with the lead to the upper stretch and weakened. JUST A FLIRT caused crowding on the first turn, lost ground and gave out.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Just call it a 'looking week'

If you don't care for power and sail or fishing or hunting this week, there's plenty to see. Today especially is one for looking, with two outdoor shows, the Long Beach Sailboat Show at the Long Beach Arena and the Great Western Outdoor Show at the Great Western Exhibit Center, just off Atlantic near the Santa Ana Freeway.

JOANNE STEADMAN
Great Western hostess

The Sailboat Show is of the utmost importance to Long Beach because it is here and in the adjoining Los Angeles Harbor that much of the Southern California racing and cruising takes place. You will find boats to match your needs and your pocketbook at the Sailboat Show. If you want a tiny Sabot or a similar boat, you will find all at the Arena. If you want an ocean-going racing or family cruising vessel, those, too, will be there.

I had a quick look at the show before this was written on Friday, and it appeared that more boats and more accessory exhibits are there than ever before. Whether we sail or ever do doesn't matter: there is something about a new sailboat that attracts any red-blooded outdoorsman.

The show opens at noon today and closes at 7 p. m. For the remainder of the week, with the exception of Saturday and Sunday, the hours will be 5 p. m. to 11 p.m. On next Saturday, the hours will be noon to 11 p. m. , and on Sunday, the hours will be the same as those today.

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED in speedboat racing and water-skiing, the second of the two-day Boat Racing Internationale championships will be on at the Long Beach Marine Stadium, with events starting at noon. Gates, however, open early in the morning. Danny Churchill, holder of the speed record in water-skiing, is due to try to break his own record.

While on the subject of water-skiing I would like to make a correction in a column that ran last week. My information was in error. I reported that Churchill had made one run in the barefoot skiing event and that he made 86 miles per hour but couldn't back up the run.

Actually, the skier was Craig Vestermark, Long Beach fireman. One of these days you will read that Vestermark has set a new world record and, most likely, it will be one that will stand for a long time.

Craig made one run of 96 miles per hour at Ming Lake, Bakersfield, but unfortunately, somebody forgot to set the official timer. The unofficial timer didn't count. Later, he made another run of 86 miles per hour, but weather conditions made it impossible for him to back it up with another run.

Sorry about that erroneous report, Craig, and I hope you make that new one. I also hope that I am around to report it accurately. The record is now held by a young Australian who made 79 miles per hour at the Marine Stadium here and successfully backed it up.

NOW A FEW WORDS ABOUT THE Great Western Show, which runs the same days (Oct. 20-29) as the Sailboat Show. The shows certainly are not in competition with each other. If you like sailboats, go to the Long Beach Arena. If you like smaller craft, principally power (racing and cruising), recreational vehicles and all kinds of camping equipment, go to the Great Western Exhibition Center.

Cathy Rigby, the tiny American acrobatic star in the recent Olympics, paid a surprise visit there on the press prevue night and posed with the SCATS (Southern California Aero Team) that is staging an acrobatic show there daily.

The West High School Band of Anaheim also was there and again Saturday for the opening of the show on Anaheim Day.

There are many giveaways at the Great Western Show, such as the Portasphere, an enormous outdoor housing unit that can be taken out of the trunk of a car and put up in a few hours.

Surprisingly, there are hundreds of recreational vehicles on display even though the RVA-TCA joint show is scheduled for early November at Dodger Stadium.

The show is being produced by Paul Chastain, a Long Beach resident and a former flier with the USAF. And speaking of flying, there's a six-place, jet-powered helicopter at the show which takes passengers up for five minutes at a nominal fee.

MARLIN ARE SMACKING THE BAITS on the Avalon Bank and also off the east end of Catalina Island. Jerry and Virginia Chrisman took their oldtime friends, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cummings, to Catalina last Monday. They tried unsuccessfully to bait a broadbill, then finally found a marlin and fed him a Jed Welsh Super Psychodelic. Jack took the rod and boated a 128-pounder.

Virginia hooked up the next day with the same kind of lure and boated a marlin that weighed 142 pounds. They were returning just as Don Brady was leaving in his boat the Carolyn Sue. When Brady, who lives on his boat with his wife, hears reports of marlin on the ship's radio, he pulls out in a hurry and goes fishing, even if he has to do it alone.

In this case he did it alone. Using a Super Psychodelic, he baited the first marlin he saw and battled it for one hour and 10 minutes on 50-pound-test line. As everybody who has fished and caught marlin knows, taking a billfish of any size, running a boat and then doing your own gaffing isn't easy, so Don should have a hand for his efforts. Ken Lockman weighed it at the Long Beach Marina at 172 pounds.

Other boaters have reported seeing marlin in unusual numbers, especially for November, so it may be that we are due for a continuation of the run we have been having for the last two months. Water conditions are good, with the temperature that marlin like.

Entries pouring in for Queen Mary Open

Entries continue to pour in for the first Long Beach Queen Mary Open golf tournament slated Nov. 1-5 at El Dorado.

"We're up to 160 with more than one week to go," beamed host pro Monty Blodgett, who is doubling as the tournament chairman in the $20,000 event.

Bob Clark of Santa Ana, a former touring pro who won the Spring Valley Open last week, filed his entry along with Rick Talt of Whittier, Rich Sims of Fullerton and PGA Tour "satellite" winner Jim Gilbert of San Diego.

The list of young pros already was rich with the likes of Greg Pitzer, Bob Unger, Jim Blanks, Greg Trompas, Alan Tapie and Gary McCord, all of whom filed their entries earlier in the week.

Another talented club pro, Don Fairfield of Eldorado in Palm Springs, sent in his entry Saturday along with Dick Carmody, a Long Beach product now working in a club in Detroit.

Blodgett had hoped to lured 200 pros or amateurs and it appears that he will far exceed that figure. He should pick up dozens of players following next Monday's qualifying at the Sahara Invitational, and after the Friday cut at that tournament.

"I'm hoping some of the better young players from the tour won't want to go to San Antonio," says Blodgett. The San Antonio Open, a tour event, is running concurrently with the Queen Mary Open.

The tournament begins with a celebrity pro-am on Nov. 1, then comes split qualifying on Nov. 2-3 for the regular tournament. The field will be cut to 90 for the final two rounds on Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 4-5.

The pro-am features Dean Martin, Jack Lemmon, Peter Falk, Robert Stack, Lawrence Welk, Jack LaLanne and former footballer Jim Brown. Jimmy Stewart, James Garner, Efrem Zimbalist and Fred McMurray have said they will enter if their schedules permit.

A season ticket for the five days sells for $6. If you attend the pro-am only, the fee is $3. Tickets are available in all area golf shops.

Trojan Club to host Pac-8 grid official

Dave Kamanski, Pac-8 football official, will be featured speaker Tuesday night at the Long Beach Trojan Club meeting at the Velvet Turtle.

Kamanski will show a film during the social hour at 6:30. Dinner will follow at 7:30.

'LOADED' ROCKETS OPEN PLAY TODAY

By CHUCK MEDICK

If this isn't the Long Beach Rockets' best year in the Southern California Metropolitan Winter League for a long while, it's not because the material is not available.

Ed Crosby of the St. Louis Cardinals will return to hold down second base for manager Jack Graham while Bob Grich of the Baltimore Orioles will be at shortstop.

Tony Muser of the Red Sox chain will be at first base and there are at least four candidates for third base.

Ray Brown of Kansas City will probably be the ace of the pitching staff but many questions are yet to be decided yet.

Graham's team opens the season today at 1:30 entertaining the Dodger Minors at Blair Field. The Dodger office has indicated that Bill Grabarkewitz will start at second base and Lee Lacy will be at third for the visitors.

Minorities rise, white pupils drop

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Education Editor

Minority enrollments increased again this year in Long Beach schools while numbers of Caucasian pupils continued to decline.

An annual districtwide racial survey, required since 1966 by state or federal education agencies, shows a minority enrollment of 22.2 per cent, or 14,558 kindergarten-through-12th graders. Last year's figures: 20.3 per cent and 14,023.

"Other whites," a statistical term for persons not categorized as "Spanish-surname," Oriental, Filipino and other minorities" or American Indian, dropped to 77.8 per cent from last year's 79.7 per cent. There were about 50,013 "Anglos" attending last month, a net loss of some 3,266 from 1971's 53,279.

Census figures showed some 65,523 students in regular K-12th grade classes.

Three demographic trends seemingly emerge from this study of local population patterns and other related data.

Minority pupils currently outnumber Anglos in 4 of 5 schools located in an historically cosmopolitan area west of the Los Angeles River. And in Hudson Elementary, the single exception, Anglos comprise only 52.6 per cent of the student body.

Various citywatchers say blacks and other minorities presently are relocating on the westside, an area described as attractive for nonresidents seeking homes in locales served by good schools. Statistical information seemingly bears out this view.

Total enrollments for the five recognized minority categories range from 59.1 per cent at Webster Elementary to 62.5 at Garfield, 63.3 in Stephens Junior High and 68.1 per cent for Muir School.

Another trend may be reflected in those nine Long Beach schools alternately described as "inner city," disadvantaged or "Title 1"—for the federal aid they receive. These are facilities which in recent years have enrolled large and growing numbers of black pupils.

Now, the ethnic survey indicates, each of the nine has "lost" pupils of all races this year. And all but two have declined in Negro enrollees.

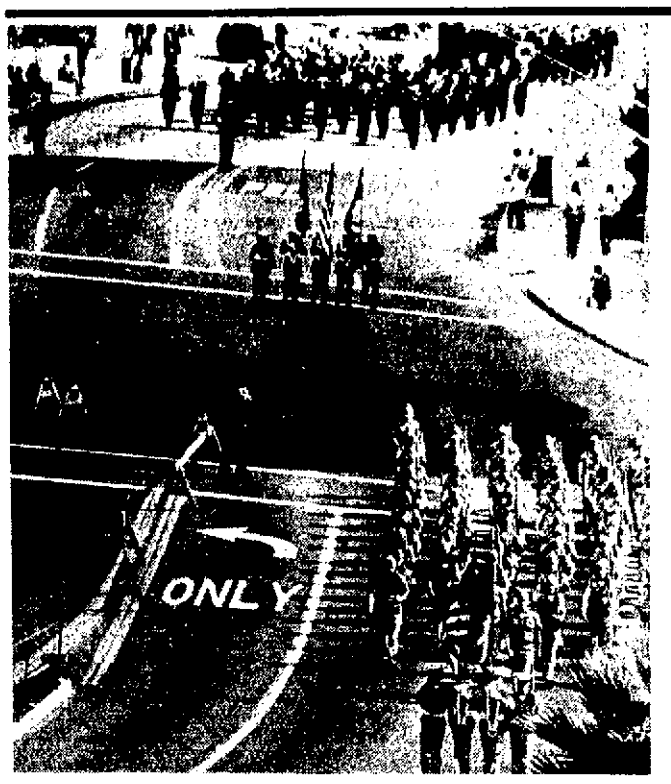

Overall dips at the facilities range from a low of 24 fewer pupils to as many as 120. Among blacks, the smallest decline was 12 students and this figure ranged upward to 75; the two schools with black increases were only 6 and 16 higher than last year.

Since only about 4 of the district's 55 elementary schools currently educate no black pupils, it would seem as though the net total of 230 "missing" black youngsters currently are participating in Long Beach's new-in-1971 voluntary transfer program. This increasingly popular plan permits minority youngsters to attend any school with available space.

Similarly, there are pupils from one or more racial groups attending each of the district's 15 junior highs and 5 general purpose high schools, the survey notes. Poly High, with a 2,780-member student body, educates the largest numbers of minorities: 863 blacks, 285 with Spanish-surnames, 152 Orientals, 138 Filipino and other minorities and 7 American indians.

A third trend seemingly emerging from this and another statistical study indicates that Long Beach, slowly but steadily gaining minority pupils, still ranks well behind California's other large cities in this respect.

Statewide figures for 1971 from Sacramento show that Los Angeles city schools were 52.3 per cent minority; San Francisco, 68 per cent; Oakland, 75.7; San Diego, 26.7 per cent; San Jose, 29.9.

150,000 see 'Peace with Honor' parade

Under the banner, "Peace with Honor," 75 units of servicemen, veterans and civilian officials and musicians marched downtown along Ocean Boulevard past cheering crowds Saturday in Long Beach's annual Veterans' Day Parade. Long Beach Police Capt. Forrest Smith said an estimated 150,000 persons lined the boulevard between Falcon and Elm Avenues to view the two-hour parade, one of six in the nation with Defense Department and Veterans' Administration participation. Prominent among parading units were the event's grand marshal, Lt. Gen. Richard T. Cassidy, commander of the Army Air Defense Command, and Mrs. Regina Coughlin, of Philadelphia, president of the American Gold Star Mothers. Last group along the parade route, but not a part of actual parade, was a contingent of more than 30 Vietnam Veterans Against the War. Military participants in the parade included bands and marching units from El Toro Marine Air Base, Fort MacArthur and the Long Beach Naval Station.

Fare option nets more passengers

United ferry tale continues happily

By HERB SHANNON
Travel Editor

SANDY COFFMAN
. . . First Class Fare

Once upon a time one of several airlines serving the world's busiest and lowest-cost commuter corridor — Los Angeles-San Francisco — decided to compete by offering the choice of a 36 per cent higher fare for first class service.

And promptly went broke, right?

Wrong. After more than nine months of testing the $16.50 coach and $26 first class combination, United Air Lines is ready to settle down and live happily ever after with the dual fare formula.

Not only did the higher fare attract 57,622 eager paying customers in the first seven months after it was inaugurated on Feb. 1, it is also credited by United with increasing the number of revenue passengers per plane by 14.6 per cent over the same period last year, and a whopping 28 per cent total revenue climb.

In addition, the happy result has proved a morale-builder for management and line personnel in United's decentralized Western operating division — one of three established throughout the national system by the airline's new and fast-moving president, Edward Carlson, after his arrival on the scene in late 1970.

"It's referred to as the first divisional success story," says Robert L. West, manager of market development for UAL's Western Division. "It was invented here and it's working well."

On most of the UAL 45-50 minute Los Angeles-San Francisco commuter flights, the $9.50 difference between coach and first-class fare means a wider seat up front, two cocktails, a dab of cheese dip, a bag of potato chips and a sack of roasted peanuts. On flights near meal hours, there is a sandwich alternative.

"What more can you do on this run?" asked a regular first class section customer on a recent flight. "There's only about 11 minutes of level flying."

In spite of the minimal opportunities to demonstrate superlatives on the commuter route, United officials are convinced there is a definite first class market.

"We know it," said West. "Throughout our nationwide system, there's a 10 per cent preference for first class. It applies here, too."

Have a nice Christmas?

HAVE WE HAD Christmas yet?

It used to be in December, but the way things have been going it's hard to tell what will happen this year.

I may have missed it.

Congress and television have confused everything.

A couple of years ago the lawmakers decided that what this country needs is more time to loaf.

They came up with a set of three-day weekends by shifting a number of helpless holidays around so they would fall on Mondays.

WE HAD Columbus Day three days early on Oct. 9.

Tomorrow we will have Veterans Day nineteen days early.

At this rate, Christmas may fall a day or so ahead of Thanksgiving.

Have you noticed the number of toy ads on TV?

It's hard to turn on the set without finding the screen full of screaming kids who are playing games instead of doing their homework.

One commercial shows a couple of rough boys running model airplanes on tracks made of string.

According to this ad, your living room has a runway a hundred yards longer than the biggest one at L.A. International.

Another game was obviously invented by the sloppy partner in the Odd Couple.

It shows a gang of young thugs throwing a plastic basketball at a hoop pinned on the wall right over the middle of the divan.

The housewife would have to referee this game, blowing her whistle for timeouts to vacuum up fractured vases and pick the glass out of picture frames.

However, it would be a good way to roust the Old Man out of his after-dinner nap in case there would be some good reason to have him awake.

ONE NEW GAME employs what is obviously a gambling device. The object is to toss a ball into a lucky number.

So far, none of the TV kids has won this game. The winner is a big bully who appears to be a visiting uncle who has come in for the winter from Sleepy Eye, Minnesota.

He has been practicing for years at the county fair.

Another commercial pictures a little boy and a little girl zigzagging through the woods on toys designed for parents who want their children to get lost.

Each of their mounts is copied from the locomotion of the inchworm. It offers good training for the child who wants to grow up and not go anywhere.

Little mothers will find this year's dolls more sophisticated than ever.

One appears to be a long-haired fugitive from a commune near Big Sur. She plunks out her own accompaniment as she wiggles through a tune that will never get higher than 24th on the hot disc list.

This is just one of the educational toys.

SANTA SHOWED UP on a commercial at least two weeks ago and so far we have been treated to "Silent Night" fourteen times.

A recheck of the calendar shows that Christmas is supposed to be on a Monday this year so we can make something out of it.

However, it is hard to tell one three-day weekend from another and in the shuffle we may have lost track of the Lord's Birthday.

As Little Orphan Annie says hark!

I think I just heard Guy Lombardo's record of "Auld Lang Syne".

Pardon me while I till another slipper with champagne.

Nixon deserves re-election

President Nixon's successes have been dramatic, more dramatic perhaps than those of any other president since Franklin Roosevelt.

His imposition of wage and price controls did much to bring inflation under control.

His handling of world monetary policy did much to bring the United States back into world trade as an equal competitor of other nations.

His deft improvement of relations with the Soviet Union and his spectacular improvement of relations with mainland China aided world stability and our Vietnam peace negotiations.

His skillful combination of diplomacy and military pressure in Indochina has now brought us close to peace with honor.

AGAINST THIS record, Senator George McGovern offers stands that smack of desperation politics.

He has been indecisive about his vice presidential candidate, indecisive about his welfare program, indecisive about his tax program and both clumsy and cynical in his campaign.

Where flexibility is called for, McGovern has been inflexible. He would withdraw troops from Europe, he would make drastic defense cuts and, above all, he would immediately withdraw all U.S. forces from Vietnam.

It is this last inflexibility that McGovern has made the center of his campaign in the last few days.

BECAUSE HIS HANDLING of the Vietnam issue is central to his style as a politician, it may give some foretaste of what he would be like as a president. It is thus worth examining in some detail.

Take it chronologically.

In 1965, George McGovern praised U.S. air strikes into North Vietnam and declared that "we cannot now abruptly withdraw and leave our South Vietnamese ally at the mercy of the guerrilla forces."

In 1966 he called on the United States to exercise patience "for whatever time is necessary to secure an honorably negotiated settlement."

In 1967 he declared, "I am not now, nor have I ever been, an advocate of unilateral withdrawal of our troops from Vietnam."

In 1968 he proposed to the Democratic convention's platform committee that 250,000 American troops be left in Vietnam and withdrawn only "as time and events dictate."

In 1969 he called for total withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam.

What had happened?

A Republican President had been elected, and George McGovern was preparing to run against him.

POLITICAL considerations had led him to ignore his own advice of two years earlier that the Vietnam war "is not an issue to be exploited for political purposes.

He has been exploiting it to the hilt, even in the midst of U.S. negotiations to bring the war to an honorable end.

Contrast that with Richard Nixon's statements on the war when he ran for president in 1968.

NIXON SUGGESTED that the Johnson administration's policies "needed correction in several directions." He listed them:

— "Putting emphasis on programs on the nonmilitary character of the war."

— "Using diplomatic and economic leverage to enlist the Soviet Union on the side of peace in Vietnam."

— "Adequately informing the American people so that we could have more unity in the country behind the war."

— Using "our military, and particularly our air power, traumatically and diplomatically."

THOSE WERE ACCURATE forecasts of the directions in which, as President, Richard Nixon would move U.S. policy.

Beyond stating them, Nixon declined to make the war a campaign issue.

As he explained, "We are engaged, as I understand it, in very delicate negotiations ... I am not privy to the intelligence information as to how those negotiations are proceeding. Anything that I might suggest in this area could prove to be highly irresponsible if there was information that indicated there was a chance for success which I was not aware of."

How does that compare with McGovern's shrill insistence in the present campaign that there can be no chance of success in negotiations?

How does that compare with McGovern's insistence that he would not even try for success but would stop the bombing, withdraw all our forces, pull out all salvageable military equipment and then count on Hanoi to send home the prisoners of war?

How many Americans share McGovern's belief that "begging is better than bombing" and that unilateral troop withdrawals are better than negotiations?

McGOVERN SAYS he is satisfied to have his campaign succeed or fail on the war issue. On that issue, as on all the major issues of domestic policy and defense policy, it seems clear that the McGovern campaign not only fails but fails disastrously.

George McGovern is a decent man, led astray perhaps by ambition. We have no doubt that he has served South Dakota well as a senator. We would not like to see his political career destroyed by the ineptitude of his present campaign or the recklessness of his current proposals in areas of domestic and foreign policy in which his experience is limited and his interest is recent.

But we would fear for America's future if that campaign put him in the White House and put his proposals into effect.

Richard Nixon has been in the White House, and the worst thing his worst enemies can say about him is that he has adopted Democratic programs when he saw they were what the country needed and what the people wished.

To those of us who don't believe that all political wisdom originates with either Republicans or Democrats, that is no reproach.

RICHARD NIXON IS a man of the center. Most Americans find themselves in the center most of the time. That has been the secret of Nixon's success in elections and in the White House.

We trust that perfectly open secret will serve President Nixon and the nation well on November 7 and for the next four years.

We wholeheartedly recommend his re-election.

Death penalty: Where is the logic

SACRAMENTO — Societies have always killed lawbreakers in the name of either punishment or self-protection, and for as long as they have done it the morality of the practice has been questioned.

For opponents of capital punishment, the question "Why should society be allowed to do something it prohibits?" has never been answered satisfactorily.

THIS YEAR, legalized killing has suffered technical defeats at the hands of the supreme courts of California and the United States. On Nov. 7, the people of California will be asked to confirm or reject the state court's contention that the premeditated taking of a human life by society "degrades (and) dehumanizes" that society.

All the nation will be watching the California vote on Prop. 17. If the death penalty initiative is approved, particularly if it is approved by a large margin, it is possible that the vote will stimulate a national campaign to amend the U.S. Constitution and overturn the federal court's June 29 decision.

For voters trying to keep an open mind on the subject and consider the opposing arguments objectively, reaching a decision is difficult. Proponents of the death penalty argue that it is a deterrent to crime. Opponents say statistics prove that in nations and states that have abolished legalized killing the homicide rate is no higher, and is usually lower, than in jurisdictions that retain the punishment.

OPPONENTS QUOTE the Bible, and offer other sources of philosophical opposition, but proponents also quote the Bible and offer philosophical sources of their own.

Basing an argument for either side on moral grounds is difficult, then, because there are respected authorities supporting both positions.

There is another basis for opposition, however. If a law, to be appropriate and effective, must be logical and must be uniformly applied, then the death penalty is neither appropriate nor effective.

For example, Sirhan Sirhan and Arthur Bremer both awaited an opportunity, then took advantage of nearly identical situations to fire guns point-blank at their intended victims.

Sirhan succeeded. Robert Kennedy died.

Bremer failed. George Wallace lives, crippled for life.

SIRHAN'S PROSECUTOR asked the jury to impose the severest penalty permitted by law; death. The jury did so.

Bremer's prosecutor asked the jury to impose the severest penalty permitted by law: life imprisonment. The jury sentenced Bremer to 62 years.

Both men intended to kill, both men tried to kill. Yet society would spare the life of the one who, accidentally, failed. Where is the logic?

One might argue, then, that the death penalty would also be appropriate for someone convicted of assault with intent to commit murder.

Then, Sirhan and Bremer would have been equal before the law, as their intent was equal.

But there is yet another factor that might have kept them from being treated equally before the law.

And this factor, if it is acknowledged to be a deficiency in the law, can never be remedied.

ATTORNEYS HAVE different skills. Some prosecutors are more capable than others. Some defense attorneys are better skilled than others.

In Long Beach, in 1964, a prosecutor of great skill persuaded a jury that a 23-year-old killer should be punished by death. The man, a father of four, estranged from his family, with no previous record of violence or criminality, had been convicted of the frenzied, motiveless slaying of his elderly landlady.

Bob Schmidt

At about the same time, also in Long Beach, a public defender of great skill persuaded a jury to show mercy to a man convicted of killing a woman. The man had taken the woman from a bar into an alley and strangled her, either before, during or after intercourse. He was sentenced to life imprisonment, even after the jury had been told that once before he had taken a woman from a bar and strangled her in similar circumstances, and had served nine years of a life sentence.

Mercy for a two-time killer, no mercy for a man with no previous record of lawlessness! Where is the logic? How was justice uniformly applied?

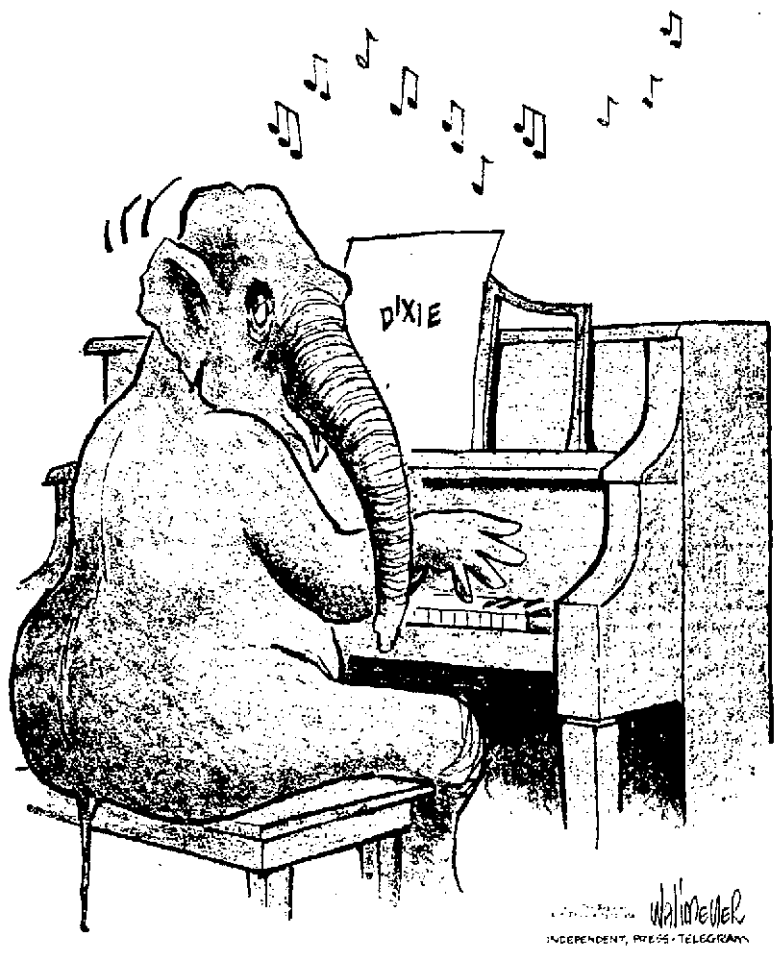

Perhaps, then, the option should be taken from juries, and for certain crimes the punishment, upon conviction, should be death. There are four such sections in the penal code today.

BUT PROSECUTIONS are rare, and convictions even more rare. Juries today are not permitted to contemplate the possible punishments when they consider the guilt or innocence of a defendant, but it is human nature that if they know the only punishment upon conviction is death they will demand a greater degree of proof of the prosecution than they would in a non-capital case.

And again, the skill of the opposing attorneys will have much to do with what evidence is presented and how a jury views that evidence.

The greatest irrationality of all, however, is that a "yes" vote on Prop. 17 will allow the state to do what it specifically prohibits citizens from doing, deliberately kill a human being.

Prop. 17 should be rejected.

Lousy tricks, lousy spelling add up

WASHINGTON — It didn't seem remarkable when it happened during 1971. Now, with the Washington Post's disclosure about dirty tricks on presidential candidates, it becomes part of a mosaic.

Newly arrived in Washington in 1971, I received one day in the mail a Xeroxed copy of a memorandum. The envelope bore no return address, nor was there any indication of the source on the sheet enclosed.

THE MESSAGE was simple: A full-scale operating campaign headquarters was hidden behind unmarked doors at 1660 L Street N.W. pushing Sen. Ed Muskie's unannounced candidacy.

Those employed there were named and, in some cases, their salaries were listed. Names of men who had contributed up to $25,000 to finance the headquarters were included. One of them was Arnold Parker of United Artists.

The memo implied there was something furtive about the headquarters and, moreover, that it was secretly financed.

I TOOK A CAB to the address, knocked on the door and subsequently found myself seated in an office with Robert Nelson, a Muskie aide. He confirmed the facts in the memorandum, provided corrections (one of them was his salary) and also provided clippings of stories previously written about the operation.

It was so secretive, Nelson added drily, that Muskie had reported the contributions to Packer and others to the clerk of the Senate although not required by law to do it. (Muskie changed that policy after becoming a declared candidate and kept donors' names secret.)

Several months later Muskie announced he was running. Soon another unmarked envelope arrived, slipped under my office door by a messenger.

INSIDE WAS A copy of what was unmistakably an internal memorandum prepared by someone on the Muskie staff, later identified as Anna Navarro. In somewhat cynical terms, it pointed out that Muskie could gain free television exposure at a crucial time in the pre-primary period by holding hearings in California on tax relief for the elderly — campaigning while doing Senate committee business, in effect.

WILLIAM BROOM
National Bureau Chief

Among others who received the memo and wrote about it were syndicated columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak.

Last week, the Washington Post listed the incident as one of a series of mishaps that Muskie described as a "systematic campaign of sabotage" against his bid for the presidential nomination. He related them to the Post's disclosures that federal investigators had uncovered an apparent spying and sabotage campaign against Democrats.

These were attributed to so-called offensive security efforts by presidential aides to help the President get re-elected.

"We could never pinpoint who was doing it. It was vicious," Muskie said.

THE POST'S DISCLOSURES and Muskie's recollection of the Navarro memorandum rang a bell.

The one extraordinary thing about the two anonymous envelopes I had received was that my name and the name of my newspaper group had both been misspelled.

The only other envelopes I received addressed in exactly the same incorrect way during that time period came from an office at the White House Executive Office Building.

When the Post's disclosures turned on the light last week for me, I queried the former occupant of that White House office.

He chuckled.

"WELL, THEY WERE factual," he said triumphantly, neither confirming nor denying the suspicion I voiced.

And he was right. They were factual — except on the matter of Nelson's salary.

Letters to the editor

Voters don't care

EDITOR:

The voters seem to show no concern about:

Proven corruption, as found in the Watergate incident.

The attempt to wreck the two-party system by deceptive telephone calls.

The blind faith that Nixon is trying to end the war when he is still supporting the corrupt dictator, Thieu, who puts all his opponents in prison, tortures students that are against him, etc.

The constant acquisition of more power by the President and the abdication of responsibility by Congress.

Why aren't people outraged by the killing of Vietnamese and the destruction of that country by bombing, both North and South? They seem to justify everything we do by saying the North is worse.

We seem to show no concern that so many other countries condemn us for our actions. We are an arrogant people and the teachings of Jesus seem to mean little to us.

Maybe the campaign lasts so long we are just tired.

Seal Beach JESSIE T. JENKINS

Wrong investigation

EDITOR:

I have just read that Sen. Edward Kennedy wants to lead a full investigation of the Watergate affair.

Why is it the senator did not want the same investigation of the incident at Chappaquiddick? It seems strange to me that when a girl was killed it would not merit more of an investigation than a wiretapping.

Long Beach JOHN P. AVERY

Power to the people?

EDITOR:

We need fewer power plants. We need power shortages.

We also need higher prices and higher costs for the production of power.

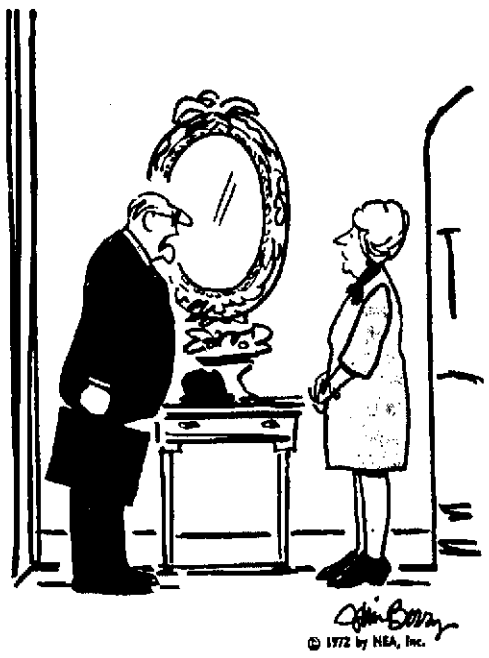

If this sounds totally insane, it may well be quite sensible.

Indefinite escalation of power production is not sane.

But then, unfortunately, since man is not a rational animal (as he irrationally presumes). . . .

Press censorship: It can happen here

By JOHN S. KNIGHT

More years ago than one cares to remember, I was president of the Inter-American Press Association — a hemispheric organization devoted to advancement of a free press throughout the Americas.

In those days, the IAPA was the only effective voice to be raised against nondemocratic governments for curbing freedom of expression in Latin America.

Censorship — either direct or indirect — was the rule rather than the exception. Expropriation of newspaper properties, the jailing of their editors, involuntary exile and outright suppression of any views contrary to government dictum were commonplace occurrences.

IN SOME instances, the IAPA was successful in persuading Latin American rulers that such practices were harmful to their own self-interests; that world opinion was turning against them even as they were seeking economic assistance from other nations for their own development.

In a number of other pleas for common justice, we failed. The classic case in the early 1950s was dictator Juan Peron's infamous take-over of La Prensa of Buenos Aires, one of the world's famous newspapers edited by the distinguished Dr. Alberto Gainza Paz.

As president of the Inter-American Press Association, I talked on this subject at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, after declining an invitation to visit President Peron. In view of the sad plight of the press in so many countries today, you may find excerpts from this address to be of background interest.

I have but recently come from Buenos Aires, a truly magnificent city where wide boulevards, vast parks and impressive public buildings attest to the vision of those men who planned well for the future in the days when freedom was still the priceless heritage of the patriots who founded the Republic.

It was only when one looked beyond this beautiful facade that true understanding began. Then could be sensed immediately the oppressive hand of the police state which has completely throttled freedom of expression, made a farce of legislative procedure and violated the sanctity of the courts.

In the Argentina of today, a seeker of current information must depend either upon newspapers which are open apologists for the government, or on those which double-talk their way out of any direct criticism of the dictatorship.

The few courageous editors and publishers who have dared to oppose the state by proclaiming the truth now find themselves, like Gainza Paz and David Nichel Torino, unlawfully dispossessed of their newspapers and cast into physical exile, or its intellectual counterpart, from the country they love.

Thus the voices of freedom have been muted and a captive press crawls on its belly before the dictator for the dubious privilege of earning a living by printing six to eight pages daily of innocuous Peronista pap.

Such is the fear of the state.

Dr. Gainza Paz has mentioned my statement last year in Mexico City that I would not visit Peron until "La Prensa" was returned to its rightful owners, that I would under no circumstances cooperate in the deception of public opinion by permitting such a visit to be used for propaganda purposes.

I have lived up to that pledge.

IT IS A FRIGHTFUL thing to see history books being rewritten to glorify the Perons of the past; to witness a whole new generation being indoctrinated in the schools to never forget that Peron is the state, and prevented from learning the meaning of their own republic's rich tradition of priceless freedoms.

But men are mortal — even dictators, and a nation which has known freedom can rise again to break its chains and repudiate the subjugation of liberty.

So long as men like Gainza Paz, exemplars of truth and courage, unbowed by adversity and unbroken in spirit, refuse to bend the knee to oppressors of freedom, our faith in the right must never waiver.

La Prensa will rise again. It will be an even greater La Prensa, strengthened in sinew and conviction by the fires of adversity, to proclaim once more the ideals and concept of human dignity which all of us in this audience hold so dear.

With that day's dawn, the cause of liberty will be illuminated wherever the tiniest spark of freedom still remains.

AS I SPOKE that evening, we knew that events were moving against Peron. Yet it was not until Sept. 16, 1955, that civilians, clericals and elements of the armed forces unseated Peron and sent him into exile. A provisional government, later headed by Gen. Pedro Aramburu restored civil liberties, dissolved the Peronist party and returned expropriated property.

And Dr. Alberto Gainza Paz came home to his beloved La Prensa.

The IAPA's vigilance over press freedom remains undiminished even as the organization's efforts in behalf of a beleaguered press have become less effective. Another La Prensa, that of Lima, Peru, finds its editor-owner Pedro Beltran dispossessed of his newspaper by edict of the ruling military junta.

President Salvador Allende of Chili, a Marxist-Socialist, maintains that the press is free to comment but his government has placed severe pressures on the anti-Allende newspapers.

In 1970, Allende threatened to expropriate El Mercurio, his chief adversary. He became angry when the IAPA opposed his plan to control the nation's supply of newsprint.

IN A RECENT talk with George Beebe, associate publisher of the Miami Herald, and other IAPA representatives, President Allende was courteous but said he sensed that the organization was seeking to blacken his image in the hemispheric press.

Today there is precious little press freedom in Brazil and other nations of Latin America. The Inter-American Press Association, despite its zeal to insure a free press, is now finding areas of disagreement within its own ranks.

Some nationalistic Latin-Americans explain that "things have changed, accommodations with the government must be made," and imply that the IAPA is harming their personal interests.

THIS IS THE path to darkness, the road to oblivion.

President Thieu of South Vietnam who professes his faith in democracy, has a new press law which requires posting of a $50,000 bond by every newspaper in Saigon to insure against publication of anything which he considers detrimental to national security.

Recently, an editor who published excerpts from the Pentagon Papers and a Cornell University study of bombing in Indochina, was given a year in prison and a $2,500 fine.

COULD IT HAPPEN here? Well, there are some ominous indications that our government and the courts which give lip service to press freedom during National Newspaper Week, perhaps believe that editors and reporters could get along with a little less freedom than they have exercised in the past.

The Supreme Court's decision on the Pentagon Papers gave no assurance pre-publication restraints may not be applied in the future.

In the Caldwell case involving Earl Caldwell, a reporter for the New York Times, the court held that the First Amendment did not give newsmen an automatic right or privilege to refuse to testify before grand juries about their work.

Peter Bridge, a reporter for the defunct Newark News, has been jailed for refusing to offer testimony concerning his confidential notes. This contempt sentence is a bad omen for the nation's press.

I have been heartened by the generous response of readers to my invitation to comment on press freedom. Most believe in this constitutionally guaranteed right, while vigorously disagreeing on the quality of press performance.

Yet I suspect there are a great many sleeping editors and publishers unaware that even protections of the First Amendment may not be sufficient to prevent a gradual erosion of their cherished freedoms by the courts and a hostile government.

In the Caldwell case, Associate Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. of the Supreme Court held that the courts must balance the interests of a free press against the interests of a grand jury investigation in which the reporter is requested to testify.

Yes, it could happen here.

Props. 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 on state ballot

Prop. 3 on the ballot would set up a plan whereby the state would loan money to business for the purpose of stopping pollution that the business may be causing. It is supposed to make this financing available to concerns that do not have the money to make such changes in their operations. The money would be available to the state from state revenue bond issues which would be paid back by the concern over a period of years. It would not be an obligation on state taxpayers because the state would not be guaranteeing the payment of the bonds from tax sources.

It is a program to speed up the fight against pollution of the environment. Business concerns with available capital would not be eligible for the loan. Opponents of Prop. 3 say it would eventually be placed on taxpayers because some of the loans would not be repaid because of some concerns failing and going into bankruptcy. The pressure would then be on to have the state pay the defaulted bonds from tax funds.

THE PROPONENTS argue that it is the only way operating concerns can be forced to clean up the pollution they create and that the losses would be minor. A mortgage could be taken on the operator's property. It would be one more state bureaucracy. But the environmental problem deserves all the reasonable power we can give to solving it. I will vote Yes on Prop. 3.

Prop. 4 would establish a two-year session for the state legislature. At present it operates on a one-year system. Any bills introduced in the first year at present die if not acted on in that year. Under the two-year session the legislature would meet in December after the November election and use that month for organization. At present it meets the first Monday in January. The plan would keep the legislature in session full time. Bills introduced in the first year by one house and during January of the second year but not passed by the other house would not have to be reintroduced as at present. It is argued this would be a big saving in time and cost of printing.

Supporters of Prop. 4 say these changes would eliminate several causes of legislative inefficiency, delay and duplication of efforts. It would reduce the number of special sessions and the added costs they incur. Opponents say it would not have these effects and would take the pressure off members to get their work done in the one-year session. There needs to be some change in the Senate and Assembly to achieve greater efficiency. This change may be helpful, I will vote Yes on Prop. 4.

Prop. 5 would give local school districts greater control over programs they feel are needed in their district. It may be in a farm or industrial area where the district would use specific subjects to help in training the students for vocations adapted to their home area. At present the districts are almost entirely restricted to programs prescribed by the legislature. Under the state constitution amendment, Prop. 5 would permit the local districts to provide additional programs.

SINCE THE LOCAL school board members are elected by local voters the people in each district would have assurances that any changes would be favored by the majority of voters in each district. A Yes vote is recommended for Prop. 5.

None of the three propositions discussed above places additional tax burdens on the state. They are procedural programs that should provide greater efficiency and much needed changes in our needs.

Prop. 6 would consolidate some existing provisions of the constitution and clarify others. It is sponsored by the California Constitution Revision Commission which has been studying changes to modernize sections of the constitution and in some cases shorten or delete sections that are no longer meaningful. One section, for example, in Prop. 6 defines the boundary of California which corrects the inaccurate boundaries at present. One change that has opposition is that an elected official's salary cannot be reduced during his term of office. Many of us may feel some salaries have been raised too often in recent years but it seems reasonable that they remain in force for the office during the term for which the official was elected. The other changes are minor with no additional cost to the taxpayers. For this reason I will vote Yes on Prop. 6.

Prop. 7 is also a measure to bring the constitution up to date. In the past three years eight court decisions, acts of Congress or amendments approved by the voters have changed voting requirements. Among these changes are lowering the voting age to 18 — the residential requirements have wiped out the 90- and 54-day residential requirement to vote. Prop. 7 would place these changes in the constitution which can only be done by a majority vote of the people. A Yes vote is recommended.

Prop. 20 'written to stop building,' says state senator

Opponents of Proposition 20 — the coastline protection initiative — have claimed all along that passage of the controversial measure would result in a three to five-year moratorium on all building along the coast.

State Sen. Dennis E. Carpenter, R-Newport Beach, not only agrees with that assessment, but adds that, in his opinion, the authors of the proposition wrote it with that very purpose in mind.

"I'm sure it's intentional," says the lawmaker from Orange County, the author of the only coastal control bill to clear the Senate. (The bill is now in the Assembly.)

CARPENTER, who is anxious to see the initiative measure defeated on Nov. 7, has been touring the state recently in a one-man campaign against the proposition, which is being backed by a coalition of conservation groups in the state.

SEN. D. E. CARPENTER
His Own Crusade

Carpenter says he's conducting his crusade entirely on his own and, in response to a question, claims to have no connection with the political public relations firm — Whitaker & Baxter — that has been accused of using false and deceptive propaganda against 20.

Carpenter's own bill, unlike the initiative measure, would leave regulation of coastal development in the hands of local government. At the same time, his bill would create a 15-member state board to draft a comprehensive land use plan for the entire coast, from 1,000 yards inland to three miles at sea.

PROPOSITION 20 also would create a statewide agency, but would put local control over development in the hands of six regional commissioners.

Proponents of the regional commissions, which would pass on proposed developments under a permit system, claim the system would prohibit major, permanent alterations of the landscape pending completion of the statewide plan. They say it is not designed to stop all development, but opponents, like Carpenter, believe it will have that effect nonetheless.

Carpenter, moreover, believes the authors of Proposition 20 actually want a de facto moratorium on all building.

Carpenter also decries the regional commissions as "a whole new level of government, removed from the voters without their control."

Conservationists, on the other hand, have called Carpenter's bill a boon to land speculators and a "corporate land grab."

CARPENTER says some development along the coastline should be stopped — "but not all of it." What we're doing in Proposition 20 is cutting off our arm to cure a hangnail.

"There are legitimate targets," he added — that is, "developments in locations that ought to be preserved, such as public beaches, access to waterways, wildlife areas. We ought to be able to preserve these."

Carpenter is convinced, moreover, that the job can be done by local government. In the past, local governments were careless, he concedes.

On the other hand, neither politicians nor voters were aware of the environmental damage that was being done. The criterion then was growth.

Today the situation is entirely different. The public is aware of environmental considerations; and the politicians are becoming — if they haven't already become — responsive to the new popular sentiment.

United soars on dual rate

Mechlin Moore, United's senior vice president for external affairs, pointed out the airline's disastrous experiment a few years ago with a system-wide single-class service at a fare slightly above coach. Coach customers balked at paying the premium; former first class passengers objected to the loss of privileged status.

"First class service provides a very healthy chunk of our revenue," Moore said. "There is a class of people who want it and are willing to pay for it."

West is first to admit that a full 50 per cent of the first class passengers on the Los Angeles-San Francisco route originate on United routes outside the shuttle loop. But he points out that there is nothing to prevent these customers from switching their ticketing to the less expensive coach fares between the two points.

Not including satellite or suburban airports such as Long Beach and Burbank in the south and San Jose and Oakland in the north, the Los Angeles-San Francisco route is the most heavily traveled air corridor in the world.

Scheduled airlines carried more than 2.5 million passengers between the two points in 1971. This year the level is considerably higher.

The market was dominated by United until Pacific Southwest Airlines, operating only within California, ten years ago brought in a new concept of single-class, low-cost commuter flights between the cities.

United saw its market share slip to an all-time low of 15 per cent in 1964, far behind both PSA and Western Airlines, another competitor. In 1965, United introduced the Boeing 727 trijet on the route and recaptured the lead with 38 per cent.

Matching PSA's cutrates, a new low fare of $14.50 between LAX and SFO helped United, but by the end of 1970, its share of the market had deteriorated to less than 30 per cent of the total. There was little improvement in 1971 for United, while PSA retained 51 per cent.

United's revitalized California Commuter service this year during the February-August period carried 477,450 revenue passengers, up more than 22 per cent over the same period of 1971, according to John Courtright, Western Division marketing vice president, who made the decision to reinstate two-class service.

Other factors helping in the resurgence were an increase in frequency of round trips from 14 to 17 daily, a reduction in an earlier first class fare between Los Angeles and San Francisco from $31 to the present $26, and an improvement of check-in service through a $2 million separate streetside commuter terminal at Los Angeles International Airport.

Five lecture series open during week

Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Boyd auditorium, Harris M. Schurmeier assistant director of flight projects for Jet Propulsion Laboratory, begins an illustrated series on "Exploring the Solar System" including Mars and the inner and outer planets.

Thursday, Dr. Donald W. Leik, retired Veterans Administration physician opens a four-part series of interest to senior citizens on "Growing Older in Good Health" at the Institute of Lifetime Learning, 235 East Broadway, 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

For Catalina run

Berth space asked

Expansion of its area at Long Beach Navy Landing to make room for the addition of a new, 700-passenger vessel to its Catalina Island service has been requested by Harbor Carriers, Inc.

The company, which operates under the name Catalina Long Beach Cruises, made its request in a letter to the city's Bureau of Franchises.

The bureau, at its regular monthly meeting Monday at 9:30 a.m. in the City Council chambers, is expected to set the November meeting as the time for Harbor Carriers to file a formal application for the additional space.

HARBOR Carriers currently operates two vessels, the 500-passenger "Long Beach Prince" and the 150-passenger "Eagle." They make two round-trip voyages daily to Catalina Island, with an extra trip Fridays at 7 p.m.

The company has been operating from the Navy Landing since July. Prior to that time, it had been sailing from Pier J in the harbor area for two years.

Richard G. Wilson, attorney for the company, said in his letter to the bureau that Harbor Carriers wants to construct and use one additional float in the Navy Landing basin for the new vessel.

Wilson said the company has executed a contract for construction of the 700-passenger craft, to be completed and delivered prior to the 1973 summer season.

HE SAID company experience shows the need for additional passenger service from Long Beach is "eminent and immediate." During the 2½ months that Harbor Carriers has operated from the Navy Landing, the city has received about $10,000 in fees from the shipping service and the related parking lot, Wilson said.

Pilot lands safely in lot

A 37-year-old Redondo Beach pilot escaped serious injury Saturday afternoon when he crash-landed his light plane in a Lomita parking lot after the craft lost power while approaching Torrance Airport, sheriff's deputies reported.

Kenneth Norton, of 307 Via San Sebastian, was treated for minor injuries at Torrance Memorial Hospital soon after the 3:40 p.m. accident. Deputies said his plane hit power lines, but sailed clear of nearby homes and parked autos in the making the crash-landing at the rear of 25048 Narbonne Ave.

Store broken into for radios, cassette

Burglars broke the front door glass of the Radio Shack, 6414 Spring St., early Friday morning, and took four radios and a cassette tape recorder valued at $190.55, police reported Saturday.

Creative land plan by Ayres

Introduction of the second unit of the popular New La Cuesta homes in Cerritos features a distinctively creative land plan representing a departure from the usual land-use patterns now being employed in that area by most builders.

In planning the second unit builder Don Ayres Jr. determined to give buyers more spare room between their homes.

His plan provides visual, as well as functional value with 25 to 30-feet between each residence.

This allows the homes to be more prominently displayed from the outside and provides more privacy inside. The space insulation provided creates a side yard area which may be used to store boats, trailers or recreational vehicles comfortably.

TO PROVIDE this expanded space, Ayres elected to upgrade lot sizes by approximately 30 per cent. This required going from the traditional 5,000-square foot lots to 6,500-square feet.

"We found buyers showed pronounced interest in the lot areas their homes occupy and decided to provide the larger lots to enhance the popular Southern California indoor-outdoor life-style most of us enjoy," Ayres said.

Ayres' new plans provides buyers maximum utilization of the land he occupies and creates a distinctive neighborhood with plenty of open space.

AYRES' concept accomplishes a desirable balance between house and lot creating a total neighborhood for living enjoyment and the opportunity to build an enduring community resale value.

Ayres' firm utilized searching market analysis and the best engineering and land-use experts to create this environment.

The second unit of New La Cuesta will have 90 homes, according to Dick Pratt, vice president of Ayres Realty, exclusive sales agents for the new homes.

Prices range from $33,750 to $41,950 with VA and conventional financing plans available.

Pratt pointed out the homes are "finally ready." They have heavy shake roofs, block wall fencing, concrete driveways, bullins, carpets, fireplaces and many other innovative features.

ONE OF the most popular homes in this series is the El Cajon, a four-bedroom, three-bath plan with formal dining room, family room with fireplace and wet bar and a finished bonus room. A lot of buyer interest is created by the huge sunken tub in the master bedroom suite bathroom.

Furnished and decorated models and a sales-information center may be visited daily by taking the 605 (San Gabriel River) Freeway to South Street, past Los Cerritos Center to Gridley Avenue; Gridley north to Artesia Boulevard and left (east).

From the Artesia Freeway the development may be reached by taking Pioneer Boulevard south to Artesia Boulevard and west, just east of Studebaker Boulevard.

Paseo de Los Cerritos, Artesia, in construction

Construction is under way on a new $2.5 million apartment complex — Paseo de Los Cerritos — in Artesia.

Located at 11421 E. 186th St., the development will feature three distinctly separate 50-unit adult buildings.

Project plans call for a $100,000 extension of 186th Street to Gridley Road, giving future apartment residents easy access to the new Cerritos regional shopping center.

Paseo de Los Cerritos will be styled in a contemporary Spanish theme, with red tile roofs, stucco, and wood siding. The development will be located on four landscaped acres.

The buildings will feature gas ranges, barbecues and fireplaces.

The two-story buildings will have both one- and two-bedroom units.

Project owner and developer is Professional Investors of Cerritos, builders of multi-unit complexes for eight years.

Record level earnings at Shapell

Shapell Industries, Inc., developer and builder of residential housing, announced sales and earnings for the third quarter and nine months period ended Sept. 30, reached record levels.

For the third-quarter, gross revenues increased to $20,052,000, from $15,369,000 for the similar 1971 period and net income advanced to $1,765,000, or 50 cents per share, from $1,406,000 or 40 cents per share.

Nine months' gross revenues were $52,738,000 against $35,272,000 for the comparable period last year and net income rose to $4,595,000 of $1.31 per share exceeding last year's results of $3,683,000 and $1.05 per share.

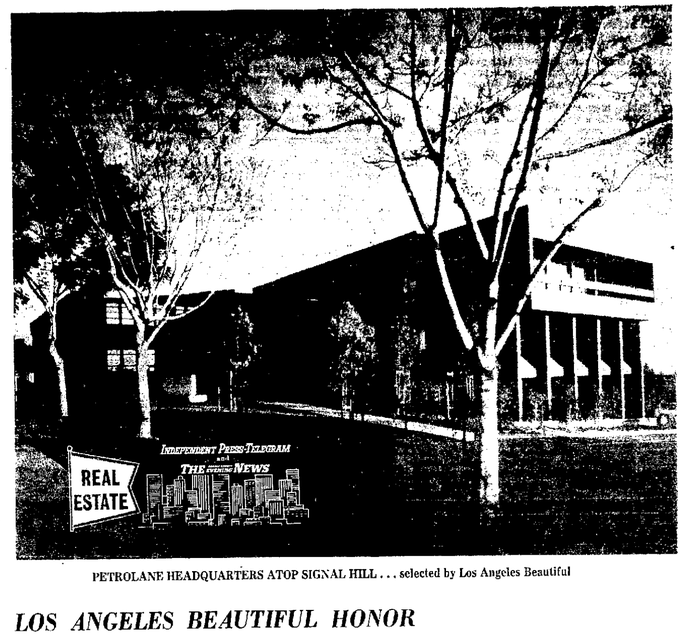

Nathan Shapell, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said "the company emphasis on quality construction continues to pay handsome rewards resulting in an unprecedented demand for our housing.

Women slate Madsen talk

Stanley H. Madsen, civil engineer and geologist for Fugro, Inc., Long Beach, will address the National Association of Women in Construction, Orange County Chapter, at their meeting Tuesday at the Hyatt House, Anaheim.

Subjects he will cover include definition of a soils engineer, his role in the construction projects, field procedures used and information needed to provide recommendations for the project.

The talk will be illustrated with slides.

LOS ANGELES BEAUTIFUL HONOR

Petrolane landscaping wins award

The Petrolane headquarters building at 1690 E. Hill St., Signal Hill, has been chosen for civic recognition for "making positive contribution to the aesthetics of the community."

Los Angeles Beautiful, the civic association charged with making the heavily urbanized Los Angeles County a more attractive place to live, selected Petroiane for the outstanding appearance of the building and its landscaped grounds.

Nestled on the slope of Signal Hill, the Petrolane building makes a positive impression on its surroundings, the citation noted.

The original two-story structure was erected in 1954 and a new wing was added in 1968 which required the modernization of the entire facility.

The person most responsible for the building's attractive appearance was Bruce Baldridge, corporate vice president and treasurer, who worked closely with the Long Beach architectural firm of Hugh Gibbs and Donald Gibbs and Associates, to impose an aesthetically harmonious design on the headquarters property.

Desiring a rustic appearance for the site, the building's exteriors were paneled in rough-hewn wood painted in dark natural brown.

Eucalyptus and flowering coral trees were chosen for accent because their light trunks could contrast with he dark building.

Ivy and azaleas were chosen for ground cover to complement the grass lawn areas.

Each year since 1958, Los Angeles Beautiful has selected 40 examples from business and industry to receive the civic recognition.

Petrolane is the first in this area of Signal Hill to be honored with the award.

William O. Hinckley, awards chairman presented the citation to Marion Vinton, supervisor of grounds and building for Petrolane.

Unusual spaciousness mark of Century West

A new dimension in living has opened at Century West, PBS Corporation's new $10 million family community in Westminster, where 260 single-family homes have been placed on sale.

Planned for privacy and safety for children, the development, situated on 60 acres, is enclosed by a block wall with one main entrance. A two-acre park is included, and it has a children's playground, picnic tables, shelter and barbecues.

Four unusually spacious home designs are being introduced at Century West, featuring up to 2,573 square feet. The one- and two-story plans offer homebuyers 12 separate elevations from which to choose in two, three, and four-bedroom designs.

"We hope to follow the same successful pattern at Century West that we achieved at our other Southern California residential developments in Cerritos, Fountain Valley, and Huntington Beach accounting for more than 1,000 homes," stated John Parker, president of PBS Corporation.

"I think we can attribute our success to a concept of building traditional homes that people with families like to live in — providing homes with all the individuality, rustic charm, and space inside a family needs, to keep pace with the tempo of California living."

THE individuality of Century West homes can be readily seen, according to Parker in what he calls an "adaptable room" in each of the four floor plans.

"Because we designed each plan to maximize square footage," noted Parker, "each plan includes an extra room or study in addition to a rumpus room or family living area."

The Plan Four best exemplifies the type of homes PBS is building at Century West. The plan features a solid core formal entry way with large guest closet. The step-down living room off the entry includes a brick fireplace and opens to a formal dining room.

The kitchen is separate from the dining area and is designed for time-saving efficiency with plenty of closet space and built-in appliances that keep down kitchen clutter.

A breakfast nook is part of the large kitchen area with sliding glass door access to the rear yard.

Adjacent to the kitchen is a half bath and a utility area with space for a washer and dryer and storage.

A family room is also featured in this floorplan.

THE SECOND level includes a deluxe master bedroom suite with dressing area and private bath and three secondary bedrooms with separate bath.

Included in the purchase price of the homes which range from $33,595 to $42,995 are the following extras: electric range and oven; dishwashers; disposals; interior laundry areas; wall-to-wall carpeting; vinyl asbestos tile in entry, kitchen, family room and baths; fireplaces; two-car garages; vaulted ceilings; concrete driveways; 10 to 15 foot wide, fully usable side yards and rear yard fencing with a gate.

"Century West is ideal for families with children of all ages," added Parker.

"Besides our pool-sized yard areas and two-acre community park, there are large playground areas just down the block from Century West at Post Elementary and Irvine Junior High.

"In addition, the local high school is within easy bicycling distance from the home."

SEVERAL large shopping centers are within blocks of Century West offering a vast selection of department stores and specialty shops.

The model sales complex is open daily from 10 a.m. to dark and may be reached from the Garden Grove Freeway to the Brookhurst exit. Proceed south on Brookhurst to Hazard, then left to Warner, and left to Century West at 14322 Abington Circle in Westminster.

Conventional financing is available.

What realty boards are doing

LONG BEACH

E.T. Moore, October program chairman for the Long Beach District Board of Realtors, announced that Richard Cheroske, chairman of the board of Property Funding, Inc. of Pasadena will speak Tuesday, 7:15 a.m., at the Queen's Restaurant.

Cheroske's topic will be "Yearend Tax Shelters".

Realtors to posts of CREA

Dupuy began a real estate career in Beverly Hills in 1926, opening his own brokerage business in Long Beach in 1946, now known as the Reg Dupuy Gallery of Homes. His business has included sales, mortgage loan correspondent for life insurance agent and real estate appraisal.

He is a past president of the Long Beach Board of Realtors, served on many of its committees, and twice was elected the boards Realtor of the Year — in 1955 and 1963.

THE association directors elected 32 regional vice presidents, including District 21, Mark C. Sampson of San Pedro; District 22, Thomas M. Poll, of Norwalk, and District 23, Dick Y. Nerio of Westminster.

The directors also named six directors-at-large for life: Jerome Blank of Berkeley, Robert B. Crooks of San Diego, James A. Edmonds, Jr., of Long Beach, Andrew L. Leavitt of San Mateo, George R. Santy of Whittier, and Leo R. Taylor of Los Angeles.

For a career position immediately available where individual client is responded, consider Kentucky Fried Chicken.

As a management trainee you will receive the kind of training in management that has made Colonel Sanders America's most successful food operation.

Starting salaries are related to individual qualifications with excellent benefits.

Recent related food service experience or training is preferred but not required.

If you feel you have management potential, call 9 a.m. to 12 noon weekdays.

Personalized Designer Pattern

Enzo of Italy created this princess shaped dress that is most becoming to all figures. Pockets are set in the front panel seams. A darling short jacket, narrow of sleeve and deeply collared, turns this into a charming ensemble. Fabric suggestions: knits, synthetic blends, raw silk, linen, light and medium weight wool. Both 71401 and 71461 are cut in ready-to-wear Misses Sizes 6-18. The dress, size 12, requires 2⅛ yards of 54-in. fabric and the jacket 1⅞ yards. To order EITHER the dress OR jacket; give size, name, address and zip. Send $1.50 for EACH pattern postpaid 3rd class mail. Add 25c for EACH pattern for first class and special handling. COMBINATION OFFER: Both patterns $2.50 postpaid 3rd class mail. Add 25c for first class and special handling. Address Box N Dept LP-8, Milford, N.J. 08848. SPECIAL: World Famous Designer Sewing Tips compiled by Spadea direct from the workrooms of 15 leading designers. No. 1—regular price 75c; special offer now 50c.

Psychodrama—tool in treating alcoholism

LONELINESS OF ALCOHOLISM IS A THING OF THE PAST

By Ben Zinser
Medical-Science Editor

When Joan McCrea, an actress, walks on stage these days, she's not seeking applause.

She's hoping instead to help an alcoholic whip his drinking problem.

In years past, Ms. McCrea's specialty was acting on the New York stage, performing in television (including commercials) and appearing in motion pictures.

She prepared well for that career, including tutelage by a noted drama coach.

Now she's staging psychodrama sessions in Long Beach for alcoholics as part of an alcoholic rehabilitation program at Western Institute of Human Resources, 2880 Atlantic Ave.

She prepared well for this task too.

For Ms. McCrea is a recovered alcoholic.

SURPRISINGLY, she admits now she was glad when she learned she was an alcoholic.

"I thought I was insane," she explains. "I had become panicky and had even made plans for suicide."

Her drinking problem began when she was well into her career as an actress.

"I was drinking too much — but so was everyone else. So I didn't think too much about it at first.

"I thought I had it under control, and I was convinced that I wasn't an alcoholic. I had seen a famous actor deteriorate from alcoholism. So I was always careful not to drink before I went on stage.

"Of course I always got smashed afterward."

THERE WAS A MARRIAGE that lasted two years. After a divorce, she worked as a cocktail waitress.

"Drinking became more and more of a problem," she says. Now there was ready access to booze.

"It got so that I couldn't go to an interview without a drink," she says. "I had to be careful who I breathed on."

What was happening?

"I was a perfectionist. I was self-critical. And then there was a divorce. There was the responsibility of motherhood. (She has a daughter, now 14.) There was a failure to cope with life."

Her theatrical training began at the Goodman Theater at the Art Institute in Chicago, she says. There she studied Shakespeare, Greek drama and the contemporary theater. During her training there, which lasted two years, she performed in television commercials and industrial films.

Then for a year, she toured the South as a member of the cast of a stage play, "Springtime for Henry."

Finally, New York. There she studied with Stella Adler, one of the noted exponents of the Stanislavski type of acting, commonly known as The Method.

Little did she know at the time, she recalls, that Method Acting was to prove an ideal preparation for what was to come — psychodrama for alcoholics.

In The Method approach, she says, there is extensive searching into the underlying feelings of a character.

NOW THE PACE was quickening.

"Those were the days of live TV, and we ran from one set to another," she says.

There was summer stock. Off-Broadway theater. And at last — Broadway itself. The latter production was "The Wooden Dish" — "but," she says sadly, "it didn't last very long."

Her legs were featured in a commercial for a hosiery firm.

And her "faces" were to be seen in the movie, "A Face in the Crowd."

"I played several roles in the same film," she explains.

She "blacked out" during a Bert Parks show once, but it had nothing to do with drinking, she recalls.

It was a frantic piece of business with several performers before camera.

"I was supposed to be twirling a globe and saying something. When it came time to do it, I twirled the globe and just sat there. I couldn't remember my lines.

"But there are scarier things. For example, when an actor gets glassy-eyed and stares at your forehead. You know then that he's forgotten his lines, and anything is likely to happen."

But Ms. McCrea has more important things to worry about these days. Her current concern: the "script" of recovering alcoholics who want to change their life-style.

IN PSYCHODRAMA, the participants act out conflicting situations in their daily life.

Ms. McCrea mainly directs these sessions, but she also will participate.

She plays down the fact that she's a professional actress.

"It might be frightening to the others," she says, explaining that she doesn't want a psychodrama participant to feel as if he's auditioning.

Once a week, she works with the Navy's alcoholic rehabilitation program.

Here, she may set up a simple role-playing situation.

"Let's say that a sailor has to have a drink before he can get up enough nerve to ask a girl to dance. When he asks me, I'll refuse and also give him a bad time. Later, we'll have a group discussion about the problem."

Ms. McCrea, who has taken special training in counseling, has this to say about her new role:

"At one time I thought that all my theatrical training and experience were going down the drain. But what I'm doing now is drawing upon this, and I am getting a tremendous amount of satisfaction. It is real and more lasting than applause.

"Anyway," she says, laughing, "I'm going to be back in television very soon.

"We're getting color videotape equipment so we can photograph psychodrama sessions for playback and evaluation."

So Joan McCrea will be on camera again in the most important commercial of her life.

This time she'll be selling an idea to recovering alcoholics — ways to re-establish their self-esteem.

PROFESSIONAL actress Joan McCrea uses psychodrama in aiding alcoholics to come to grips with their problem.

Actresses pen valentine to New York

By JOANNE NORRIS
Staff Writer

Helen Hayes, often proclaimed the First Lady of the American Theater, says that the theater in Los Angeles has surpassed New York's.

Miss Hayes has co-authored a serendipitous book about New York which she hopes will be so popular it will inspire her publisher, Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, to publish a similar one " dispelling some of the myths about Los Angeles."

"Anita and I have both spent a lot of time here," said Miss Hayes the other day during an interview with co-author Anita Loos in the Beverly Hills Hotel. "Los Angeles in the last few years has really surpassed New York. There's nothing more successful than your Music Center anywhere."

"People talk about Los Angeles as if it were a bunch of cowboys and a cultural desert. They simply don't realize what it has to offer."

If Miss Hayes can wax enthusiastic about Los Angeles, that's nothing compared to her feelings about New York. They are why the book, "Twice Over Lightly," came into being.

THE ACTRESS, tired of hearing people bad mouth her favorite city, proposed to Miss Loos, who wrote "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" in the 20s and who has been a close friend of Miss Hayes since that era, that they chronicle some of the better things about New York with emphasis on places and people the average New Yorker (if such a creature exists) never sees.

With this Pollyanna-ish goal in mind, the two ladies set out for an 18-month adventure which took them aboard craft hauling garbage in the East River to Bellevue Hospital's operating theater, from the Salvation Army serving line to an Institute of Hypnosis.

They managed a few tonier spots as well—La Grenouille Restaurant, the Mets, both museum and opera house (with the baseball team thrown in for balance), and the Cloisters, where the "Annual Midsummer Fete" was more like a midtown crush at 5 o'clock.

Writing the book obviously was more fun than promoting it. Miss Hayes arrived in Los Angeles just in time to celebrate her 72nd birthday on Oct. 10. As she raced from TV studio to interview and back again, she was greeted with six different birthday cakes. Of course, she had to sample them all.

"I had slices of the first three and just nibbles of the others, but I still feel awful," she admitted the next morning.

SHE WAS WEARING birthday earrings from her son, actor James MacArthur, who is in Hawaii filming TV's "Hawaii Five-0." He sent them with a coral and pearl necklace.

"I was robbed of all my jewelry," explained his mother. "And now Jim is trying very hard to replace it."

"Yes," added Miss Loos, "While Helen and I were traipsing around to some very unsavory haunts in New York, she was robbed out in the country."

Miss Hayes lives in Nyack, N.Y., where she settled after her marriage to the late playwright Charles MacArthur.

The ladies doings were spontaneous for the most part, they said. When and where they went often was dictated by the weather. In some cases, they were chaperoned. Their publisher insisted they take his limousine to Greenwich Village, for example. But they also were able to get about by bus with complete anonymity.

"No one expected to see us there," explained Miss Hayes. "At 21 we would have been recognized, but on a bus?"

They both decided on their itinerary, depending at one juncture on the Yellow Pages, then Miss Hayes would take notes and Miss Loos would write.

"We didn't try to do anything in depth," Miss Hayes explained. "We probed no deep sociological issues. We

Law wives have gem of a party

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

The Lawyer's Wives umpteenth annual fall fashion show was a smash hit. Even if they did have to take it Out Of Town to find proper facilities.

I couldn't attend. But I have some news leaks for you from highly placed, usually reliable sources.

The display of china, sterling silver, crystal and jewelry loaned by Tiffany & Co. was well received by the gals attending. Most of them bought T&C catalogues to take home and toss casually in their husbands' dinner plates.

The display included something for everyone from a $5 sterling key chain and the $11 sterling baby rattle (whatever happened to the traditional silver spoon?) to the jeweled pin for $5,000 and bracelet priced at $10,900.

Law Wives president this year is Joan Lucas, wife of Federal Judge Mal. So the wives of the federal judges from the area turned out to support the show.

They were Elizabeth Gray, Laura Ferguson, Martha Lydick and Stella Real.

Another special guest was Marilyn Bonelli from San Fernando Valley, who is the new state president of Lawyer's Wives.

Other Los Angeles area ladies were Pauline Courtney, Ruth Loring and Kitty Older, all wives of Superior Court judges.

As far as my spies could determine, show chairman, Carol Stamp, was the only woman there in a Michael Novarese dress. Except for the models, of course.

Commenting on his designs, Novarese predicted a return to classic clothes, accessorized with gloves and hats (especially fur for daytime) and your handbag and shoes will once again match each other.

I have always stuck to the matching accessories personally because I can't stand making all those decisions.

Be sure and buy your ticket next year from Liz Lucas. She sold consecutive numbered tickets to Margit Cupper, Rita Blumel and Iola Masterson and each ticket won a door prize.

Mary Wilson was the Big Winner of the dress donated by Novarese.

Some of the luncheon committee included Grace Carroll, Jane Began, Betty Jo Spence, Ruth Grisham, and Dot Murray.

I forgot to tell you, way back at the beginning, that the show was held at the Disneyland Hotel's sumptuous new Grand Ballroom.

Some of those braving the freeways were Jean Nelson, Virginia Desmond, Shirley Coscarelli, Lois Wright, Katie Graven, Marvelle McNulty, Beth Newton and Betty Cantor.

LET'S GET BACK to Long Beach and the Marina and the christening of Bob and Sylvia Bates new dreamboat.

It's a 40-foot diesel powered trawler built in Hong Kong especially for them.

Sylvia christened it the Setab which is Bates spelled backwards.

There were hors d'oeuvres in abundance for the 250 guests who came to toast the new craft with pink champagne and such a novel way to serve champagne.

The Bates' borrowed a brand new dinghy from Stan Miller's showroom, filled it with ice and bottles of champagne.

Hostesses assisting were Ruth Orth, of Arcadia, Joan Osborne and Winnie Turner of Sepulveda, Virginia Lundquist, Bobbie Norwood, Claire Hallstrom and Dolores Jenkins.

Champagne sippers included Jim Summers, Don and Diana Humphries, George and Shirley Green, the Arville Gibsons, Jal and Vivian Davis, Ott and Dort Reith, Bill and Carrie Croxson, George and Vera Eriksen and from their home in the city of Avalon on Catalina Island, Willard and Juanita Thurston. (Wonder how they got to the party?)

THEY DIDN'T come to the party

Olivia Casberg is this year's president of Community Hospital Auxiliary, members of which also are affectionately known as Pinkies.

This hard working group of volunteer women treat themselves only once a year to a just-for-fun-party. The rest of the time they sponsor fund raising event for the hospital.

A long planned visit to mainland China with husband, Dr. Mel, coincided with the Pinkie's "Marine Frolic" dinner dance at the Edgewater Hyatt House.

So President Olivia sent greetings from China to the party. Dr. Mel's long service as chief surgeon of the China Theater during World War II opened many doors for them on this recent trip.

But they're due back and she can give you the details herself.

Another returnee is Betty Brown.

You may recall she and husband, Byron, moved to the San Francisco area a while back and Betty jetted back and forth to finish her term as auxiliary president before the group bid her a sad adieu.

Their situation changed and they came joyfully back to Long Beach and their old house just in time for Betty to do the decorations for the party.

Chief party planners were Ruth Horan and Eva Martin.

Diners and dancers included Community's Executive Director, Bruce Sanderson and wife, LaVerne, Paddy and Bobbie Sullivan, Don and Jimmie Burke, Dave and Ruth Mosher, Bryant and Edith Armstrong, Bob and Betty Jones, Bill and Doris Roberston, Bernie and Madolin Heim, Don and Maxine Preston and Ralph and Pat Lautmann. The Lautmanns are recently back from Hawaii where they had a rendezvous with the Casbergs before the latter couple set out on the Asian Adventure.

AT WIT'S END

Ailments cross ethnic lines

By ERMA BOMBECK

Since television these days is being so frank with ethnic humor, I wish to heavens someone would cross the ethnic line in television commercials.

Ever since I can remember, the only group who ever gets an upset stomach is Jewish people. They are lured to gastritis with promise of "Try it, you'll like it." demand the stuffed peppers at the delicatessen, sit on their beds all night lamenting, "I can't believe I ate the whole thing," and then are quieted by the wise advice, "Do yourself a favor."

This is very weird, because the only people who really gorge themselves on television commercials are the Italians. They sniff the spaghetti sauce, toss up the salads and bring the pizzas steaming from the oven with cries of "Mama Mia."

Headaches used to be dominated by WASP (white, Anglo-Saxon Protestants) until a few years ago when black people started to get them.

YOU CANNOT imagine what a shock this was for people when the first black person appeared on the tube with a headache. It opened the door, so to speak, for other revelations. Black people also did laundry, ate margarine and grew crowns on their heads, had colds and sinus congestion, and kids with cavities. It's a shame they do not suffer from irregularities. There's a lot of money in irregularities.

This left the bathroom cleaners for the Irish, the coffee making to the Swedes, the pineapple to the Hawaiians and the stale sandwiches (wrapped in inferior bags) to the Poles in hard hats.

The Germans to the import cars, the Mexicans to the corn chips, the French to the perfumes, and the English for the cranberry juice.

IN A RECENT episode of "Bridget Loves Bernie," Bridget, an Irish Catholic, confided to her parents that she was bringing home the man she wanted to marry who was a "little different" (Jewish). Her mother pondered it for a moment, then gasped, "Good heavens, you don't suppose she wants to marry a Democrat."

If Bridget and Bernie can make it, so can a Japanese sitting on the edge of his bed moaning, "I can't believe I ate the wan ton soup, the egg rolls, the sweet-sour pork and the fried rice."

So can a Mexican doctor whose glass Mexican stomach looks like everybody else's glass stomach when it is coated with Milk of Magnesia. So can an Indian holding up a bottle of Swedish tanning lotion and saying, "Big deal."

With a little humor and a lot of love, we might all just make it.

Area women go to convention

Six area women are in Cincinnati, Ohio, beginning today for national convention of Blue Star Mothers of America.

The Terrace Hilton Hotel will be setting for four-day event.

Nuptial vows recited

Richards-Boyd

Lakewood First Baptist Church was the setting Saturday noon for the marriage of Nancy Jane Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Boyd of Lakewood, to Charles Bruce Richards.

Mrs. John C. Graves was matron of honor for her sister. Donald R. Hamilton performed best man duties for the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Richards, also of Lakewood.

The newlyweds were graduated from Lakewood High School and Long Beach City College. The bridegroom is a member of Lakewood Elks.

They will live in Downey after a honeymoon in San Diego.

Miller-Dixon

The LaVenta Inn, Palos Verdes, was the setting Saturday afternoon for the marriage of Cathy E. Dixon, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Dixon of Long Beach, to Gregg S. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Miller of Long Beach.

Rochelle Dixon and Greg Gill were honor attendants.

The new Mrs. Miller was graduated from Millikan High and attends Long Beach State University. Her husband is an alumnus of Wilson High School and LBSC.

They will live in Los Alamitos after a honeymoon in Hawaii.

Adam-Meads

Lakewood High School graduates Barbara Joan Meads and Richard Allen Adam were united in marriage Saturday evening at Lakewood Village Community Church.

Among guests attending the ceremony were parents of the bridal couple, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Meads and Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Adam, all of Lakewood.

Robin Smith and Philip Adam were honor attendants.

The newlyweds will live in Bellflower.

RETIREMENT:

An invisible noose?

By PATRICIA QUINN
Staff Writer

If you're 50-years-old, the chances are you're already caught. Locked in a trap you won't know anything about until you're 65 and ready to retire. And by then, it's usually too late to find a remedy.

At least that's the word from experts, Leland and Lee Cooley, a husband and wife team who've written a book, "How to Avoid the Retirement Trap," which they hope beams sufficient preparatory information to younger people so they won't get caught.

The book is a sequel to their 1965 best-seller, "The Retirement Trap," which raised a great deal of controversy over all kinds of old age benefits. In addition, after the publication of the first book, the Cooleys were called to testify in 1971 at President Nixon's Conference on Aging.

The Cooleys, who spent three years researching by visiting nursing homes, retirement communities and people in other countries, said this new follow-up account was written "in answer to literally hundreds of letters and phone calls from older Americans who, despite what they thought was careful planning, awoke to find themselves victims of the retirement trap."

"THERE IS NO magic formula that will guarantee us security and happiness in our later years," the Cooleys say in their introduction. "But if you employ a little painless planning and if you also enjoy a modicum of good luck . . . then you have an excellent chance."

The trap, the Cooleys said in a recent interview, is in putting too much faith in Social Security, pension plans, savings, and even a guaranteed minimum income.

Social Security, with its myriad inequities, doesn't come close to being sufficient, Leland Cooley explained. And pension plans—34,000 in this country—on the average pay out full benefits to only five per cent of participants, he said. "Even an affluent person will be in serious financial trouble if hit by a catastrophic illness."

The primary way to bypass retirement pitfalls, Cooley stated, is "to recognize that there is a problem."

"People who pay the bills now," Mrs. Cooley added, "should know that it's not going to get easier in later life."

A person should not tell himself "Social Security will be better by the time I retire," or " my pension plan will cover me," the author said, because the way both these systems are presently established, neither can be counted on with any degree of certainty.

EVEN IF A PERSON invested in stock or had some other form of small outside income after retirement, Cooley said, "he needs to have his pension assured by law. No one can guarantee what the dollar will be worth when they are older."

"It's a great national scandal," Lee Cooley added. "but most people are not aware that they may never participate in the pension plan they belong to."

A person should recognize that he can be part of the problem through insufficient planning, Cooley said, and begin now to adopt a realistic investment program with enforced insurance and land investment (which Cooley prefers as the safest investment for himself and Mrs. Cooley).

After that has been done, the author observed, the next step is to take a good genetic appraisal. A person should take a look at his inherited physical machine and initiate a regular health maintenance program, including a good nutrition and exercise plan. One of the most severe problems, the husband and wife agreed, is fighting a pervading sense of uselessness. This is particularly true for a full-time housewife who suddenly finds herself a widow. She, more often than not, Mrs. Cooley said, finds herself not only financially strapped and emotionally distraught but also becoming a social pariah rejected by former friends as a competitive threat.

But wives in general, Mrs. Cooley emphasized, are too often victimized by the retirement trap. "Women drift along with their basics provided, preoccupied with children and social activities. But as the kids grow older and leave home and the social activity stales, this kind of woman's periphery grows continually smaller," she said. The woman finds herself facing a large void.

THE SOLUTION many people find to retirement boredom is to take up another type of occupation. And a continuing education program, which the authors stressed, would help all retired persons, especially a wife, stay in the mainstream.

There is no shortage of jobs for these people, Cooley estimated adding that his own dentist would prefer to hire older women "because he loses the young ones too fast." A job can be a sense of purpose, of usefulness, for older people, he declared.

"We have a great brain robbery in this country each year of $20 billion when people are forced to retire at 65," Cooley said, predicting that by 1990 the mandatory retirement age would be 55. "If people are considered inefficient at age 65 then the entire Supreme Court should be dismissed," he reasoned.

SHE SAID WOMEN should start reading financial pages of newspapers and business magazines instead of just the women's pages and magazines. A wife should know exactly what precautions her husband is taking to ensure her security in later years, Mrs. Cooley noted.

CO-AUTHORS Lee and Leland Cooley, former choreographer and producer of the Perry Como Show, recently published a sequel to their best-selling nonfiction work, "The Retirement Trap."

"Lee knows every phase of our investment and financial program," Cooley explained. "I never sign a contract that she doesn't look at."

He said that retirement is not, as many people think of it, "when they do think of it" a Nirvana with dreamed-of travel and hobby time. Thinking of retirement in that light, the author stated, is the first step toward falling into the trap.

The Cooley's book (Nash Publishing, $7.95, not available in paperback) devotes separate chapters to Social Insecurity, Medicare—"Catch 65", The Widow's Plight, Is Your Money Safe in Mexico?, Investments: Which Ones and Why, and The Great Leisure Lie — A Hard Look at Easy Living, among others.

In addition to their "Retirement Trap" the authors have jointly written one other "service" book, titled, "The Simple Truth About Western Land Investment." Leland Cooley, a former producer (his most famous effort was the longtime popular Perry Como television show), also has written several novels. Three of these fiction works have been sold to movies.

"We made a promise to ourselves," Cooley mentioned. "that every time we sold one of my books to the movies (all three straight cash buy-outs), we would do a service book." He added that they do not expect to break even on "How to Avoid."

Great on Gotham

know that poverty and slums exist and pray God someday they'll be gone, but there are so many good things about New York, that we had to get them down on paper."

THE WOMEN NEEDLED the New York Times for exposing "all the bad things about New York." They feel it was up to them to counter the Times' exposes.

When a reporter asked Miss Loos about Harlem slums, she said she asked him if he had seen the city's new World Trade Center.

"Now that is something to see. I told him to go look at that and forget about those empty places in Harlem."

The book got its title from Terence Cardinal Cooke, who first proposed it be called "The City of Hope." When the ladies rejected that as too corny, the Cardinal came up with a label they thought was more in line with our meager talent" and they used it.

Tucked in here and there among the adventures are anecdotes about the authors and their friends, and they know everybody. Miss Loos recounted the story of Charles MacArthur's funeral. He had requested no service, but his widow relented when many friends wished to bid him goodby. During the eulogy by his friend, Ben Hecht, with whom MacArthur wrote "The Front Page," part of a funeral wreath began swaying, and not a few persons present wondered if MacArthur was supernaturally registering his displeasure with the whole business.

Then there was Helen's crush on Vernon Castle the "jilted" her for Irene Foote) and her incarceration on Welfare Island with Beatrice Lillie and MacArthur when they were challenged as possible prison hospital inmates because they had no visitors' passes.

THERE WAS THE advice about regularity Louis Armstrong gave Miss Hayes on their first meeting and how Miss Hayes, attired in her costume as one of the dotty old ladies in "Arsenic and Old Lace," frightened off a wouldbe mugger in New York with "You'd better buzz off, young man. I'm a killer."

The authors exclaim their sorrow at not getting to all the places they wanted to go and not being able to include all they did get to in the book.

In the final chapter they express disappointment at not visiting a shop labeled succinctly "Aphrodisia."

"We did go back later," Miss Loos confided. "It's an emormous place with everything imaginable."

And did they sample the wares?

Miss Hayes chuckled. "We didn't try any aphrodisiacs. At our age what good would it do?"

You can help

Each week Life/style brings readers a list of volunteer opportunities. Those wishing further information may contact the Community Volunteer Office, an agency of the United Way, at 426-7171, 10 a.m.-3 p.m., Monday through Friday.

HAVE HEART: Typists are needed to help with a national drive to aid heart patients.

SIGN UPS: A Long Beach hospital is recruiting volunteers for an orientation program which will begin in November.

SALES TALK: Volunteers to work in a gift shop are needed at a convalescent hospital.

FRONT DESK: Welfare agency needs volunteers to conduct interviews Mondays and Thursdays.

CUT UP: Volunteer to read newspapers and assemble clippings is needed as a public relations aide for a major fund-raising program.

BELLFLOWER AREA: A coordinator is needed for a volunteer program at a Bellflower Health facility. Also, a clinic in the area needs interviewers to help with an evening immunization program. Spanish-speaking volunteers are especially needed.

FAMILY SERVICES: A counseling agency which works with family problems needs typists and clerical aides.

The Aces

on bridge

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Dear Mr. Corn:

We are four average players who play at lunchtime. Last week we underbid a grand slam. How would The Aces have bid?

WEST	EAST
♠ A J 7 5 2	♠ K 9 6
♥ A K Q 10 5	♥ J 8 7
♦ A 7 5	♦ K Q 9 6
♣ —	♣ A 8 7

Timid Twosome,
Detroit

Answer: Just because a grand slam makes does not mean you should have bid it. A grand slam should be ventured only when you have about 75 per cent chance of success. At best, your hand required a successful spade finesse to make 13 tricks. The Aces would have bid to six spades after use of the Grand Slam Force to find out about the solidity of the trump suit (five no trump asks partner to bid seven, nolding two of the top three honors). For example:

1 ♠ —2 ♦
3 ♥ —3 ♠
4 ♦ —5 ♣
5 NT—6 ♠

Dear Mr. Corn:

We enjoyed a sensational result on this hand but I somehow feel that we were a little lucky. Can you comment on the bidding? The opponents doubled and I redoubled for a huge score.

WEST	EAST
♠ 7 6 5	♠ A K Q 8
♥ 4 3 2	♥ A K Q
♦ A 9 8 3	♦ K
♣ J 9 5	♣ A K Q 4 3

Our bidding:

	2 NT
3 NT	4 NT
5 ♦	7 NT

Raked It In,
Cleveland

Answer: Yes, you were a bit lucky. The opponents had only optimism as a reason for a double. There was no assurance that the club suit would "run" after your bidding sequence. I suggest:

West	East
2 NT	3 ♠
4 ♣	4 NT
5 ♦	7 ♣

Dear Mr. Corn:

We missed a club game on the following hands. How should we have reached it?

WEST	EAST
♠ —	♠ Q 10 8 3 2
♥ 9 8	♥ K Q 10 4
♦ A J 10 6 4 3	♦ 8
♣ A K Q 8 6	♣ 10 9 2

Our bidding:

1 ♠	1 ♣
2 ♣	Pass

Many Overtricks,
San Francisco

Answer: The game is not cold and some breaks are needed in the minor suits. I approve of your bidding — after all, it's not often that a minor suit game is made on a combined holding of 21 high-card points. Dear Mr. Corn:

What are the rough odds one might use as a guide in bidding close games in rubber bridge?

Auxiliary sets poison puppet show

"Remember Little Jill," a seven-minute hand puppet show detailing the hazards of pill taking for children, will be presented Thursday and Friday by Women's Auxiliary to Long Beach Pharmaceutical Association.

The 10 a.m. performance will be given for preschoolers at Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd, Buena Park.

Mrs. Gordon Davis of Long Beach and Mrs. Larry Cacace of La Palma are in charge of the puppet show, which is available for showing to pre-schoolers. Information may be obtained from them regarding scheduling.

Thursday dinner to make note of U.N. Week in Long Beach

"International Hijacking" will be the topic of Jay Adsen, Chief of Air Transportation for the Federal Aviation Administration's security division, at the United Nations Day program Thursday.

Judge Beach Vasey, honorary chairman of UN week, also will address the dinner gathering, to be held at the Petroleum Club, 3636 Linden Ave. Cocktails begin at 6 p.m., dinner will be served at 6:30.

Reservations at $5 each, including tax and tip, may be made by calling the United Nations Association office.

Panel to discuss pros and cons of death penalty

A panel discussion on Proposition 17, the death penalty initiative on the November ballot, will be sponsored Monday by Altrusa Club of Long Beach.

The 7:30 p.m. program will take place in the community room of Fidelity Federal Plaza, 555 E. Ocean Blvd.

Panelists will be State Sen. George Deukmejian, who favors the proposition, and Dr. Edwin C. Morgenroth, former president of Pacific Oaks College in Pasadena, who opposes the measure.

A question and answer period will follow. The public may attend.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

He's a star at fluffy omelets

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

Here's one to start your day out right!

Asked what his hobbies were, he replied—without ever a second thought—"My lovely wife and beautiful family."

When not 'hobbying,' today's Chef of the Week, Russell Guiver, is owner-manager of the Signal Mortgage Company. A resident of Long Beach since 1952, he has spent the past 15 years in the mortgage business.

He moved with his family from Portland, Ore., to Los Angeles for better opportunities. He was 6 at the time, and it was during the depression.

Guiver was graduated from Manual Arts High School and Occidental College with a B.A. degree in political science and government. He also completed a course in public administration at USC.

RUSSELL GUIVER

GUIVER'S LIFE hasn't all been devoted to mortgages. He was a movie "star" right off the bat. His mother taught elocution and his dad, music, while he and his brother both played in the film, "Little Rascals."

He devoted five years of his busy life as a Christian Science practitioner, also serving as first reader for three years at the Fifth Church of Christ Science, Long Beach.

During World War II, Guiver served four years in the U.S. Navy, the last year of which he was an officer in the Underground Demolition Team. He was based in the South Pacific, Philippines, Okinawa and Japan.

A member of the Downtown Lions Club, Guiver is a past president of the Naples Island Business Associates and currently is serving on the executive board of the Long Beach State University Touchdown Club. He was the recipient of its Non-Participant Sports Award for 1972.

He and his wife, Alberta, enjoy six children. Carroll, 22, and her husband, Don Hall, live in Long Beach. Jill, 16, attends Wilson High School; a foster son, Robert, 12, is a student at Tincher Elementary as are Melody, 10, and Bruce, 9. Hope, 5, attends Wingrock, a Christian Science School in Torrance.

Guiver's timing is perfect. The family has learned to add exactly 30 minutes to the time Dad says he'll arrive home.

"He's a great cook, and does lots of it," says Alberta. Today, he's whipping up a fluffy omelet.

RUSSELL'S OMELET

- 4 tablespoons bacon drippings
- 1 fresh tomato, chopped
- 4 large fresh mushrooms, thickly sliced
- ½ bell pepper, chopped
- ½ cup Cheddar cheese, grated
- 10 eggs
- ¼ cup milk
- Salt
- Pepper

Saute tomato, mushrooms and bell pepper in bacon drippings over medium heat.

Meantime, break eggs into bowl, whip with fork adding ¼ cup milk and salt and pepper to taste. Pour egg mixture into pan with sauteed ingredients. Cook about three minutes over medium heat, poking occasionally. Add grated cheese. Lower heat and cover pan. Cook about 5 more minutes. Serves 6.

Catholic confab

The 25th annual conference of the Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Women will convene Thursday in the Beverly Hillton Hotel, Beverly Hills.

Mrs. Louis J. Paradiso, president, will call the session to order at 10 a.m., following a celebration of Mass in the Grand Ballroom.

"Let's Celebrate Family Life" is theme for the conference.

The morning session will feature talks by Mrs. Joan Ohanneson, creative producer at Franciscan Production Center, speaking on "Being a Woman," and Sister Georgine Marie Port, C.S.F., assistant director of resources development and college relations at Mt. St. Mary's College, discussing "The Family — Unharvested Greatness."

Bishop Edward T. O'Meara, S.T.D., national director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, and recently appointed auxiliary bishop of St. Louis, will be luncheon speaker. His speech will follow the conference theme, detailing the role of the family unit in today's society.

More than 2,000 women from Los Angeles, Orange, Ventura and Santa Barbara Counties are expected to attend.

Mrs. James Brennan of Long Beach is immediate past president of the Council.

Velour—leader in luxury look

By FRANCES DIETRICH

There's something intriguing about velour. Textile experts and dictionary writers alike equivocate about its exact name, calling it variously velour, velours and velure.

Velour is a French word meaning velvety, though it is not true velvet. Actually, the name is an umbrella that covers many kinds of pile fabrics from thick wool plush to cotton upholstery.

It's simpler to concentrate on the velour that's making a hit today. This version is a knit with a short pile surface. Thousands of tiny loops are woven into the backing, then sheared and brushed.

The result is a supple, drapeable fabric with greater surface density than velvet. It has a soft, dry, matte finish with the look of luxury. Light weights are making themselves known in day dresses, evening and loungewear. Those a bit heavier are used for men's sportswear. In the latter version, the soft, comfortable surface can be enjoyed without the formality of a fabric such as velvet.

A PARTICULARLY stunning knit velour line is offered by Blue-Ridge Winkler Textiles, a company which supplies garment manufacturers, and which has also entered the field of retail fabric for home sewers.

The velour is 80 per cent Arnel triacetate and 20 per cent nylon. This combination provides strength in the nylon and a silkiness on the skin side. The triacetate contributes the soft touch of the surface.

The compatibility of nylon and triacetate makes it machine washable and machine dryable. It is distributed nationally at an average price of $3.50 to $5 per yard depending upon the weight. It is 48 inches wide.

Prints range from jumbo plaids in traditional and nontraditional color combinations to a Victorian rose on a chalk ground; including an ultramodern bullseye in shimmering brights, a childlike flower on sophisticated background colors, and a large size Persian paisley that all but glows. Solids are in primary, earth, glazed and pottery tones.

Triacetate, which has a particular capacity for absorbing color, gives both prints and solids a feeling of depth and clarity.

Knit velour fits into its own particular niche in the fashion world with its combination of drapeability, practicality, and its individuality, which is neither velvet nor velveteen.

DON VERHOEF JOE MESMAN

LONG SHAGGY TEXTURES are one of the most popular trends in carpeting, and with good sound reasons. They look luxurious, soak up sounds, don't show soiling easily, and blend nicely with a variety of decorative schemes.

Which brings up the question of fiber strength, and whether a shaggy carpet with long texture is always better than a short, tufted carpet. The answer is no. Length does add to the cost of carpets that are otherwise the same, but it is not the most important factor. The real measure of quality in carpeting (insofar as you can single out just one) is thickness, or density. If the pile is long but spaced out, or "thin," the carpet is not of as good quality as one where the pile is densely packed.

While it isn't practical to try to count the number of fibers in a square yard of carpeting, a close examination, from the top and underneath, will show you which of several carpets has greater density. Whether it's tufted or woven, the more pile squeezed into each square yard of carpet, the better the carpet, and relatively the more it should cost.

Let us help you answer all your carpet questions, from density to length to the difference in fibers. And we can help you select colors and textures to complement your decor beautifully.

Roses in plain water after 7 days

Roses in Stay Bloom and water after 7 days

New Stay Bloom keeps many cut flowers alive days longer

Because Stay Bloom keeps the moisture in.

When a flower is cut, it begins to starve. Water alone isn't nearly enough. Stay Bloom™ has the power to actually help cut flowers absorb moisture. So they stay fresh longer. The scale test at the left shows how a flower in plain water actually loses moisture and dries up.

This test was conducted over a 7 day period. The rose in Stay Bloom and water gained 25% in weight. The rose in water alone lost 25% in weight.

Stay Bloom is flower food. It supplies nourishment so a flower lives days longer. Stay Bloom is especially good for most hard-stemmed flowers. Flowers like roses, carnations, mums and gladiolas. Just add two capfuls of Stay Bloom to one pint of water.

Get new Stay Bloom cut flower life extender. It's available in supermarkets in your area. It really works!

Old fashioned patriotism stirs tonight

By JEAN SANDERS

"I'm still not an American citizen. I have two years to go."

Quietly impatient for citizenship, Cuba-born Alberto Bolet will find an outlet tonight for his feelings about America when he conducts the Long Beach Symphony Orchestra in "A Testament of Freedom."

At a preview of the concert in the Park Estates home of Mrs. Lloyd Mallin, the music director effervesced about the opening concert at 7:30 o'clock before the Symphony Guild.

Ideas for the program began perking last year when Bolet and Topper Smith, then symphony manager, were discussing some of the problems confronting America —drugs, pornography, burning of the Flag. Bolet wondered about a revival of music by American composers. Appropriate selections by famous American writers were suggested by Smith.

IT WILL BE an unabashedly patriotic program at 7:30 p.m. in Wilson High School auditorium. Bolet hopes the audience will enter into the spirit immediately by singing the national anthem which opens the concert and America the Beautiful which will close it.

The carefully balanced program will feature actor John Carradine reading selections from works by famous American writers and the symphony responding with musical selections by American composers. A voice choir will enhance the patriotic mood of the evening.

"It is not an ordinary symphonic program", Bolet agrees.

For this very reason it may be very refreshing.

Tickets for the performance may be purchased at the box office tonight. Season ticket information may be obtained by calling the Symphony office, 121 Linden Ave.

Ukrainian troupe due

EXCHANGE of decorated eggs is custom with Dukla region's young lovers.

Everything from axes to eggs are put to effective use in fast-paced dances by the brilliantly costumed Dukla Ukrainian Dance Company to appear in five performances beginning Friday in the Music Center Pavilion, Los Angeles.

Male members of the 90-member troupe of dancers, singers and musicians swing axes at high speed as they take center stage during the podhala.

It, like all the dances of the Dukla repertory, reflects the complex history and cultural background of the Rusyn-Ukrainians. Originally from the Ukraine, their ancestors settled on the south side of the Carpathian mountains, intermingling with the Slovaks and the Hungarians in the east, and with the Austrians, Moravians and Bohemians in the west.

During a rain dance celebrating the coming of spring, an egg is passed from the hands of the dancers.

THE EGG, like the mountaineer's axe, figures prominently in Dukla region tradition. When a young swain fancies a girl, he douses her with a bucket of water. In exchange for this damp attention, the girl gives the boy an intricately painted egg and a shot of vodka.

Next day the process is reversed if the girl shares the affection. While not confined to the teen years, it is most popular in that age group. If youngsters are involved, the shot is usually syrup. A girl's popularity over the years can be measured in her decorated egg collection. The company, based in Presov, Czechoslovakia, is appearing by arrangement with S. Hurok on its first American tour.

Two matinees are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Evening performances are at 8:30 p.m.

FOLK DRAWING depicts typical Ukrainian woman's multi-layered costume with embroidered floral design and headdress. Cossack trousers tucked into red boots, full sleeved shirts allow male dancer to perform breathtaking leaps and turns.

Five art groups set exhibit at Cerritos

When Lakewood Artist Guild convenes Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Mayfair Park, Jean Brass will be featured artist-speaker. She is conducting workshops currently for the Norwalk-La Mirada Adult School.

Mrs. Brass judged the October guild membership show in which top winners were Carmen Leslie, Ruth Eyrich and Louise Brock Anderson. Beth Waller won the Theodore Ediss Founders Award, while Marj Chambers won the Peter Steyl Award.

Honorable mention went to John Bratt, Betty Maxwell, Ruth Eyrich, Carl Gonnella and Dorothy DePass. Special awards went to Louise Brown, Mary Stamback, Barbara Reddick, Eileen Waller, Ethel Rakestraw, Celia Wheadon, Dorothy DePass, Marj Chambers, Virginia Moses and Maggie Vonk.

BEST ART works of members of five community arts associations will be exhibited through Nov. 12 when Cerritos College Community Show opens Tuesday in the college art gallery, 11110 E. Alondra Blvd., Norwalk. Admission is free.

Works in the exhibition will be from members of the Bellflower Art Association headed by Jeff Sherwood, the Downey Art League headed by Muriel Zelman, Lakewood Art Guild headed by John Edwin Braff, La Mirada Arts Colony headed by Vi Logan and Norwalk Art Association headed by Mike Kevoin.

Nine winners among the 150 entries will be chosen by Manual DeLeon, Walter Leather Jones and Linda Levi, Cerritos College art instructors.

Gallery hours are Sundays through Fridays, noon to 4:30 p.m., and Monday through Thursday evenings from 6-9 p.m. Closed Saturday.

CYPRESS Cultural Arts Association Inc. is presenting a one-woman show by Mrs. Susie Griep at Cypress Civic Center through October. The artist's prankish humor is evident in her linocuts, mosaics, ceramics and stitchery.

TO PROVIDE additional insight into the major exhibition currently at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, Thomas Messer will discuss the work of Vasily Kandinsky at a free public lecture today at 2 p.m. in the Leo S. Bing Theater of the museum.

Messer is director of The Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum in New York which lent the large exhibition of the Russian artist's works. Kandinsky is considered by many to be the most radical painter of the 20th century.

Museum visitors will be able to see the Kandinsky showing before and after Messer's talk. The exhibition may be seen through Nov. 19. Location of the museum is 5905 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles.

The exhibition, seen earlier this year in New York, will not be seen elsewhere. It may be several years before a Kandinsky exhibition of this size will be available to the public, even at the Guggenheim Museum itself.

AN EXHIBIT and sale of Israel arts and antiquities will take place Tuesday through Nov. 19 in the Ethnic Arts Shop of the Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County, 900 Exposition Blvd. Items include Roman glass, ancient oil lamps, Torah fragments and crowns, hand crafted jewelry, stained glass, copper sculpture, rugs and wall hangings, batiks weavings and macrame.

"TELEGRAPHIC Paintings" by David Lawrence, art teacher at San Bernardino Valley College, will be shown in Purcell Gallery at Chapman College, Orange, from Monday through Nov. 3. Admission is free to the gallery, which is open Mondays through Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The exhibit will present Lawrence's sumi painting which he executes in bold black on large canvases. His present style evolved from interests in Zen Buddhism and calligraphy, both of which he studied in the Far East.

ETCHINGS depicting California scenery in the 20s and 30s by Arthur Millier are on view through Nov. 5 at Pasadena Art Museum. Downtown Los Angeles is shown as a sleepy, folksy town. The charms of San Francisco, the Big Sur coastal area and Mono Lake are fondly portrayed, as is the peaceful Southern California countryside, still remembered by many with nostalgia.

Another exhibit at the Pasadena museum concerns Southern California: Attitudes 1972, intended to provide the public with a view of current directions being taken by a number of Southland artists.

Collectively, the artists represent neither a school of art nor a specific point of view. Instead, each is confronting the critical issue of art in distinct, personal ways apart from an organized fronts of activity.

Included in the exhibition, which continues through Nov. 5, are John Baldessari, Joel Bass, Carole Caroompas, Edie Danieli, Tom Eatherton, Jud Fine, Gilah Hirsch, Pat Hogan, Freeland Tahn Hyun, John Knight, Gary Krueger, Michael Olodort, Alexis Smith, John Schroeder, Ellen Van Fleet, Guy Williams and Richard Yokomi.

G. PIATIGORSKY

Cellist on Pavilion program

One of the most highly esteemed performing artists of our time, cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, will play Bloch's "Shelemo" when the Los Angeles Philharmonic opens its season Thursday at 8:30 p.m. and Friday at 1:30 p.m. in the Music Center Pavilion. Zubin Mehta will conduct.

The program also includes Stravinsky's arrangement of the "Star Spangled Banner", published in 1944 when the composer was applying for American citizenship, Beethoven's "Coriolan" overture and Mahler's Fifth Symphony.

The Mahler marks a continuation of the orchestra's cycle encompassing all that composer's major symphonic works, while the Stravinsky inaugurates a similar cycle of the Russian composer's orchestral music.

Tickets for the opening concerts are available at the Pavilion box office and most agencies.

Film classic

Actress Gale Sondergaard will appear in person at El Camino College's cinema classics series Thursday at 7:30 p.m. when "The Letter" will be shown. She will reminisce about her long motion picture career after the film.

Tickets are available at the box office on performance night. The college is located at Crenshaw and Redondo Beach Blvds.

Concerts: baroque to wind

First free public concert of the season by University of Southern California Symphony Orchestra will take place Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Bovard Auditorium, with Daniel Lewis conducting.

The program will consist of Czech composer Bohuslav Martinu's Concerto for String Orchestra, Piano and Tympani, featuring Walter Kennon and Dov Scharf as soloists.

The love music from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz and Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Don Juan" complete the concert.

THE BAROQUE Consortium, a non-profit group of South Bay singers and instrumentalists, will give a concert next Sunday at 8 p.m. in St. Lawrence Martyr Catholic Church, 1900 S. Prospect Ave., Redondo Beach. Admission is free.

Lyle C. Heck is conductor of the group. Soloists will be Patricia Smith, soprano, of Hollywood Riviera, and harpsichordists Dorothy Asher of San Pedro and Mary Ann Schulz, Hollywood Riviera.

New singers may audition during the regular Monday evening rehearsal at 8 p.m. Nov. 6 in South High School, Torrance.

THE DORIAN Woodwind Quintet of New York, one of the country's leading chamber music groups, will be presented in concert next Sunday at 7 p.m. in Hancock Auditorium, University of Southern California.

Tickets at $3 for adults and $1 for students may be reserved by calling the USC office of public events and programs.

The quintet has become a well-known participant in the unique world of woodwind music through extensive tours in the U.S. and Europe as well as under State Department auspices in Africa, Asia and the Near East.

PIANIST Boaz Sharon of Israel, Debut Award winner in the 1972 Young Musicians Foundation national competition, will appear with the Debut Orchestra in its opening concert next Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in UCLA's Royce Hall. Paul Polivnick will conduct.

Sharon, 23, will perform Beethoven's First Piano Concerto.

Duo opens at museum

Doors to the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., will swing open Thursday at 7:30 p.m. for seating at the admission free chamber music concert featuring the Steiner-Berfield Duo. The program by Frances Steiner, cello, and David Berfield, piano, begins at 8:15 p.m.

Miss Steiner has been principal cellist of the New York Festival Orchestra in Lincoln Center, the Brooklyn College Baroque Festival in Carnegie Hall and the California Chamber Symphony.

A graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music, Radcliffe College, USC and the Fontainbleau School of Music, she has studied with such outstanding musicians as Gregor Piatigorsky, Leonard Rose, Gabor Rejto, Eugene Istomin and Nadia Boulanger.

A member of the piano faculty at University of Southern California, David Berfield has appeared at Monday Evening Concerts, and on radio and television. He has concertized extensively throughout the Southland.

He was graduated with honors from Oberlin Conservatory of Music and was a Fulbright Award Scholar. He studied with Nadia Boulanger in Paris and with Leonard Shure in New York City. He is completing his doctorate in music at USC.

Army Blues' pop concert Bixby Park crowd-puller

"The Army Blues", stage band of the United States Army Band of Washington, D.C., will be in Long Beach next Sunday to give a program at 2:30 p.m. in Bixby Park. The concert is free and open to the public.

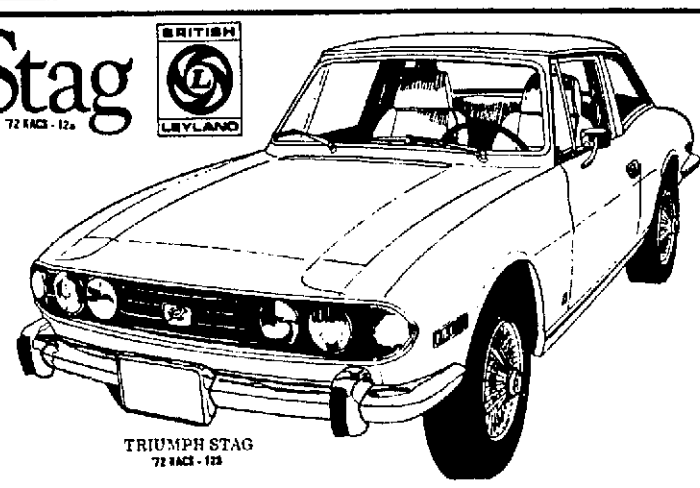

Under direction of Col. Samuel R. Loboda, "The Blues" will play their own versions of the latest innovative sounds of Burt Bacharach, The Carpenters, Blood, Sweat and Tears, Chicago and other of the most popular and successful music performers today.

"The Army Blues" have performed on the main concourse of The Pentagon and at The Watergate in Washington, D. C., as well as high schools and universities in and around the nation's capital.

Vocalist with the band will be Specialist Walter Skees who at 16 was singing professionally on television and in night clubs throughout the country.

Skees followed Steve Lawrence as featured vocalist with The United States Army Band. He recently returned from a singing tour of the Caribbean area and an engagement as a headliner at Radio City Music Hall in New York.

DEAR ABBY

Almost hooked on fish tale

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Have you ever heard of a fish falling from the sky?

My husband is serious about the fact that once when it was raining, he saw a small fish coming down with the rain!

When I laughed at him, he explained that the sun had picked up the egg from the stream, and it hatched in the sky, so when it rained, a live fish came down.

I think this is ridiculous and that my husband needs help. I'd like to hear from you. WONDERING IN KANSAS

DEAR KANSAS: Your husband's story sounds fishy to me. Are there any pisciculturists out there who can reel in the answer to this? I seem to have heard this fishtale before.

DEAR ABBY: Someone asked if honesty paid. Let me tell my story:

On a beautiful sunny afternoon, I took my wife and children to lunch in the country. En route home I had to make a phone call so I stopped at a gasoline station, opened the telephone book and found a coin purse with about $300 in it. No identification — no nothing. I was on my way to turn it in to the service station attendant when a woman drove up and asked if anyone had seen her coin purse. I immediately handed it to her. She had just cashed a check and was en route to the airport to visit a sick relative. She wanted to give me a reward. I said, "No, thank you. A person doesn't need a reward for being honest."

I hope my children remember this episode. RON PELL, RIVERSIDE, CALIF

DEAR RON: They will now.

DEAR ABBY: I got a kick out of "No Gambler" — the gal who went to the races with a guy who gave her $2 to bet a horse. Her horse came in and paid $70, she offered the guy half, and he said if she didn't give him the whole $70 he wouldn't take her home, so she kept the $70 and she took a bus.

You told her she was better at picking horses than people and to stick with whole horses. Well, listen to this:

I took a gal to the races and gave her $10. She picked a long shot and won $660. She thanked me for the thrill of winning and shoved the $660 in my pocket.

With the world so full of grabby broads you can imagine how big a hit this kid made with me. I must have sent her $3,000 in perfume and jewelry. In fact, if I wasn't already married, I'd have asked her to marry me. FREDDY

KONIGSEE LAUNCH STARTS THE RETURN TRIP FROM ST. BARTHOLOMAE IN BAVARIAN ALPS

Alpine cruise hits high note

By HERB SHANNON
I,P-T Travel Editor

BERCHTESGADEN, Germany — Cruising on the Konigsee high in the Bavarian Alps is easily the most popular attraction of this yodeler's paradise. The clear emerald waters of the fjord-like lake snake for five miles into the heart of Germany's most spectacular mountain scenery.

Electric-powered sightseeing launches glide silently and without air or water pollution between sheer granite cliffs descending vertically to the shore on either side. Like pine-clad curtains, the cliffs unfold new and more breathtaking views around every bend.

The boats ply at 10 to 20-minute intervals from the Konigsee piers near Berchtesgaden to the domes of St. Bartholomae chapel, set on a small plateau against an incredible mountain backdrop near the other end of the lake. The price is right for the two-hour round trip - six Deutschmarks, about $1.80 at current rates.

PRICES generally in the Berchtesgaden area revive optimism in the hopeful $5-a-day traveler. Even the omnipresent souvenir shops are reasonable. Farmhouse accommodations are plentiful for as low as $3 a day, and the Alpine resort villas abounding throughout the region start room rentals in the $5 bracket with the view and flowers on the balcony thrown in for free.

For all of its perpendicularity, Berchtesgaden is only a couple of hours from Munich by bus or car on virtually level roads. The trip can be made in less time than that by avoiding the weekend autobahn traffic going on to Salzburg on the other side of the mountains. Lufthansa German Airlines brings Munich within an hour of Frankfurt, the principal gateway to Germany from Los Angeles.

A former hunting lodge in the tiny settlement at St. Bartholomae now serves as a public restaurant. In addition to roast pork and potato dumplings, the menu on the day I visited featured a starter which translated as pancake soup. This turned out to be akin to chicken noodle, except that the noodles were sliced from thin raised flapjacks.

On other occasions the daily fare may include a local fish specialty, the Konigsee Saibling. When smoked, billed as Schwarzreiterl and taken with a foaming stein, it puts salmon and kippers to shame.

Overlooking the Konigsee is the Kehlsteinhaus, all that remains of Adolf Hitler's mountain retreat, Eagle's Nest. A tunnel into the heart of the mountain below leads to a room-sized elevator which zooms the last 412 feet to the restaurant on top in 90 seconds.

THE KEHLSTEIN is not necessarily an attraction to the Berchtesgaden area, in the opinion of the Konigsee boat operators. Ours pointed out the lofty perch when asked, but he shrugged it off as a haven for morbid curiosity seekers.

"Mostly Americans go up there," he said. "German tourists like it better down here on the water."

On the return from St. Bartholomae, the launch engine was turned off midway and the boat drifted to a halt about 300 yards from a sparsely wooded part of the cliffside.

One of the crewmen put a trumpet to his lips, faced the rocky palisade and played the first four notes of a slow refrain not unlike "How Dry I Am."

He paused for what seemed nearly half a minute. Then, back across the silent waters, came the same four notes from somewhere aft, closely followed by a fainter rendition off the bow.

STILL the trumpeter waited. When a very faint echo from the opposite shore subsided, he played four more notes at the same slow pace, waiting for the first returns from the nearer shore.

Then came variations on the first theme, gradually picking up the pace so that the echoes began to overlap the new melody. For a final flourish, the self - accompanied trumpeter bounced a few bars in a higher register off the cliff and then played what sounded like four-part harmony with the echoes.

As the last reverberation died away and the crewman stowed his trumpet, the passengers burst into spontaneous applause for the one-man band.

Which was quickly followed at my suggestion by a big hand for the three other members of the quartet hiding on shore.

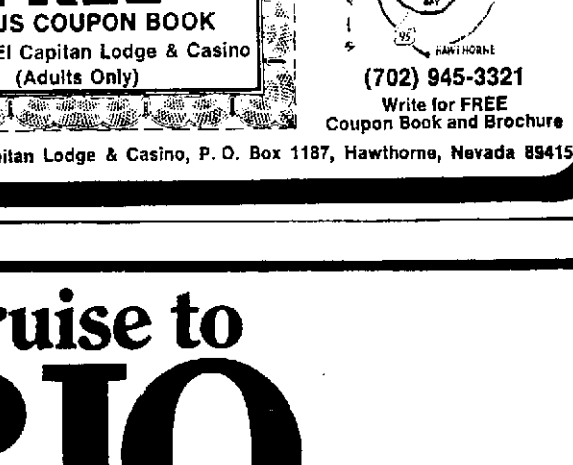

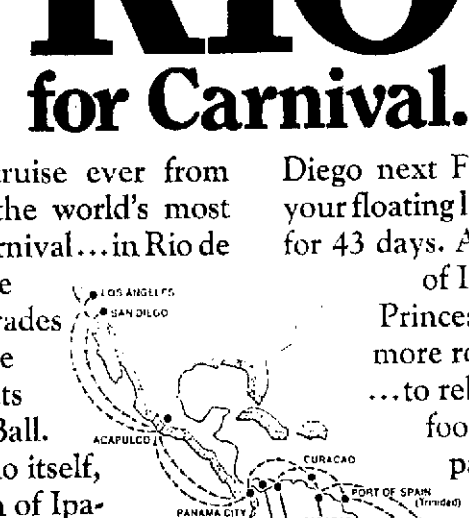

Rent a horse

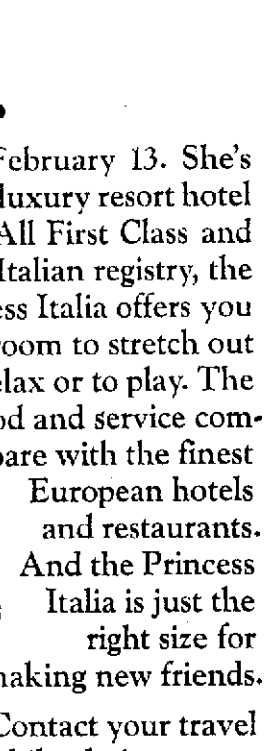

Riding the Western Pleasure horse over time-worn desert trails is the "In Thing" in Palm Springs. Horses can be rented at various locations in the resort, including Smoke Tree Stables, Los Compadres Stables and Jim Chandler Ranch.

Island fly-in

Air France opens its first 747 superjet service between the U.S. and the French Caribbean island of Martinique Nov. 4. The giant 357-seat jet will depart New York every Saturday for Fort-de-France, with the return trip scheduled for later the same day.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Irish pub crawling is tourist's best bet travel

By STAN DELAPLANE

Dublin

The great drink of Ireland is Guinness, a rich dark stout with a creamy head. Every Irishman feels he is an expert on "the pint."

The Guinness man told me: "We don't have to watchdog the quality of the pints drawn. Customers are quick to point out any shortcomings." The best pints are served along the quays of the Liffey where dockers drink.

"Dockers demand and get the highest standards in Ireland."

Try Mulligan's of Poolbeg Street — half dockers and half newspaper people.

Around the corner on the Liffey: The Silver Swan on George's Quay. A little fancier clientele. Dockers and thirsty reporters from the Irish Press.

Neary's on Chatham, just off Grafton, the big shopping street. Lot of beards and backpackers.

Brazen Head is the oldest. Licensed in 1966. Davy Byrne's in Duke Street was mentioned in Joyce's "Ulysses." And you can't find a pub in all Dublin that doesn't claim to have been the favorite of Brendan Behan.

The pint is drawn with forward and backward pulls at the pump to produce the right head. Irishmen claim there are expert bartenders who can make a foam shamrock, so thick it lasts all the way to the bottom without losing shape.

Another is called "The Smiling Pint." The smiling face on the foam — if drawn right — should last to the bottom of the glass.

"We expect to drive through Ireland next summer, then ship our car to England and later to the Continent. Now about maps . . ."

Occasionally — and it's rare enough — a service station will have a free map for you. Don't depend on it. Even "service" station is a curious word. I said to the Dublin station man, "My windshield needs cleaning." He gave me a wet rag. "Give it a lick with this," he said.

In Ireland I buy area maps in stationery stores. For backpackers, Government Ordnance Survey maps are so detailed you can follow footpaths across fields. Something farmers don't seem to object to in this friendly country.

England the same. Though often a gas station will sell you maps that I suspect were supposed to be given free. On the Continent, Michelin (the tire people) make the best maps. Sold in stores, Particularly good for backpackers or bikers. They show the steepness of grades on hills.

Ordnance Survey of England has some fine maps for sale. One handsome enough for framing shows Roman Britain. ($2.50 U.S.) You have to make a modern map overlay if you are using it to locate Roman roads.

"If we are asking directions but don't know the language . . . ?"

All those little phrase books have a section on motoring. Point to the phrase you want. You'll probably get it by hand signals.

Not true in Ireland — where you understand the language. Ask an Irishman for directions and he makes a day of it. "My good man, I don't wish to grieve you, but in all the fine city of Dublin, there is no such street as you're asking for, and I'm telling you the truth, so help me God. You've got the wrong information. I'm sorry to tell you, but you've been poorly informed. Poor information, that's what's been given you."

The English are wonderfully polite and give good directions. A country Frenchman will be helpful. A Parisian thinks you're on a con game. Germans feel you should be efficient enough to know. They can't bear inefficiency and will direct you but in a disapproving way. I got lost in Greece. I can't even read Greek, so I just muddled along and finally found some signs in English.

"Will we have problems if we need car repairs?"

Better get a car that is sold all over Europe. I don't care much for the VW, but you can find a VW repair place in almost every town. If you're shipping it back to the U.S. it has a good resale value. But be sure you buy the EXPORT model. The local VWs don't have the build our laws require. If you order in the U.S. you'll get what you need in Europe.

Foreign food review

Air France has come to the rescue of the hungry tourist with a new guide to inexpensive Paris keyed to the main sightseeing areas of the city.

Now the visitor with an appetite built up by a morning's exploration of the Louvre or an afternoon's meandering through Montmartre need only consult the handy guide to find a recommended and reasonable restaurant only a footstep or two away.

Called "In expensive Paris Restaurants Near Famous Monuments", the pocket-size folder describes more than 50 restaurants in the ten most popular parts of Paris.

Listings include the cost of fixed price meals (luncheons from $2), note specialties, and mention service and wine charges. Menu selections range from light lunches to full course dinners.

The guide is conveniently divided into Right and Left Bank areas and includes a map of each. In addition, there is a brief vocabulary of French dining terminology.

The illustrated guide is available free by writing to Air France, Box 747, New York, N.Y. 10011.

Film history

Paris, the city where movies have always been more a passion than a mere pastime, has a new Cinema Museum in the Palais de Chaillot. The history of films is presented in exhibitions, plus, gigantic blow-ups of matinee idols from Garbo to John Wayne.

The Orient comes easy on Northwest

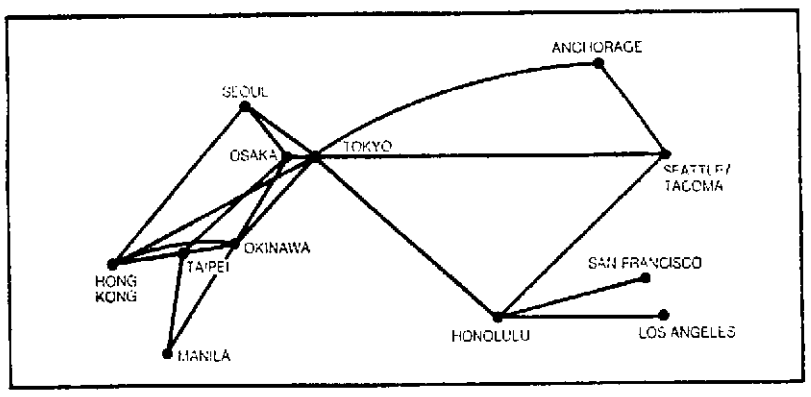

Daily flights direct to Tokyo

Northwest takes you straight through to the Orient—via Honolulu to Tokyo—on a beautiful, luxurious 747.

Leave from Los Angeles International Monday, Thursday, or Saturday at 1:30 pm. You'll arrive in Tokyo at 9:50 pm the following day after crossing the International Date Line.

Besides the mid-Pacific route (via Honolulu), you can fly the north-Pacific route, via Seattle. Or the polar route, via Anchorage. Northwest offers this wide choice of routes from cities across the USA.

Pre-trip planning

Documentation and health requirements naturally vary from time to time and from country to country. You can count on Northwest and your travel agent to have completely up-to-date information on passports, visas, immunization certificates, etc.

Individual business cards

Northwest will imprint your business cards in Japanese, Chinese, or Korean for less than $4.00 per hundred. Just give us two weeks. Your cards will be waiting for you at the Northwest Ticket Office at your Orient destination.

Stopovers, wherever you like

If you're going on a business trip, why not include a relaxing stop somewhere along the way? Going or coming, spend a few days swimming and sunning in Hawaii. Enjoy the fun of a Northwest Mini-Vacation in Seattle. Or explore Alaska on one of our Anchorage package tours. Ask us or your travel agent for details about these and other stopover options.

Complete range of Orient tours

Looking forward to that vacation-of-a-lifetime? The Orient is our second home, and we'd like nothing better than to show you around. We offer a fine selection of tours—Orient, South Seas, Round-the-World—ranging from $997 for 16 days to $5865 for 80 days. Complete itineraries are fully described in large folders—available free at Northwest ticket offices or from any Travel Agent.

*Prices (subject to change) are per person, based on double-occupancy accommodations, and include round-trip jet fare from Los Angeles. U.S. transportation tax not included.

Exclusive Regal Imperial Service

Hot, scented Oshibori towels to refresh you. Your favorite cocktails and liquors. Kuchitori hors d'oeuvres. Tempting entrees from our select menus. Fine wines. Luscious desserts. After-dinner liqueurs. Plus movies and/or stereo ($2.50 charge) on international 747 flights. And on most of our 747 flights, you can tune to a new stereo channel offering pointers on conversational Japanese.

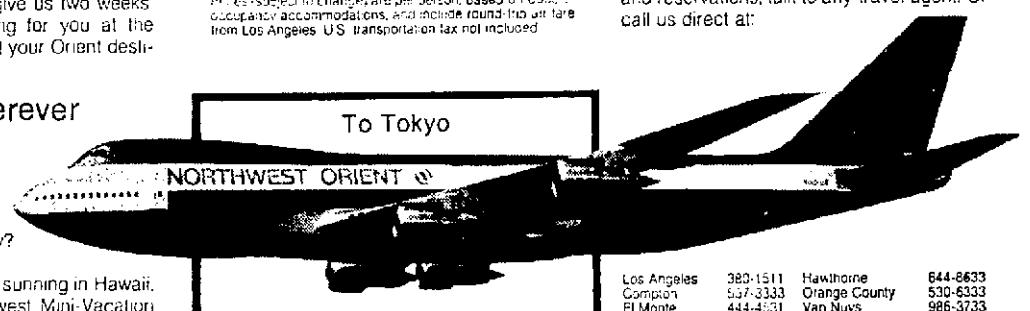

Airport duty-free shop

There's a duty-free shop at Los Angeles International. Here's a tip: You can buy the expensive scotch whiskies for substantially less than the regular retail price. We hear they're the favorite gift of Japanese businessmen. And you can take three bottles into Japan without paying any duty.

AT REST IN ALASKAN WATERS, ARCADIA WILL REPLACE ORONSAY ON WEST COAST SAILING

A floating honeymoon aboard P&O cruise ship to Alaska

By GARY ELLIS
Staff Writer

Hop aboard and let your floating hotel bring you to spectacular beauty. For two weeks P&O's Oronsay was my honeymoon hotel on an Alaskan cruise.

Some cruise books say the "let's-have-a-bash ambiance is missing" from English ships but the Oronsay's 600-man crew supplied much of the excitement.

It takes a tin-ear passenger several days to become accustomed to the English language, at least the language practiced by the English, but that's some of the novelty of the cruise. The environment is, well, British.

It's like walking into the filming of a Jack Hawkins movie. Mustaches are curled and well cared for. And if you get to know your bedroom steward you're in for a cultural exchange you'll never find in a textbook.

On our two-week cruise, the crew was jovial and rendered great service. The cabin steward wakes you in the morning with a song, coffee, juice and rolls. From breakfast until an 11 p.m. snack, you can coat your palate with pastries (baked daily), fine dinners and the best spirits money can buy (30 cents for a shot and a half).

J.A.P. Crichton, the captain, had much to do with the ship's spirit. From junior officers to the waiters, every man spoke highly of P&O's youngest leader. His personality carried over to the crew, making the atmosphere cheerful and gay.

THE ORONSAY will be on the West Coast until June next year. She will then go into South Pacific cruise from Australia. Her replacement on the West Coast will be the Arcadia.

Our rooms were 6x12 with bunk beds, which can put a little "crimp" on honeymooners but after the first two days your room becomes bigger and the walk to the bathroom and shower seems a little shorter down the hallway.

Although I heard several complaints that there was nothing to do aboard the ship, it was from those passengers who refused to do anything.

You can order almost anything imaginable to break your fast (including bubble and squeak, try it-you'll like it). Then the day really starts. More events are planned than you could possible attend. Alaskan wildlife lectures and film slide shows, exercises (you'll need them after the first few days), business lectures, dancing lessons, grooming instruction, golf instructions and shopping (women love to buy in the duty-free stores) pass the morning hours.

Lunch begins at noon, and when not in port, the passenger has a choice between the sitdown lunch or a buffet. Then more lectures, lessons, deck games and contests, including bingo in which a Long Beach boy won $185 on the final day jackpot.

I'll never understand how the English stay so slim. At 4 coffee, tea, cream puffs, cookies and assorted cakes are served. Don't eat too much, dinner is around the corner. Pate and juices usually started our meal. Soups followed and then a parade of entrees including Duck Rouennaise, Steak Marchande De Vins, Lamb Saute Provencle, Chicken Curry, Poached Fillet of Plaice Duglere, Sirloin Steak, Baked Ham Florentine and Grenadin of Veal Marsala.

Dessert followed (exercises classes begin to take on a new meaning) and included cherries jubilee, continental pastries, coupe malmaison, various ice creams, coffee cream cake, deep dish apple and boysenberry pie, chocolate eclair and various other prizes.

It still wasn't time to leave the table.

Cheeses were next. Stilton, Brie, Danish Blue, Edam, Gouda, Cheddar Gorgonzola, Bel-Paese, Camembert, Roquefort and Port du Salut dotted the menu. Fruit was then served accompanied by hand-dipped mints.

QUANTITY WAS no problem. You could order five steaks or three main courses. If you ordered and didn't like your selection, another would be brought to the table.

If you have a taste for wine, so much the better. Claret Chateau Tahbilk, Hock Quelltaler, Red Vin Ordinaire, Chateauneuf-du-Pape and Rudesheimer Klosterberg Riesling joined the menu. All were modestly priced.

Your wine steward and table waiter are the best people to know at meals. We asked the wine steward for recommendations and he never led us astray. If you needed help translating the dinner menu, the waiter was more than glad to help.

After dinner the entertainment staff planned an enjoyable evening with various themes including casino night (real gambling), western night, the Captain's Party (dress formally), horse race night, movies (including Mary, Queen of Scots and a New Leaf) and dancing in the nightclubs.

If that wasn't enough to keep you busy, the ports of call surrounded you with the most beautiful country in the world.

Our first stop was Vancouver, then Ketchikan, the third largest city in Alaska. Juneau was the longest stop (almost 24 hours).

Rest up here, you'll need the energy. The tour takes you to Mendenhall Glacier and it's beautiful. The ice is so pure it's blue.

If you were lucky enough to find room on the airplane flight (sign up for excursions the first day) you'll be treated to even more breath-taking sights. It's more than worth $20 a passenger.

BE SURE TO visit the Red Dog Saloon after sunset, about 11 p.m. in summer. Most of the crew gets shore leave and there's nothing like singing songs until 3 a.m. with the Englishmen on sawdust covered floors.

All the relics in the bar are genuine and if you find a native he'll be more than glad to show you around the old saloon. People in the North seem to be more easy-going and friendly. They can make any of your shore stops more pleasant with advice and commentary.

The next day is a sight-seeing tour you'll never be able to view unless aboard a big ship. The Oronsay steamed slowly into Glacier Bay, among ice flows. Glacier water is an emerald-green and the ice is blue. Have lots of film handy, every minute is more beautiful than the next.

The ship then stops in Sitka and you can walk the city and enjoy the small tour. After Sitka its back to Vancouver. By all means sign up for a tour and visit the Butchart Gardens. Then homeward.

The Oronsay sailed an estimated 4,418 miles. Every day was filled with activity and every night was a gala event. No driving, no unpacking and repacking, no making of the beds, no polishing of the shoes. Only pure enjoyment.

P&O's newest ship, the Spirit of London, on her maiden year, will assume the West Coast traffic this coming seaon. The ship was built for only one thing — cruising in luxury. Every room has either a shower or bath, and a toilet. Of course, the English hospitality is provided at no extra cost.

What a way to have a honeymoon!

FOR $100,000

Sail world in luxury

If money is no object, American President Lines has a fun and glamorous way to spend $100,000.

For the six digit price tag, travelers can reserve a four-room suite aboard the S.S. President Wilson, flagship of American President Lines, for the 95-day Presidential World Cruise sailing on Jan. 4, from San Francisco (a day later from Los Angeles).

With a picture-window view, the $100,940 (to be precise) suite features a living room, two bedrooms, two baths with shower and tub, and a large dressing room for evening gowns, furs, handbags, and of course, the little items one picks up while traveling around the world.

But if you don't have $100,000 to spend on a cruise, or even $10,000, it is possible to see the world for $3235 (an average of $34 a day for the 95-day voyage).

WHETHER you are in the most exclusive suite, the smallest stateroom or accommodations in between, everyone enjoys the same shipboard activities on the all first-class cruiseliner.

Between calls at world famous ports, the 20,000-ton ship serves as a floating resort. There are two swimming pools, a golf driving range, deck sports, orchestra, entertainment, a discotheque and gourmet dining in the traditional APL style.

The ship also has all the services of a modern metropolis: gift shops, a beauty salon, camera shop, valet service, doctor and modern hospital, barber shop, library, first-run movies, kennels, daily news reports and mail delivery.

In addition to the Captain's Reception, costume parties and special dinners, Chef Dan Palmorne will be available to assist passengers with arrangements for private cocktail parties in staterooms or suites.

While enjoying life aboard ship, passengers will visit 24 ports in the Orient, Southeast Asia, Ceylon, India, Africa, South America and Mexico before returning to the United States.

AT EACH destination, a complete program of shore excursions has been arranged. The tours vary from local sightseeing to extended inland trips. There's an overland journey to Nairobi and Treetops in Africa; a tour to Shangri-la; or a visit to Iguassu Falls and Asuncion in South America.

In the Orient passengers can take a Hong Kong Harbor dinner cruise; tour the Grand Palace in Bangkok or experience Malaysian nightlife in Singapore.

Reservations for the American President Lines' 1973 Round-the-World Cruise are being accepted at APL's headquarters at 601 California St., San Francisco. Sea-air tours are also available with the cruise from 31 days. For further information contact local travel agents.

REMEMBER YOSEMITE IN THE FALL?

Remember what it's like?

The trees golden in the sun. The crisp scent of fall in the air. And most of all, the quiet serenity.

The summer people have gone, and it seems like you have the whole place to yourself. Especially if you can come in the middle of the week.

There are horses to ride, bicycles, leisurely discovery walks in fall meadows; all the special Yosemite things to do.

Yosemite in the fall. It's something to remember.

Misconceptions about dateline clarified(?)

Crossing the International Dateline sometimes may seem like a double-cross — and when it really is, most travelers feel everything is all right. Otherwise, they may get the impression that they've lost or gained a day, though they haven't.

Actually, this boundary is just one of the world's biggest but most necessary illusions. Imaginary but also very real, it not only provides travelers with a lively conversation topic but also brings them a new honorary title and travel status. Those who make the transit become Golden Dragons.

Basically, the Line is a means of keeping time straight around the world. It runs, through the Pacific, from the Arctic south to the Antarctic more or less following the 180 degree meridian. A sizeable detour eastward is made north of Fiji, to bypass well-populated islands, before returning to 180 degrees near New Zealand. The idea of this is to avoid having two different dates in the same country.

For travelers, the deception comes when a day is apparently skipped on westward crossings and a day is added on eastward ones. What actually happens is that a date may be lost or gained but time — in terms of minutes and hours — is not.

THE LINE, of course, is arbitrary. After all, to keep the time system working correctly, the new day has to start somewhere or the 24-hour clock system for the revolving Earth wouldn't work so well.

As a rule, the "lost" or "found" date comes when the ship passes 180 degrees longitude. However, if it comes during a weekend, the ship's captain is likely to designate a day that comes after or before (depending on direction of the vessel's course) the actual passage. That keeps Saturday fun and Sunday services intact.

No need to get confused even if you "miss" an important anniversary or birthday — or end up with what seems to be two days for the celebration. Golden Dragons soon learn to take it in stride — just as the Ruler of the 180 degrees Meridian of the Great Domain of the Golden Dragon expects his subjects to do. If that mouthful appears too much to swallow, incidentally, relax. Royalty of the sea rarely have less than impressive names, regardless of length.

Suppose the date skipped is your birthday, anniversary or such? Simple — just observe the occasion as you normally would, on the day (regardless of date) after the "missed" day, or — if you wish to speed things up — on the date prior. In the long run, it's all the same.

Like the Equator, the International Dateline is a salient boundary on Earth. Yet going over it doesn't bring forth the high-jinks ceremonies that the Equator does. There is no definitive explanation, but a good guess is that it doesn't mark so vividly to mariners a physical change in stellar constellations, currents or even the direction in which water swirls down the drain, as happens after sailing over the Equator.

No matter. Speculation on days "won" or "lost" and an added travel title compensate for any lack of ceremony. On repeated trips, you can even carry on a game of whether you're coming out ahead date-wise. The main thing to remember, however, is that you'll always be "even" despite the time illusion of the International Dateline, though a double cross may make you feel better because it causes the time compensation to be more apparent.

These 'sailors' lost weight

By JUDY KLEMESRUD
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — To many people, the word "cruise" brings forth visions of an eating orgy, where waiters are forever plying passengers with 18-course meals as the ship sails slowly from one exotic port to another.

By the time the stuffed passengers get home, seams have often split, zippers don't zip and buttons won't button, and the person who has gained only five pounds recently, is often considered lucky.

However, on the gleaming white luxury liner Atlantis of the Chandris America Lines, there was a different kind of cruise: one designed for 50 of the 318 passengers to lose weight or, failing that, at least not to gain any.

The 50 dieters (48 women, 2 men) were members of a weight-reducing group called Lean Line, which is based in South Plainfield, N.J.

The Lean Liners signed up for a special Lean Line psychological eating program devised at Rutgers University that included daily lectures, weigh-ins, exercise sessions, special menus, and supervised meals at which the eating habits of the dieters were policed by members called "Chief Creeps."

According to "Toni and Lolly" (Mrs. Antonia Marotta and Mrs. Lorraine Wurtzel), the formerly fat New Jersey housewives who founded Lean Line 4½ years ago after meeting each other at a Weight Watchers meeting, "the purpose of the cruise is to lose weight and have fun at the same time."

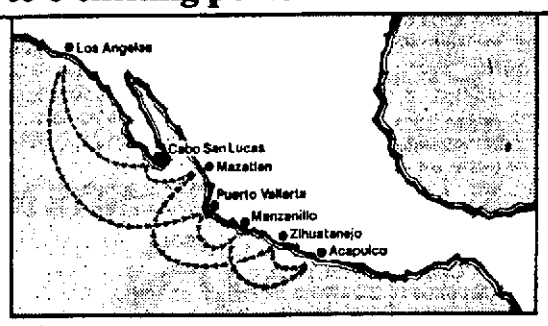

People participated in the weight-loss program for a variety of reasons.

John Tan, a 62-year-old investigator from Warren, N.J., said he was making the trip because his wife, who remained at home, promised to buy him a $1,000 wardrobe in a size smaller if he could lose 10 pounds.

The biggest loser, according to the tape measure, was Joan Rosende, a 29-year-old blond secretary from Bayonne, N.J., who had lost 7 inches off her waist, reducing it to 42 inches.

Cruise with a Princess over Thanksgiving.

MORE VACATION FOR YOUR MONEY.

The new Spirit of London.
The yacht.

The 17,000 ton cruise ship with the intimacy of a yacht.

There you are. Finally. Cruising to Mexico on a 535-foot cruise ship. A ship with so many personal touches, so much warmth, it's more like sailing on a luxury yacht. The Brand new Spirit of London. The ship P&O built especially for Americans. Especially for you. A beautiful yacht where you're served in that very personal, courteous British tradition. A sleek, 17,000 ton yacht skimming across the seas, carrying you to Mexico. (The first cruise to Mexico leaves January 17th.)

Be as active as you want.

Picture yourself sitting there in your deck chair. Enjoying. Planning your day from the activity list your cabin steward gave you with breakfast this morning. Your eyes go to the list. There's table tennis, shuffleboard, swimming, chess, scrabble, exercise classes, an ACBL Bridge Tournament in the Carlton Room, and all kinds of shipboard games and activities.

The pride of the Yacht is its food.

Dinner is a work of art. You and your friends will choose your wine from a complete and balanced wine list. And then your meal will be served. And what a meal. Roast Duck Rouennaise, tender and juicy. Or fresh Fillet of Lemon Sole Bonne-Femme. Or a delicious Top Sirloin steak with stuffed tomatoes, mushrooms, and Belgian fried potatoes.

And the soups. Cold Creme Vichyssoise. Consomme Madère. Salads, vegetables, cheeses, bisquets, fresh fruit. And sweets. Chocolate Eclair. Loganberry sundae. And a good cup of coffee to top it all off. Dining on the Yacht is like nothing you've ever experienced.

Relax under a warm sun.

Poolside is for getting that deep tan you've always wanted, and never had. Up on the sundeck. There, under a warm tropical sun, with a steward to bring you your favorite refreshment, your tan will slowly darken. If it gets too warm, a dip in the pool will refresh you. You may even head for the sauna room for an invigorating massage. On the Yacht, it's all there for the asking.

Stroll along moonlit decks.

The nights are filled with music, dancing, and the excitement of shipboard romance. The 3-tiered showroom and dance floor of the Churchill Room reminds you of an elegant continental nightclub. The Greenwich Room offers the intimacy and atmosphere of a London cabaret. You may see a movie in the Globe Theatre, or spend some time in the bright lights of the Casino.

On Gala Nights, you'll attend such social events as the Captain's Cocktail Party, London Night, a Mexican Fiesta, Ladies' Night, and a Farewell Cocktail Party. These are the nights you've dreamed about. Bright, bubbling parties inside, and quiet, moonlit decks to stroll outside.

Introductory prices run from $470 to $1075.

Not a bad life, is it? You're sailing to Mexico on a beautiful yacht. Everything you could want is there for the asking. The crew can't do enough for you. (It works out to about one crewman for every 2 passengers.) And you did it for a price between $470 to $1075. That's not bad either. Especially if you compare those prices with the other cruise ships.

SPIRIT OF LONDON IS REGISTERED IN GREAT BRITAIN.

New cruise ship to make West Coast debut in '73

Royal Viking Line, a newly founded Norwegian-flag cruise line, will begin serving West Coast ports this fall, treating Westerners to some brand new touches in the traditional sea cruise.

The innovative company, a joint subsidiary of three long established Norwegian shipping firms, which was founded in 1970 with worldwide marketing headquarters in San Francisco, will offer a global cruise program, frequently visiting and originating its cruises from Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The all new Royal Viking Star will make her maiden visits to Los Angeles and San Francisco on Nov. 10 and 11, respectively. The streamlined cruise liner is the first of the three ship fleet of Royal Viking Line.

She is a first class, completely air conditioned, 21,500 ton (GRT) vessel, capable of accommodating approximately 500 passengers (affording 95 per cent of them ocean views) in 289 staterooms. The ship features lower beds only, no inconvenient top bunks.

Her cruising speed is 21.5 knots. The 581-foot vessel is distinguished by spacious public areas, teak decks and large view windows on either side of the main lounge and dining room, both of which can handle all passengers at one seating.

THE ROYAL VIKING Star was built on the modular construction concept which assures greater uniformity in accommodations and eliminates the problem of the inferior stateroom within any specific category.

In addition to the usual cruise fare, the Royal Viking Star offers an Enrichment Program of lectures by authorities on the ecology of the ocean, the seaports and the lands and peoples identified with the ship's voyages.

Lecturers also are scheduled on special interests such as the search for peace, exploration of outer and inner space, business, religion and the arts. The Enrichment Program's panel of speakers includes oceanographers, astronauts, literature professors, politicians and football coaches.

West Coast-originated cruises from the California debut to mid-1973 will include trips to Mexico, the Caribbean, Europe, the South Pacific and the Orient. Voyages will range from a 4-day Ensenada visit to a 66-day sea odyssey around the Pacific.

The elegant liner departs Los Angeles Nov. 10 on its maiden cruise from the West Coast — a 32-day festive exploration of the Caribbean with 13 Mexican and Caribbean ports of call (including visits to the South American mainland cities of La Guaira and Cartagena) and two transits of the Panama Canal before her return to California.

lands stretching over 1200 miles from Brisbane to New Guinea. The reef is a marine and land museum of zoological and botanical species, a coral sea sanctuary to some of the most exotic forms of life on earth. Passengers will have three full days to investigate some of its treasures and enjoy its tropical tranquillity.

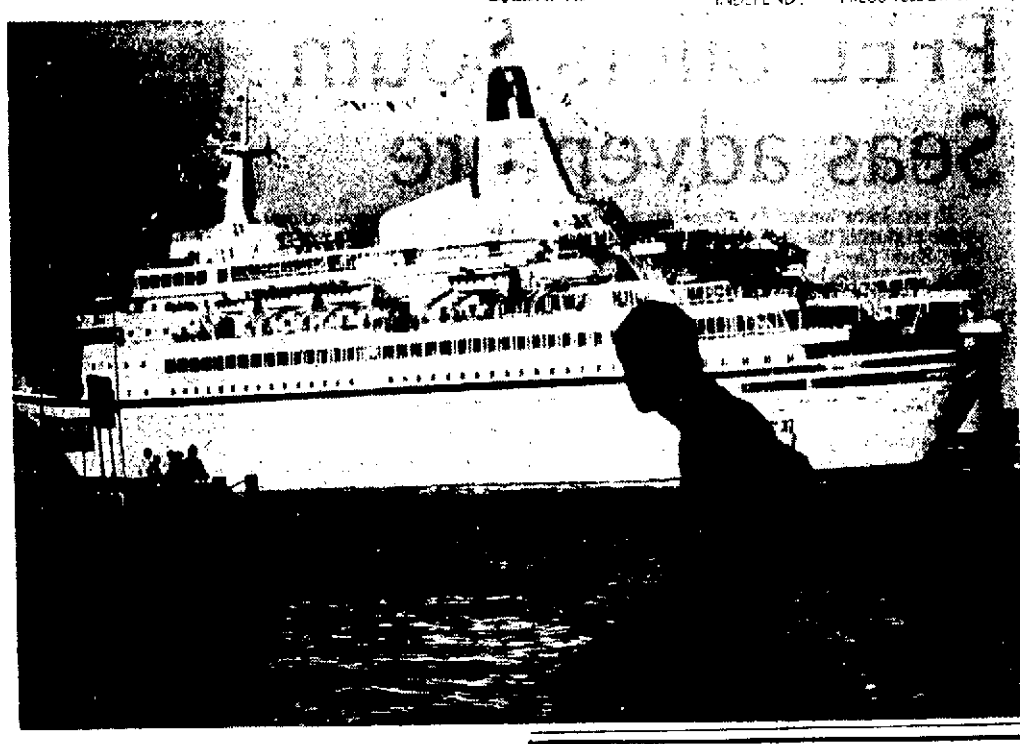

Per person rates for the voyage start at $3,316. The cruise also is available on a sea/air basis with passengers ending or beginning their shipboard portion in Sydney or Auckland. Sea portions are combined with Pan Am flights to complete the roundtrip from California.

A MORE AMBITIOUS Pacific journey of 66 days starts in Los Angeles Feb. 18 and in San Francisco Feb. 21. The vessel, describing a wide circle, will call at 16 ports in Polynesia, Australia, New Zealand, New Guinea and the Orient before returning to California. Individual rates start at $4,786.

Once again, passengers may tailor their journeys to an air/sea combination with a one-way cruise portion, using either Sydney or Auckland as embarkation or debarkation points and Pan American for their air transportation.

On April 30 the Royal Viking Star leaves California waters for a 35-day cruise to Copenhagen with enroute calls at Puerto Vallarta, Acapulco, Cartagena, Montego Bay, Port-au-Prince, Nassau, Fort Lauderdale, Madeira, Lisbon, Southampton, Amsterdam and Hamburg. The ship will transit both the Panama and Kiel Canals. Per person rates range from $2,535 for an outside double to $4,250 for a deluxe bedroom and $5,650 for a suite.

The Royal Viking Sky, second vessel of Royal Viking Line's fleet, joins the West Coast service with its maiden visit Oct. 4, 1973. She will undertake the cruise line's first Around the World voyage, originating from San Francisco Jan. 22, 1974 (from Los Angeles the following day).

ON HER MAIDEN voyage, Royal Viking Star steamed past Copenhagen's famous mermaid at start of 14-day North Cape Cruise. The ship will make her first appearance in Los Angeles on Nov. 10, departing for San Francisco and a 32-day roundtrip California-Caribbean cruise.

Norway offers special ski tours

The "ski touring" craze that hit North America a few years ago has made it possible for thousands more to enjoy the winter outdoors without the bother of ski tolls and lines.

It is with this in mind that Norway's ski resorts now offer a variety of tour packages that lay heavy stress on the thrill of Nordic ski touring up into "the high lonesome."

Norway, after all, is where skiing began and records show that Vikings as early as 2500 BC were chasing friends and enemies up and down the country's challenging mountain ranges.

This winter, resorts such as Lillehammer, Voss, Geilo, Beito and Tyin are offering North Americans nine-day tour packages for as little as $305, including air fare, hotel expenses, transfers and meals. Each resort not only offers Nordic ski touring, downhill and slalom, but also has a specialty of its own.

Lillehammer nestles in a romantic setting of old farmhouses and stave churches and offers the skier special ski touring tolls in the woods plus the fun of ice skating and torchlit sleigh rides. Voss specializes in alpine skiing and a swinging apres-ski life. Downhill is emphasized at Geilo, which even boasts a snow nursery for junior beginners, plus curling rinks. Even city folk get into the act, and Oslo now sports over 40 miles of flood-lit trails right in the city limits for night skiing.

Flights to Norway's ski country are operated daily out of Los Angeles by Scandinavian Airlines System.

For free folders write to the Norwegian National Tourist Office, 3600 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, 90010.

The seven-to-eight-hour canal transit allows passengers to experience the unique operation of the waterway's locks while enjoying the beauty of the surrounding tropical jungles and Gatun Lake. Highlights of the cruise will include maiden calls at many ports and the observance of Thanksgiving on the high seas with the traditional holiday turkey dinner. Individual passenger rates begin at $2,322 for an outside double.

FOR VACATIONERS with limited time, this cruise may be divided into two sea/air holidays with passengers beginning or ending their cruise segment in San Juan. The holiday includes a two-night San Juan package with accommodations at the Caribe Hilton, sightseeing and other features. Per person rates begin at $1,215 and include the San Juan stay and all features of the cruise; cost of flights from and to hometown cities is additional.

The Royal Viking Star leaves San Francisco Dec. 14 for a four-day extended weekend at sea and in Ensenada. Fares for this cruise begin at $284 per person and range to $520 for deluxe accommodations.

Westerners who prefer a simple, relaxed, unstructured holiday season can invest $1,023 (the minimum per person rate) and spend 15 days leisurely phasing in Christmas and New Year's on the high seas between the ship's calls at Mazatlan, Acapulco, Manzanillo and Puerto Vallarta.

Following departure Jan. 2 from Los Angeles, the vessel heads southwest to Honolulu and points beyond. She returns to California after 46 days of cruising and visits to Pago Pago, Fiji, Sydney, Auckland, Tonga, Moorea, Tahiti and Bora Bora.

The voyage features a special visit to Australia's Great Barrier Reef, a spectacular archipelago of is-

PFEL offers South Seas adventure

If you have longed to escape on a cruise exploring the South Seas, Pacific Far East Line's two luxury cruise ships, SS Mariposa and SS Monterey regularly ply these waters to the fabulous islands immortalized by Gauguin, Melville, Mitchener and Maugham.

The cruises originate in San Francisco and Los Angeles, and after the gala bon voyage festivities, it's off to paradise!

Regular ports of call on the exotic six-week vacation route are Moorea, Tahiti, Rarotonga, Auckland, Bay of Islands, Sydney, Suva, Niuafo'ou (Tin Can Island), Pago Pago and Honolulu.

For those who want to travel by ship but do not have the time for a full cruise, PFEL has air/sea programs available that offer shorter variations of the complete trip.

By utilizing the air/sea combinations, travelers can now enjoy an ocean voyage, to the South Pacific, but at the same time, trim their vacations to 22, 26 or 32 days.

AMPLE TIME is spent in each port to see everything of interest, and shore excursions are always available that help you explore the local scenes.

While cruising leisurely through the blue Pacific waters, you are pampered royally on your luxurious "floating resort hotel."

Everything on your cruise ship is first class — the accommodations, the facilities, the gourmet menus at each meal, and the entertainment and personal service around the clock.

Each day you'll be able to set your own pace. For the energetic, there's deck sports, swimming, or strolling in the salt-sea breeze. For the rest seekers and sunloafers, there are deck chairs by the pool and many quiet hideouts throughout the ships.

In the evening, the tempo is lively if you leave the privacy of your stateroom. On board, the congenial cocktail hour sets the mood for special parties and dancing to the ship's orchestra. Ashore, the many exciting locales await your arrival.

Moorea, the first port of call, is considered by many travelers to be the most beautiful island in the Pacific. This peaceful isle, with its quaint village and breathtaking scenery, provides an ideal gateway to the entire panorama of the Pacific.

Next comes Tahiti, with its bustling city of Papeete, often called "Paris with bare feet." It is a colorful combination of Polynesian and French — alive with the seductive beauty and charm which has lured visitors for centuries.

RAROTONGA IS a colorful off-port call where the islanders come to the ship by outrigger to sell their wares and perform native entertainment on board.

NATIVES IN OUTRIGGER CANOES come to greet SS Mariposa during stop at Rarotonga on South Seas cruise.

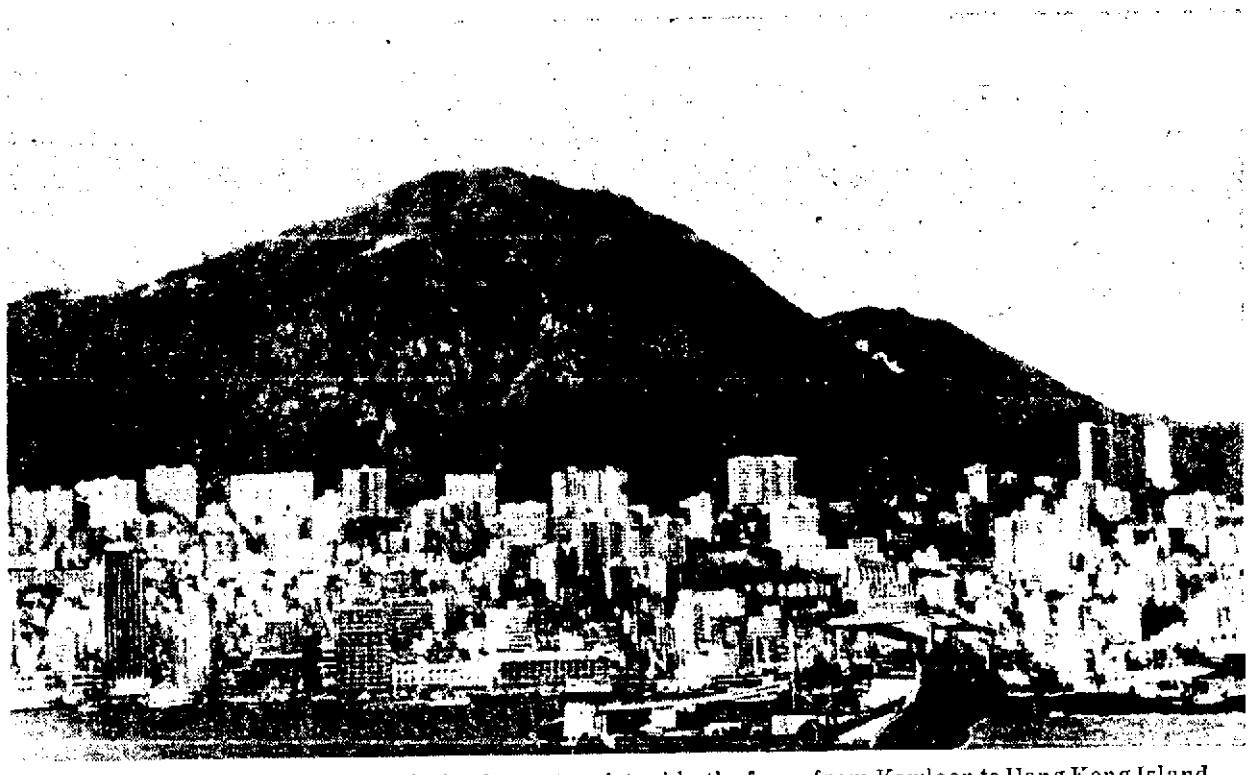

Five days later, it's Auckland, New Zealand, a land of vast scenic contrasts, and then after a call at Opua in the beautiful Bay of Islands, it's on to Sydney, Australia, an expanding cosmopolitan city of nearly three million people.

Next comes Suva, Fiji, a "melting pot" collection of bushy-haired Fijians, sari-clad Indians, Chinese and Europeans.

Then it's Tin Can Island in the Tongan group. Canoe-riding postmen receive a large tin can with passenger mail which they take ashore for the Tin Can Island postmark. This is coveted by stamp collectors.

Pago Pago, Samoa, has a magnificent harbor, and is a busy marketplace that vibrantly comes alive on "boat day" when cruise liners are in port.

And, of course, the last stop before heading back to the mainland is Honolulu, with such famous landmarks as Waikiki Beach, Diamond Head and Pearl Harbor.

CHINESE JUNKS CRISSCROSS the harbor as tourists ride the ferry from Kowloon to Hong Kong Island. Victoria Peak dominates the Hong Kong skyline in the background.

Another side to Hong Kong life

HONG KONG — This British Crown Colony in the Far East is noted for its skyline, the breathtaking panoramic views from Victoria Peak, and the deeply-felt excitement which pulsates through this city whose population of more than four million is mostly Chinese.

Many tourists come here and assume they see all the sights, but they rarely get outside the central districts where the action appears to be. Another kind of action, however, is the construction of what are called Resettlement Estates by the Hong Kong Government. These can be seen in many parts of the Colony, but most visitors know nothing about them.

Their origin goes back to the end of World War II, when the local population was down to about 800,000 from twice that much before the war. When peace returned, many former residents, along with thousands of immigrants from China who were obviously seeking something they could not find in their homeland, flooded into this city.

By 1950 the population had reached 2.3 million and Hong Kong was unable to cope with the steep increase.

A GREAT number of refugees could not afford the rapidly rising rentals, and they began an illegal movement. This consisted of building shacks and huts anywhere space was available. When a fire on Christmas Day, 1953, deprived more than 50,000 squatters of their flimsy homes, the government took steps to begin the multi-story buildings which now house countless thousands of them.

The problem became ever more acute but in the last 20 years much of it has been solved. One of the outstanding examples of what has been accomplished is Chai Wan. Only 15 years ago, the land on which it stands was covered by six small villages, whose residents lived by farming, fishing and raising cattle. Then the Government decided to turn the area into a Resettlement Estate.

Although the standard of living in such an estate is much higher than in squatters' shacks, some refugees hate to move into the former. They are unable to have livestock, pets and small plots of ground on which to raise vegetables for their own use, or for sale. They also resent the reduction of privacy resulting from living close to other people in a large building.

But residents are always able to buy fresh products on the premises. Food sellers put up temporary stalls every day in the area of the resettlement estates, and a goodly assortment of food and goods become readily available. There are also workshops which make and sell products ranging from clothing to furniture and radios, and many restaurants.

THE SETTLERS are also provided with very cheap, often free medical care, supplied by clinics and an inoculation center. Welfare services are on hand, including social centers, youth clubs, nurseries, dental clinics, libraries, a savings and loan association, a milk bar, even a club for the deaf and dumb. Nothing has been omitted for their welfare.

Chai Wan is a city in itself, for it has everything. It resembles a small suburban town, which is what it actually is.

Visitors are permitted to inspect such areas, and they find these resettlement estates teeming with humanity. Washing hung on poles which jut out from balconies or windows provide a lot of local color, for there is always something flapping in the breeze. There is an overall cheerfulness, orderliness and resourcefulness that make these remarkable centers an outstanding example of what a government can do for its people.

Another interesting aspect of the estates is that the rooftops are frequently used as schools for the children. This is the sort of thing, but only one among many, that makes Hong Kong such an outstanding place to visit.

Any interested traveler may write to the Hong Kong Tourist Association, 291 Geary St., San Francisco, Calif. 94102, and request printed information on the Colony's outstanding attractions. That office can send you pamphlets on hotels, the best places to shop and what to buy, sightseeing, and everything else of general interest.

Legends abound on Fiji

Fijian legend has it that the stones jutting out into the sea from the island of Viti Levu near the village of Vetualailai are the remains of an incomplete bridge, begun by an ancient Fijian prince to take him to the nearby island of a beautiful princess who had scorned his courtship. The vignette is part of the folklore in a land of many beautiful stories.

Most Fijian legends explain a phenomenon or a tradition of Fijian life that has been carried down to the present, but if the legends seem no more than fanciful stories they nonetheless describe events that may take the scientific-minded many calculations to explain.

These legends and the tropical beauty of Fiji will come to life for visitors of the new Flagship Beachcomber, which opened Oct. 1 on the island of Viti Levu in Fiji. Reservations are being accepted now by Flagship Hotels sales offices and American Airlines reservations offices. Rates at the Flagship Beachcomber are: $F18 and $F22 for a single (depending on the view — mountain or ocean), $F22 and $F25 for a double and $F48 and $F72 for suites. (Prices are in Fijian dollars: $F1 $.70 - $.80 American money.)

Designed to blend into the environment of Fiji, this 84-room hotel is part of the Pacific Harbour development complex on the east coast of the island. As part of the Flagship chain (a subsidiary of American Airlines) the Beachcomber will offer the accommodations and gourmet food that have become synonymous with Flagship, while at the same time offering settings and activities that can be found nowhere else.

Pan Am's winter flights

Caracas, the glittering capital of Venezuela, will serve as the crossroads of Pan American World Airways' winter flight schedule to South America, which goes into effect next Sunday.

At the height of the winter season there will be direct Pan Am flights to Caracas from Baltimore, Barranquilla, Buenos Aires, Guatemala City, Houston, Los Angeles, Mexico City, Miami, New York, Panama City, Philadelphia, Rio de Janeiro, San Francisco, San Jose, San Juan and Sao Paulo.

Caracas' year-round summertime climate and its combination of South American urbanity and Caribbean beaches makes it one of the airline's most frequented destinations in the western hemisphere.

In addition, Pan Am's winter schedule will feature 52 weekly direct flights from Baltimore, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, and San Francisco to such South American destinations as Barranquilla, Belem, Brasilia, Buenos Aires, Caracas, Georgetown, Maracaibo, Montevideo, Paramaribo, Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo.

THE PRINCESS ITALIA AGAINST THE VANCOUVER SKYLINE

Barbados, Rio slated for tour

A year-end cruise to South America, and a spring cruise to the Orient have been scheduled by Orient Overseas Line for two of its largest ships.

The S.S. Universe Campus will sail from Port Everglades, Florida Dec. 26 to the Caribbean and East Coast of South America. The 37-day cruise itinerary includes calls at Barbados, Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, Buenos Aires, Santos, Salvador (Bahia), and Port of Spain.

The itinerary is timed to take full advantage of the southern hemisphere's fine mid-summer weather and calm seas.

In keeping with the company's policy of popular-priced cruise fares, the rates for the voyage begin at $23 per day and range up to $42.

Designed for the traveler who prefers a sea voyage without the expensive frills of night clubs and casinos, the shipboard atmosphere is informal and relaxed, but there is a full program of traditional sea-going activities with deck sports, swimming, movies, live entertainment and dancing to the music of the ship's orchestra.

Dining is cafeteria style, and the food is of the same good quality found in all Orient Overseas Line ships.

The Oriental Carnival which will make the 70-day special spring cruise to six Orient ports in late April, 1973, is a 22,000 gross ton passenger-cargo liner that is usually employed in the company's round-the-world service.

Cruise passengers may board the ship at Los Angeles for the voyage that will call at Yokohama, Kobe, (cruising the Inland Sea of Japan), Nagasaki and Hong Kong.

The return voyage to the west coast will be via Kaohsiung and Keelung in Taiwan, Kobe and Yokohama. Interesting shore trips include all the classic tourist attractions of Japan.

Fares for the full cruise are from $1540 to $3200.

Paradise of parks, posh dining

By RUTH VISCOUNT

VANCOUVER — Canada's third largest city, Vancouver sprawls along the sunshine coast of British Columbia between majestic mountains and the vast Pacific.

Here is a cosmopolitan city that hardly knows the meaning of pollution or congestion. In this day of aroused public awareness of polluted environment and irritation with people-jammed parks and playgrounds, Vancouver offers far more than the rugged beauty of fir-clad mountains that form a backdrop for this gateway city on the fabled Inside Passage. There are spacious parks, protected beaches, salmon fishing grounds, modern emporiums and charming boutiques, continental restaurants and the second largest Chinatown in the West.

Vancouver's magnificent harbor compares to Rio do Janeiro and Hong Kong for beauty and size. Although I have made several trips to the city, always arriving by air, never has Vancouver looked more glamorous than the night we sailed into her harbor aboard the luxury liner, Princess Italia of Princess Cruises, while on a 14-day cruise up the Inside Passage to Alaska.

Our hotel-at-sea entered the long harbor through Burrard Inlet and sailed under two handsome bridges, with the city casting a rainbow of illumination as we approached the dock. Most of the Italia's passengers went ashore that evening to search out a supper club or one of the restaurants on Robonstrasse.

Bobby Gentry was performing at the Cave, a spacious club serving good food and beverages at average prices, so we decided to catch the first show. The Cave, Isy's, The Treehouse and other night spots feature top entertainers from the U.S., Canada and Europe.

DINING in Vancouver is a smorgasbord of choices ranging from exotic Polynesian at the Beachcomber and Trader Vic's to sophisticated continental cuisine at English, Hungarian, German and Oriental restaurants. The Grouse Nest, 3,700 feet up Grouse Mountain, offers the specialty of the house — Cornish game hen baked in clay and broken open at the table. On a clear night, the lights of the city sparkle below as you dine and dance.

In Vancouver, there are dozens of attractions within walking distance or a short taxi ride. Heading the list is Stanley Park. This raw forest of over 1,000 acres in the center of the city includes 22 miles of wooded paths, a zoo, a fine collection of Indian totems and several sports areas.

The saltwater beaches are Stanley Park's biggest attractions as are those on English Bay at the west end near downtown. These well-kept, wide and sandy beaches are public and safe for swimming. You can also rent a catamaran for two at $5 an hour and go sailing from Stanley Park.

On summer Saturday afternoons, there is the English village-green atmosphere with cricket matches in the park. Visitors and local residents just walk up to the edge of the field and sit on the grass to watch the game, and afterwards stroll over to Ferguson Point to have tea. Even if you are not a cricket buff, don't miss the teahouse.

SHOPPING in the downtown area is a treasure trove of British china and woolens, Irish imports, Oriental silks and brocades, leather items and furs and Indian sweaters and crafts. The Hudson's Bay Company department store probably has the most complete selection under one roof in town.

Robson Street just behind the Hotel Vancouver has a three-block area of varied shops, and excellent restaurants ideal for lunch. The better stores in Chinatown are found on East pender Street. For antiques and mod fashions, try the renewal area called Gastown.

Canadian Art Products on Granville specializes in Indian arts and crafts, clothing and artifacts. Cowichan sweaters are hand-knitted by the Cowichan Indians from raw, untreated wool to keep the warmth in and the rain and snow out. Eskimo soapstone carvings are also available and quite inexpensive.

A short taxi ride away and worth seeing are the new H.R. Macmillan Planetarium and maritime museum on English Bay Beach, an arboretum in Queen Elizabeth Park, and the Centennial Museum. To see the whole west side of the city across the Lion Gate Bridge, there are numerous Gray Line Bus tours taking groups to Capilano Suspension Bridge, British Properties - residential, Grouse Mountain and the Shaughnessy residential area known for its beautiful rock gardens.

IF TIME permits, rent a car and drive the scenic Seaview Highway which clings to the north shore mountains for about 40 miles to Squamish. Below are the blue waters of Howe Sound, in the distance the peaks of Vancouver Island.

Vancouver and the southern mainland of British Columbia are part of a network system of ferries and roadways connecting the mainland with Vancouver Island. The Gulf Triangle tour by land and water to Victoria, on the southern tip of Vancouver Island, starts at Tsawwassen, half an hour drive south of Vancouver proper and returns via Nanimo, north of Victoria, to Horseshoe Bay. All the major car rental agencies have downtown offices. Charges match those in major U.S. cities.

East of the city, highways on the north and south side of the Fraser River lead to a particularly rich and green valley. The river is named for Simon Fraser who, with 24 adventuresome men, set out in four canoes down the river in search of a route to the Pacific Ocean. Today, this historic route from Vancouver into the lush valley is a sight to behold. Roads also lead north along the ocean for 95 miles to Lowell River and Lund. There's an excellent fishing center at Pender Harbour and Jervis Inlet, and a quaint Indian Village at Sechelt.

Cruise ships and ferry-liners have always used Vancouver's bustling waterfront facilities. In recent years, there has been an increase in the traffic north to Alaska. Princess Cruises, based in Los Angeles, inaugurated the first regularly-scheduled luxury cruises to Canada and Alaska in June 1969. Eleven popular eight-day cruises are again scheduled for the summer of 1973, sailing out of Vancouver.

The Caribbean, Viking style.

Discover it on the Royal Viking Star's maiden cruise from California.

She sails November 10 from Los Angeles, November 12 from San Francisco, and returns 32 days later. Or, you can take her as far as San Juan, Puerto Rico, and fly home. Or vice versa—fly to San Juan and sail home. Either way, the sun and song-filled ports of Mexico and the Caribbean, plus a spectacular daylight passage of the Panama Canal await you. So does the extraordinary living aboard a 20th Century Viking ship. All new. All first class. With teak decks and a sleekly curved bow. With vast, airy public rooms, and stately staterooms (94% of which are outside). With all you'd expect in a great cruise ship, from heated pool to continental cuisine—plus the unexpected, like 450 original works of art. And with a Norwegian and European crew that numbers more than one for every two passengers. To discover more about these new Vikings, their magnificent ship and their Caribbean, start with us. Right here.

Royal Viking ships have Norwegian registry. And spirit.

Introducing springtime 4-island Hawaiian cruises just for you.

March 20 April 21 May 10

Just so you can enjoy the exotic beauty of Hawaii in her most beautiful season we're offering three new spring 4-Island cruises from California*. Each gives you 18 magnificent days aboard the proud American ships SS MARIPOSA or SS MONTEREY, enjoying a vacation that combines all the glamour of an ocean cruise with all the pleasures of paradise.

You'll be visiting Honolulu and famous Waikiki Beach; Hilo on the big island of Hawaii; Lahaina on beautiful Maui; and Nawiliwili on the garden island of Kauai. And all the while, the ship will be your resort hotel. Where you'll enjoy the friendliest service, the finest gourmet cuisine and the most delightful accommodations.

Plus special golf arrangements that enable you to play a challenging course on each island.

For a shorter Hawaiian vacation, air-sea combinations are available. As well as cruises to or from Hawaii almost once a week.

Our other special 4-Island cruises depart December 18, 1972, September 17, October 17 and December 20, 1973.

Call your travel agent or send us the coupon for full information.

Look before you choose a cruise

By CHORAL PEPPER

If you are considering a vacation cruise, before you send in your money, give the picture a long, hard look. There are positive and negative features to cruising, but the negative ones can be eliminated by selecting the right cruise.

Unfortunately, too many cruise brochures emphasize the romantic sex scene. From my observations, I would judge that of each 50 single women aboard any ship, two would be lucky to find a romantic interest.

There is an exception, weekend or short term cruises at nominal cost, often referred to as Party Cruises, attract a number of singles intent upon a Love-in at sea. If you look great in a bikini and like to swing, this is for you. However, if you would rather shag then rock and if songs like Moonlight Serenade turn you on, you had better leave any romantic notions to your memory bank and get excited over the Bingo games.

AS A RULE of thumb, let us say that short cruises cater primarily to young career girls with short vacations. The longer the cruise, the more likely you are to find professional, business or financially independent women in higher income and age brackets. This also applies to the type of unattached men aboard, who travel by sea in far less numbers than do women.

Positive cruise factors score high for independent women travelers. You do not have to hassle with luggage problems and confused reservations in foreign ports. You can visit a variety of places without having to constantly pack and unpack.

You need not worry about the weight you carry, should you decide to purchase a carved teakwood desk in the Orient, and you can always drum up companionship for a shore stop adventure, which makes dining in ports more fun, too.

FURTHER advantages are boundless. There is no resort, club or hotel that could possibly provide so much service and entertainment for less than $35 a day, as some first class cruise ships actually do. You might have pheasant cooked in wine for lunch, Wellington roast beef with truffles for dinner, listen to an organist with tea, a pianist with cocktails and a six-piece orchestra after dinner.

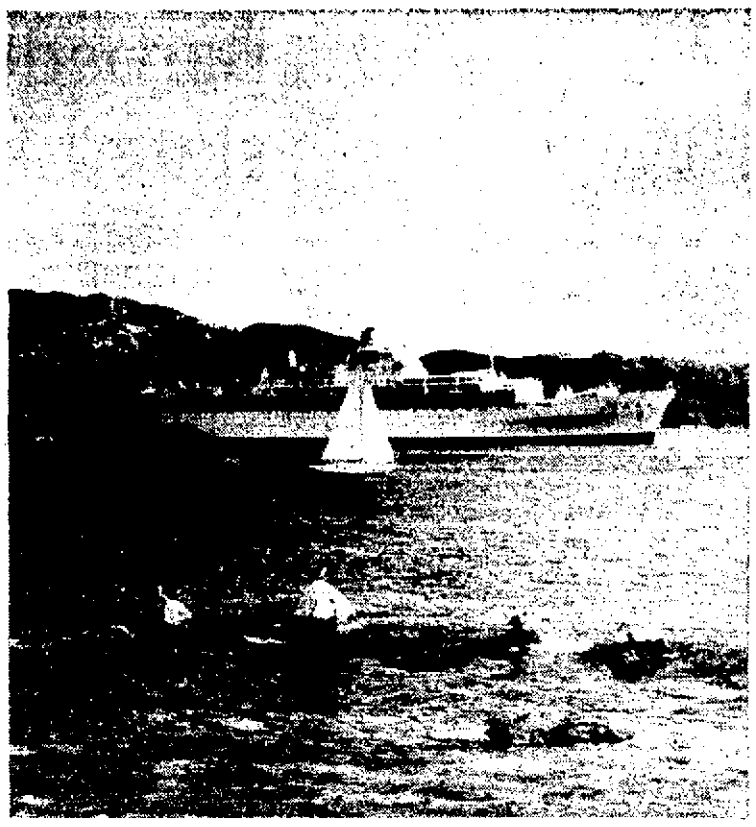

You can see a first run film daily, attend special shows featuring professional entertainers, visit a kaleidoscope of foreign countries, and have a selection of instant companionship whenever you wish it.

Shopping junkets to buy devil's masks, straw mats, pearls, and other foreign treasures are welcome seafaring interludes, but the time you spend ashore on a lengthy cruise is still minimal compared to time afloat. Consequently, a cruise is not to be judged so much by the ports it makes as by the company it keeps.

IF YOU ARE physically active and go in for sports deck activities and sunbathing, the size of ship and the climate gain in importance. You may have more fun traveling tourist class, where passengers tend to be younger and less inhibited. If bridge playing, reading, people collecting, exquisite cuisine and quiet meditation is your bag, then you will find more of what you want in first class, or, perhaps, on a single class ship.

Some cruise ships in distant seas are now combining sea-air packages in which you may fly to the scene of action, Tahiti, for example, and then cruise among various ports in that part of the world before returning home across the Pacific by air. These plans make distant ports more available to cruisers unable to leave their offices for long periods and are destined to attract a younger, more active cruise convert into areas formerly reserved for the retired.

Special interest cruises are also becoming available. Some are designed to provide photographic missions and instructions for camera fans. Others cater to dieters, nonsmokers, Scuba divers, and off-beat island hoppers. Your travel agent can give you information regarding these if you let him know what your special interests are.

CRUISE AWEIGH — Or weigh the cruise, both pros and cons, advises travel columnist Choral Pepper. Some cruises cater to the bikini set, others, to the bingo set. Determine your pleasure, then tell your travel agent.

Redwood Empire offers guide for golfers, fliers

travel

Ground-bound golfers and high-flying private pilots will want a pair of new folders dealing with the Redwood Empire vacationland of north coastal California and southern Oregon.

One brochure entitled "Guide to Redwood Empire Golf Courses" lists 57 different links between San Francisco and Grants Pass, enough for divot-diggers to play a different one every week for a year.

Included are such famous courses as the Olympic Club, twice the scene of the U.S. Open tournament; Silverado, near Napa, where the annual Kaiser International tourney takes place, and the redwood-fringed layouts at Northridge on the Russian River and Baywood, near Eureka.

The flyer's guide, "Redwood Empire: Pilot's Paradise" is an up-to-date map and listing of 39 public-use airports in the nine-county region. Nearby sports and sightseeing attractions are given.

The folder points out that this area — larger and more diversified than many of the 52 states — lies within a comfortable two-hour flight from the Los Angeles basin.

Both folders, along with others containing maps, points of interest and a listing of regional visitor accommodations will be sent on receipt of a 25-cent postage and handling fee by the Redwood Empire Association, 476 Post St., San Francisco, Calif. 94102.

If you're putting a lot of money into a vacation in the Pacific, we think you should get a lot out of it.

At Pan Am, we think a vacation in the Pacific should be like no other vacation you've ever had.

And we've put together our tours with that in mind.

They include everything you've always wanted to see and do in the Pacific as well as all the things you'd never forgive yourself for missing.

So when you come back from your vacation, you'll really feel like you've gotten your money's worth.

In addition to giving you a lot of things to do on our tours, we give you a lot of tours to choose from. And they're all described in our booklet, Pan Am's Pacific '72.

Which is about as complete a tour book as you'll ever want to see.

For example, it won't tell you in big print that your tour will leave on a certain date, and then tell you in fine print that it can be canceled. Our tours leave when they're supposed to leave.

And it won't just tell you how beautiful the hotels you're staying at are; you'll see actual photos of the hotels, so you can see for yourself.

And once you're in the Pacific, we're there with Pan Am offices to help you with anything you may need.

We have hundreds of tours to choose from, at prices that include the lowest available individual or group round trip air fares and double occupancy hotel rooms (single rooms are available at extra cost).

Here are three that we think might interest you.

$1,077 16 days–Japan, Thailand and Hong Kong including air fare, hotels and sightseeing.

This tour is our Orient 16 Adventure.

On it you get a full breakfast every morning and really first class hotel accommodations. And you get some other things you don't always get on a tour of the Orient.

For example, in Japan you visit exciting Tokyo and its Palace Plaza, and the Meiji Shrine Outer Gardens. And then we take you on an express train ride to Nikko (home of the "see no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil" monkeys) where you'll enjoy a real Japanese luncheon.

In Thailand, we give you a motor launch tour of the canals and floating markets. And we take you to visit the Grand Palace where Anna taught the children of the King of Siam.

In Hong Kong, we take you on a ride to Victoria Peak where you get a beautiful view of the harbor and city. Then we take you to the 600-year-old walled city of Kam Tin. And you also have plenty of time on your own to shop for Hong Kong's famous bargains.

$875 16 days–Tahiti, New Zealand, Australia and Fiji including air fare, hotels and sightseeing.

This tour is our South Pacific Mini Holiday. On it you get really first class hotel accommodations and a lot of other things that make for an enjoyable vacation.

For example, in Tahiti, we take you on a complete tour of the island where you see such things as the historic places where Captain Cook, H.M.S. Bounty's Captain Bligh and the first missionaries landed. You also get a whole day to swim, sun and relax in one of the easiest places in the world to do just that.

In New Zealand, we take you to a real Maori village where you see a Maori Concert Party. We also take you on a ride through the country where you see, among other things, over 65 extinct volcanos.

In Australia, you stay in the modern city of Sydney where you see the Bohemian King's Cross and the famous Wentworth House. We also take you through the countryside where you'll see some of the best surfing beaches anywhere. Then you go on a motor launch cruise up the Hawkesbury River and the Cowan Waters.

And in Fiji, you have plenty of time on your own to swim, sun and enjoy the peace and quiet. Just like the Fijians do.

$718 17 days–New Zealand including air fare, hotels and a car for your entire trip.

This tour is for people who want to see New Zealand at their own pace. (We also have these Fly/Drive tours to Australia for as low as $760 if you're thinking about going there.)

When you arrive in Auckland, we put you up in a first class hotel for your first night.

And the next day we give you a Hertz Ford sedan with 750 free miles. (After that you pay 12¢ per mile or for an additional $61 you can get unlimited mileage. With all rates based on two people sharing the car.)

You get $140 worth of voucher checks that you can use to stay in any hotel, motel or inn that you pass along the way. (This, too, is based on two people traveling together.)

We give you maps, mileage charts and suggestions so you can plan what you want to see and do.

And take it from us, there's a lot to see and do.

If you'd like some more information about these or any of our other Pacific tours call your Pan Am travel agent or Pan Am. Or send in our coupon.

Demond Wilson: TV finds a jewel in the junkyard

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

With all the junk that appears on television, it is ironic that some of the best and funniest TV fare is brought into our homes each Friday night by a couple of junk dealers.

I refer, of course, to Redd Foxx and Demond Wilson, who portray the title characters in "Sanford and Son," which has been one of the most popular and most highly acclaimed series on TV ever since it came to the tube on Jan. 14 of this year.

The scripts for the series, based on British TV's "Steptoe and Son" programs, have been outstanding, but it is difficult to imagine any two performers getting more out of them than Foxx, who plays Fred Sanford, a 65-year-old widower, and Wilson, who plays his son, Lamont, who is supposed to be in his 30s.

The two of them, who live together in a house adjoining their junk yard in Watts, squabble frequently but they love one another and will pull any trick to keep the other from moving out.

Foxx, who actually is only 49, is a veteran comedian well known on the nightclub circuits and for his blue-humor record albums. But what about Demond Wilson? He was relatively unknown before "Sanford and Son." To find out more about the talented young man who holds his own with the master of comic timing, I arranged to interview him at NBC-TV Studios in Burbank.

It was on a Monday that I paid him a visit, and I had the pleasure of watching Demond, Redd and guest Gregory Sierra rehearse for a half hour or so on an episode called "The Puerto Ricans Are Coming! The Puerto Ricans Are Coming!" before going to the actor's air-conditioned dressing room for the interview.

According to some stories I had read, Wilson, who is in his mid-20s, won the role of Lamont Sanford because executive producer Bud Yorkin saw him in the part of a burglar breaking into Archie Bunker's home in an episode of "All in the Family."

That's true enough, as far as it goes, but it makes it seem very simple to become a star. Just land a small part in one series, then be picked to star in another. Actually, Demond had many years of acting experience behind him.

"My mother got me started on Broadway at 4½ years old in 'The Green Pastures,' " he pointed out. "She had desired to be in show business herself, but her hopes were never fulfilled. It was her dream that my sister and I become performers. My sister, who's older than I am, played the organ and piano professionally before marrying, and used to be the accompanist for Leontyne Price."

Ever since his debut as a cherub in "The Green Pastures" (William Marshall played De Lawd), Demond has worked, he says, "fairly regularly over the years" as a performer.

"At 7 or 8 I was in 'The Children's Hour' Sunday series on NBC-TV for about a year," he told me. "I'd sing, dance and do skits." By the time he was 12, he was tap dancing on stage at the Apollo Theatre in Harlem, where he lived. At about 14, he started taking acting lessons at the American Community Theatre in Harlem. Later he studied at Actors Studio in New York.

"Also," he said, "I went to Hunter College for about three years and majored in drama. I never took part in high school or college plays, though, because I was already performing professionally in those years."

From 1966 to 1968 the young actor was in the Army and saw combat duty in Vietnam, he told me. "When I came out of the service, I got a job in my first dramatic series on TV, 'As the World Turns.' I've also played in 'The Best of Everything' and 'The Doctors' and did a number of TV commercials. On stage, I toured with the national company of 'The Boys in the Band,' among other things."

Prior to landing his "Sanford and Son" role, Demond had performed in two movies — "The Organization" and "Dealing."

As a boy, he said, "I lived in the movies. I saw all of 'em. In fact, I saw 'From Here to Eternity' 38 times. I aspired to be like Hopalong Cassidy as a kid. I had a fixation for Roy Rogers."

DEMOND WILSON . . . the junkman makes good.

Now, he says, he likes television, movies and the stage about equally well — "I'd like to do all of them."

Added Demond: "I'm a frustrated writer. I want to write and eventually produce. I've been writing for a few years and I've just done the first draft for a 'Sanford and Son' episode. But I have a lot I'd like to do in acting yet, too."

I asked if he had been surprised at his success and at the opportunities that have been opening up for black actors in recent years.

Replied Demond: "As a kid, I was always told 'You can be anything you want to be if you'll just work hard enough at it.' You know that line. Then they'd cite some example like George Washington Carver — or Sammy Davis."

"Had you aimed for comedy in your training?" I inquired.

"No, I hadn't aimed for comedy particularly. I had prepared for any kind of acting, but I hadn't done much comedy. However, I wasn't repulsed by the idea of doing it. In fact, people all my life have told me 'You should be a comedian.'"

I can believe that, because Demond Wilson is a great kidder. He had me cracking up as much during the interview as I do during a "Sanford and Son" show.

One of his favorite devices is to answer a question before you have finished asking it, turning the query into something naughty. For example, you might ask him, "Have you been getting much attention from the more militant black groups?" and he'll start answering after the word much. It's amazing how many questions he can do similar tricks with.

And if you ask him about his role in "The Boys in the Band," he'll go into an hilarious routine in the voice of one of the gay ones.

As to how his life has changed since gaining fame as a junk dealer, Demond cites simply: "More public recognition."

"Are you having to fight off the girls these days?" I asked the young bachelor, who lives in an apartment in Los Angeles.

"Oh, I always had to do that," he replied with a grin.

I'm not sure he was kidding, either.

MEREDITH BAXTER stars as Bridget Fitzgerald in "Bridget Loves Bernie," a Saturday night comedy series on CBS-TV.

PHIL BOYER is the new program manager of KNBC (Channel 4). He came to the Los Angeles station this month from KCRA-TV in Sacramento.

By CLARKE WILLIAMSON

"Revolting," "sadistic," "abrasive," "overbearing," "hog," and, finally, "There ought to be a law against him," is the way most of our readers react to seeing the name of the sportscaster, Howard Cosell, in our ballot. The poor guy's "awful" rating places him one notch above the bottom of this season's lousiest score.

At the other end of today's score sheet, the name of Frank Gifford brings forth pleasanter adjectives. Even so, none of the sportscasters nets a fervent adulation from sports fans. Why not?

Our conclusion: all of them gab too much and forget that viewers are so absorbed in following exciting plays, they become irritated by the diverting chatter of announcers no matter how fascinating or intriguing the chin music might sound to the speaker himself. Let's hope these awful to middling scores will bring them up short and gag those guilty of the worst palavering. Viewers' ratings:

Frank Gifford, 72.2, good.
Jim Simpson, 66.0, fair.
Keith Jackson, 64.7, fair.
Tony Kubek, 61.8, fair.
Sandy Koufax, 58.8, fair.
Byron Nelson, 58.7, fair.
Bud Palmer, 58.6, fair.
Dave Marr, 56.4, fair.
Chris Economaki, 53.2, poor.
Howard Cosell, 24.7, awful.

READERS SPEAK

COSELL: From H. Smith, Omaha, Neb.: During the Olympics this man shamed the United States the way he interviewed, and his sportscasting was revolting . . . From the Maresh Family, Cupertino, Calif.: He tried to force his opinions and ideas on those he interviewed and on the TV audience.

SIMPSON-JACKSON: From James Smith, Weslaco, Tex.: Fantastic in their ability to cover so many different events and give us accuracy and interest with no script.

SPECIAL

PROPOSITION 17 Debate (2), 6 p.m. — In the last of three statewide hour-long debates, Mario Machado moderates a discussion on the initiative measure to permit the death penalty for certain criminal offenses. LAPD's Charles R. Gross and ACLU's Charles S. Marson are participants. (A 30-min. debate on Proposition 14 airs at 6:30 p.m., ch. 7.)

NIGHT GALLERY (4), 10 p.m. — The mysterious disappearance of a number of famous and infamous people — from Anastasia to Judge Crater — is the theme for this Rod Serling drama. Mickey Rooney plays the world's most feared racketeer, who is marked for death, with Raymond Massey as a physician who offers him safety and security forever — for a price.

SPORTS TODAY

NFL FOOTBALL, 6 p.m. (7) finds Frank Gifford, Don Meredith and Howard Cosell at Soldier Field where Dick Butkus and the Chicago Bears host Fran Tarkenton and the Minnesota Vikings.

BOXING, 9 p.m. (5) has Tom Harmon ringside at Valley Music Theatre for a 10-round welterweight bout between Iran's Muhammed Elefat Talebi and North American champion Armando Muniz.

SPECIAL

SHIRLEY VERRETT (28), 5 p.m. — The BBC's Bernard Levin is host for a 90-min. "profile / music" of the famed black mezzo-soprano, who recalls her growing up in the South, her parents' discovery of her singing voice at 5½, and her winning of Arthur Godfrey's "Talent Scouts" in 1955. Songs include the card scene from "Carmen," the judgment scene from "Aida," and the spiritual "Let Us Pray Together."

IN SEARCH of Reality (9), 10 p.m. — Jay Silverheels is narrator for a look at the American Indian of the Southland, and their plea for recognition as they try to adapt to urban ways and still retain their heritage of which they are rightfully proud.

SPECIAL

U.N. DAY Concert (28), 8 p.m.—Works of Ravel, Brahms and Lutoslawski are included in a 2-hour concert, taped earlier tonight at General Assembly hall, saluting the UN's 27th anniversary.

OF THEE I SING (2), 9:30 p.m.—Carroll O'Connor stars as John P. Wintergreen in a 90-min. adaptation of George S. Kaufman's 1931 Pulitzer Prize-winning musical political satire about a Presidential campaign based on "silver linings," "blue skies" and "love". Highlight is an impeachment proceedings pushed by a Vice President so overlooked that he can get in the White House only on a tour. Music is by George and Ira Gershwin.

GROWING UP in Prison (4), 10 p.m.—Hour-long repeat spotlights Caril Fugate, the youngest woman ever to be sentenced to life imprisonment in the U.S., and who has grown to maturity (she's now 29) since her conviction at 14 as the companion of mass-murderer Charles Starkweather.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

I LIKE DRAMATIC shows better than comedy shows. But I really enjoy the Paul Lynde, "All in the Family," "Maude" and Mary Tyler Moore shows.

The first "All in the Family" wasn't too funny this season. But last (Oct. 14) night's was hilarious. Carroll O'Connor gets the most publicity for that show, but Jean Stapleton is terrific in the part of Edith.

Guess we're all too bigoted, but most people probably don't laugh so much at what Archie says but how he reacts to a given situation. Anyway, he usually gets his comeuppance in the end.

. . . Have noticed you've interviewed quite a few people in a restaurant across from NBC. Wonder if we would see any stars if we went there?

Coleen D.
Lakewood

(There's no guarantee, but you have a fairly good chance of seeing some performers at lunch time at restaurants near a TV network or movie studio. Of course, some performers eat in the studio commissaries.)

IT IS HARD to believe that a show like "The Julie Andrews Hour" had such a low rating. It is beautiful and so very entertaining. Last night (Oct. 11) was especially great. I do hope people wake up to what a truly delightful show it is.

The only reason I can think of is that only young people are asked for ratings. You know, there are a great many of us who do not like all this ear-splitting noise they call music, and we really appreciate beauty and music you can listen to without ear plugs.

We also adore "Sonny & Cher," a truly delightful couple, who are so relaxed and happy.

Please help keep these shows on. We also enjoy "Eddie's Father" (reruns).

Rosa Lee White and 87-year-old mother

(The Nielsen Ratings are supposed to be representative samplings of the entire viewing audience, and apparently the networks accept them as fairly accurate.)

Movie on homosexual coming to TV

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) —This year probably will be remembered someday as the one in which network television — in prime evening time — finally got around to topics that by now are old hat on talk shows.

CBS' "All in the Family" has covered homosexuality and wife-swapping. ABC's "Marcus Welby" explored lesbianism earlier this month and NBC's "Bold Ones" will do it again Oct. 31.

But these sketches of life outside the "straight" world really aren't all that bold; they're in the safe context of humor or medicine in regular series where the predictable is the formerly unmentionable.

On Nov. 1, however, ABC's "Movie of the Week" takes a big step forward in adult programming with a 90-minute drama that handles the issue of homosexuality with uncommon taste and restraint.

The show is called "That Certain Summer." It's about a 14-year-old boy who learns that his divorced father was, is and always will be a homosexual and in fact shares his hillside home with one.

The father, excellently portrayed by Hal Holbrook, isn't a mincing man. Nor is his young lover, played with a fine edge by Martin Sheen. And their speech isn't of the lisping variety.

It's in keeping with the show's intent — no shocks, just an attempt at understanding the misery of Doug Salter (Holbrook), a wealthy San Francisco contractor who has been divorced three years.

His son, Nick (Scott Jacoby), always visits him in the summer. It's part of the custody deal with Salter's ex-wife, whose home is in Los Angeles.

A routine divorce arrangement until the weekend Nick flies to San Francisco, is picked up by his father at the airport and they drive to Salter's house near Sausalito. There, he meets Gary McClain (Sheen), a supposedly temporary house guest.

The boy instinctievly knows something isn't right, a suspicion heightened by the way the two men chat with each other; it isn't effeminate chatter but it isn't really man talk, either.

The suspicion is fed by the hints scattered about the early stages of the show. Reality takes over in the latter stages when Nick reads the inscription on his father's watch: "To Doug, with love, from Gary."

No overtly homosexual acts appear in "Summer," which undoubtedly was a hard show to write and translate into film. The authors, Richard Levinson and William Link, managed it without lapsing into mawkishness or tip-toeing around the heart of the matter.

But the lion's share of credit belongs to the cast, particularly Holbrook, a powerful, sensitive actor with the rare ability to defuse lines that would cause snickers if read by almost anyone else.

His best moment comes in a long, difficult scene in which he agonizingly explains to his son why he is what he is.

"Do you know what the word homosexual means?" he gently asks the boy. A pause. "Come on — look at me. Keep the door open."

"That Certain Summer" will draw its share of viewer protests, but it also will keep the door open for other shows that want to try to match its quiet taste and intelligence.

CAPTAIN Kangaroo (2), 8 a.m. — It's the 5,000th broadcast for Bob Keeshan's creation, which debuted Oct. 3, 1955. The occasion is observed with a nostalgic look at clips of popular TV programs of the '50s and by taped greetings from Dick Van Dyke, Jean Stapleton, Sonny and Cher, Carol Burnett, Ed Sullivan, Walter Cronkite, Dinah Shore, Dr. Joyce Brothers, Rowan and Martin, and Fred Rogers (Mister Rogers)

GHOST STORY (4), 9 p.m. — Helen Hayes, winner of two Oscars, two Tony awards and an Emmy, plays a teacher whose favorite pupil (Michael-James Wixted), a temporary wheelchair victim, creates an imaginary playmate. Only trouble is that the playmate materializes as the evil side of his personality — bent on destruction and murder.

TV MOVIE TIPS

SHORT WALK TO DAYLIGHT
Seven fight for survival

TODAY — "The Adventurers" (1970), 9 p.m., Ch. 7. Film version of Harold Robbins' best-selling novel blends international intrigue, sex and violence. It runs for three hours and 15 minutes. Candice Bergen. Ernest Borgnine, Rossano Brazzi, Olivia De Havilland, Leigh Taylor-Young, Bakim Fehmiu and Alan Badel head the cast.

"Mr. Belvedere Goes to College" (1949), 11 p.m., Ch. 9. Clifton Webb, Shirley Temple and Tom Drake star in comedy about a celebrated middle-aged author who enrolls in college.

MONDAY — "A Lion Is In the Streets" (1953), 7 p.m., Ch. 5. James Cagney is the star of this drama about the rise and fall of a Southern politician. It repeats at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and Friday and at 2 p.m. next Sunday.

"They Might Be Giants" (1971), 9 p.m., Ch. 4. George C. Scott and Joanne Woodward star in allegorical comedy-drama about a retired judge who believes himself to be Sherlock Holmes.

TUESDAY — "Leave Her to Heaven" (1945), 7:30 p.m., Ch. 9. Ben Ames Williams' story of a wife's obsessive jealousy stars Gene Tierney.

"Short Walk to Daylight" (1972 TV movie), 8:30 p.m., Ch. 7. An earthquake strikes New York City, leaving eight terrified people trapped in a subway tunnel, with the only escape route under the East River. James Brolin, Don Mitchell head the cast.

WEDNESDAY — "Family Flight" (1972 TV movie), 8:30 p.m., Ch. 7. A flying vacation to Mexico for an at-odds family turns into a near-hopeless battle for survival after a crash landing in an isolated area of Baja California. With Rod Taylor, Dina Merrill, Kristoffer Tabori and Janet Margolin.

"The Lost Continent" (1968, English), 11:30 p.m., Ch. 2. Mechanical monsters and bizarre special effects mark drama starring Eric Porter, Hildegarde Neff, Suzanna Leigh.

THURSDAY — "The Great Race" (1965), 7:30 p.m., Ch. 5. Jack Lemmon and Tony Curtis are rivals in 1908 road race from New York to Paris in slapstick farce. Natalie Wood and Peter Falk also star.

"Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" (1967), 9 p.m., Ch. 2. Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn play an affluent couple whose liberal views are put to the test when their daughter introduces her fiance — a black doctor. Sidney Poitier and Katherine Houghton also star.

"The Helen Morgan Story" (1957), 11:30 p.m., Ch. 2. Drama based on life of ill-fated torch singer of the 1920s stars Ann Blyth, Paul Newman. Gogi Grant sings Miss Blyth's numbers.

FRIDAY — "The McKenzie Break" (1970), 9 p.m., Ch. 2. Brian Keith stars in tense prisoner-of-war drama having its first TV showing. He tries to circumvent an escape attempt by German U-boat officers in World War II.

"Land Raiders" (1969), 11:30 p.m., Ch. 2. Violent Western has landowners battling Apaches. With Telly Savalas, George Maharis, Arlene Dahl. Filmed in Spain.

SATURDAY — "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" (1963), 8 p.m., Ch. 4. Several strangers are thrown together by fate and embark on a treasure hunt involving $350,000 in buried loot. Comedy's cast includes Spencer Tracy, Milton Berle, Sid Caesar, Buddy Hackett, Ethel Merman, Mickey Rooney, Dick Shawn, Phil Silvers, Terry-Thomas and Jonathan Winters.

(Note: The movies listed here are only a small portion of the ones scheduled on TV this week; check the daily logs for others.)

The BIBLE Says

Question: "Does the Bible teach a Trinity?"

The word "Trinity" is not found in the Bible, BUT the concept of the Godhead signified by that word IS taught in the Bible. The dictionary defines Trinity as, "the unity of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit as three persons in one godhead." This is what the Bible teaches about the Godhead. However, since some object to the word "Trinity" because it is not found in the Bible, perhaps it would be better to simply describe the Godhead as consisting of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit — as the Bible does.

The Father is called God in Eph. 1:3, but is distinguished from the Son and the Spirit in John 14:26. The Son is called God in Heb. 1:8, but is distinguished from the Father and the Spirit in John 14:16 and John 1:1, 14. The Holy Spirit is called God in Acts 5:3-4, but is distinguished from the Father and the Son in John 14:16. Thus, at the baptism of Jesus when the Son was on earth, and the Holy Spirit, in the form of a dove, was descending upon Christ, the Father spoke from heaven and said, "This is my beloved Son, IN WHOM I am well pleased," (Matt 3:16-17). So also when Jesus commanded the apostles to preach the Gospel to all nations and baptize believers for the remission of sins, He described that baptism as being in the name of "the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost" (Matt. 28:19).

The limitations of space in this column prohibit an examination of misapplied scriptures by those who mistakenly deny the teaching of the Bible on the Godhead. Readers are invited to send specific questions on this subject, or persuade a qualified representative of the "oneness position" to contact the preachers of the Studebaker Road church of Christ in order to arrange a public Bible discussion on this interesting and important question.

SPORTS TODAY

NCAA FOOTBALL (7)—It's another week of selecting the week's game as conference standings develop. Time is expected to be 1:15 p.m.

ABC's WIDE WORLD of Sports, 5 p.m. (7), has Jim McKay at West Palm Beach for the Tournament of Thrills auto daredevil championship, with Bill Flemming in Petaluma for men's and women's wristwrestling finals, and Bud Palmer at Miami Beach for world professional target diving championships.

GRAMBLING Football, 6 p.m. (52), finds Ron Pinkney with highlights of last week's action against Jackson State.

PAC-8 FOOTBALL, 11 p.m. (5), has Chick Hearn at Eugene with a taped replay of today's contest between USC and Oregon.

SPECIAL

IT'S A MAD (4) World (4), 8 p.m.—Because of its extra length, this 1963 comedy gets an early airtime. Spencer Tracy, Milton Berle, Sid Caesar and Buddy Hackett head an all-star cast in the story of a mad treasure hunt set off when strangers hear the dying words of a bank robber. Missing, unfortunately, will be the cinerama techniques and multiple sound featured in the theatre screening.

MARY TYLER MOORE (2), 9 p.m.—If Rhoda's mother can boost the ratings, how about a mother for Mary? So Emmy-winning Nanette Fabray debuts in that recurring role tonight, moving to Minneapolis with her recently retired husband (Bill Quinn) to be near their only daughter. But do they have to live right around the corner and start planning her weekends?

28 Feast o. Language (R): "Love's Labours Lost"

When hospitalized, benefits are payable at the rate of...

Hospital Benefits
$700.00 a month—$23.33 a day—

while you require hospital confinement ...for each accident starting the first day in the hospital, and for each illness, starting after the fifth day—continuing for life, if necessary.

Children's Benefits
$420.00 a month—$14.00 a day—

while your child is confined to the hospital for any accident or illness, when you have Coverage for Children—no matter how long the confinement may be. Coverage for accidents begins the very first day in the hospital; sickness coverage begins after the fifth day.

Maternity Benefits
$23.33 a day—

for Maternity Benefits when Coverage for Children and Maternity Benefits have been added to the basic plan. (Wife must be enrolled for entire period of pregnancy.)

Registered Nurse Benefit at home after covered hospital confinement.
$400.00 a month—$13.33 a day—

for a registered nurse at home if your doctor has you hire one within five days following a hospital confinement of five days or more for which you received benefits—up to one year.

Increased Accident Benefit when covered husband and wife are simultaneously hospitalized.
$2,800.00 a month—$93.33 a day—

that's $1,400.00 a month, $46.67 a day, for you—and $1,400.00 a month, $46.67 a day, for your spouse ...while an accident hospitalizes covered husband and wife at the same time. Yes, $2,800.00 a month, $93.33 a day in all while both are confined in the hospital as a result of accident—even for life.

Waiver of Premium.

We waive all premiums that come due for you and all covered members of your family while you—or your spouse—are hospitalized beyond eight consecutive weeks following the elimination period if any. And you don't have to pay us back.

Benefits are payable for as long as you're hospitalized —even for life.

We mean it. If you go to the hospital for a month, we will pay you for a month subject to any elimination period. If you go for 2 months, we'll pay you for 2 months. And if you go to the hospital for life—we will pay you for life. No ifs, ands, or buts.

These are the exclusions!

Your National Home policy covers every kind of sickness or accident except conditions caused by:

1. any sickness or injury originating before the policy went into effect (these pre-existing conditions are covered after policy has been in force for 2 years);

2. war, or any act of war;

3. any mental disease or functional nervous disorder;

4. pregnancy, except as provided under the Maternity Benefit provision;

You collect from your first day in the hospital for accidents and after five days for sickness.

You will be covered for care in any hospital, except a U.S. Government hospital or a nursing or convalescent facility.

Here are your rates.

$1 covers your entire family for the first month. After that you may continue at the monthly rates shown below. We will issue you only one policy of this class. Each adult, 16 or over, pays the rate shown for his or her age.

Age at Enrollment	Monthly Premium per Adult
16-44	$ 3.95
45-49	$ 4.65
50-54	$ 5.10
55-64	$ 7.40
65-74	$ 9.95
75-79	$11.50
85 and over	$14.10

Only $2.05 more per month covers all your unmarried dependent children... from birth through 18 years, including automatic coverage for newborn children—at no additional cost. For Maternity Benefits just add $1.55 monthly if both husband and wife are covered under this policy—or $2.40 monthly if the wife only is insured.

NOTE: The regular monthly renewal premium shown (for age at time of enrollment) will not automatically increase as you pass from one age bracket to the next. Once you have enrolled in this National Home plan, your policy is guaranteed renewable and your rate cannot be increased individually because of how much or how often you collect from us—or because of advanced age—but only if there is a general rate adjustment on all policies of this class and form number in your entire state.

OVER 30 million people will be admitted to a hospital this year! It could be you – or some beloved member of your family – tomorrow . . . next week . . . next month. Sad to say, very few families have anywhere near enough coverage to meet today's soaring hospital costs. These costs have more than doubled in just a few short years.

Stop for a moment. Think how much a long stay in the hospital will cost you or a loved one. How would you ever pay for costly, but necessary, X-rays, medical bills, drugs and medicines? What would you do if your pay check stopped, but living expenses kept going on the same as ever? The same rent, phone, food, all the day-to-day expenses that never stop.

What is the average breadwinner to do? We believe we have an answer in this National Home plan.

Pays up to $700.00 a month–
$23.33 a day–benefits
when you are hospitalized.

Now you can have $700.00 coming in every month--$23.33 a day--beginning the very first day you are hospitalized due to an accident, and after the fifth day for confinements due to sickness.

The benefits are paid directly to you unless you request otherwise and without regard to any other insurance you may already have. Use the money as you see fit - for hospital or medical bills. To replace savings or cover household expenses.

Dear Friend:

How often do we take for granted our good health and that of those we love? It's only natural ... until something happens.

And things do happen. Over 30 million people are admitted to hospitals each year, and with today's skyrocketing hospital and medical costs many people lose their savings and go into debt. That's why you should protect yourself and your family with National Home's health plan. I think this plan is one of the best supplemental hospital insurance plans you can own.

Because I have been retained by National Home as a marketing consultant, I've looked over the policy very carefully. I also know the folks at National Home. And you won't find more decent, competent and friendly people to deal with. I've seen the way they handle claims, too -- quickly and fairly. Believe me, when you need them, they'll be there to help you.

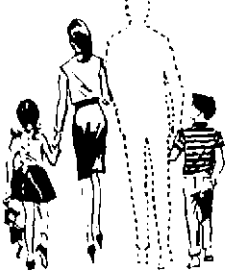

I cannot imagine anybody passing up the chance to enroll in this health plan -- especially when the first month's protection costs only $1 and then continues at reasonable monthly rates.

We all know what a terrible thing it is to be hospitalized. But what a relief it is to know there are insurance benefits coming in when you need them most! Take my advice. Send the Enrollment Form on the back page now -- before you forget.

Sincerely,

Art Linkletter

Member of the Board of Directors,
National Home Life Assurance Company

We guarantee not to cancel your protection no matter how many claims you have . . . or how old you become . . . or for any reason whatsoever.

We cannot increase your rates individually because of how old you become . . . or how many claims you have . . . but only if there is a general rate adjustment on all policies of this class and form number in your entire state.

How much does $700.00 a month —$23.33 a day—protection cost you? Only $1 covers you and your entire family for the first month. After that you may continue at our renewal rates shown on page 2.

Pays $420.00 a month—$14.00 a day—when any unmarried dependent child is hospitalized.

When you choose Coverage for Children, this National Home plan pays at the rate of $420.00 a month—$14.00 a day—while one of your children is hospitalized. Pays for as long as necessary! Children are covered for accidents from the first day and for sickness after the fifth day.

Benefits for Maternity Care.

Other hospital insurance may take care of part of your expenses when you are confined to the hospital to have a baby. This plan can give you additional help when the new baby arrives. If Coverage for Children and Maternity Benefits are added to the basic plan, and your wife has been covered during entire period of pregnancy, this plan pays $700.00 a month $23.33 a day to use as you want. If a pregnancy, childbirth or even miscarriage puts your covered wife in the hospital for one day, five days, ten days—as long as necessary—this plan pays benefits for every day of the confinement.

Benefits for registered nurse care at home after a covered hospital confinement.

How comforting it is to know that—after your stay in the hospital, if you've been there five days or more for which you received benefits—you can return home to recuperate and yet not be a burden to your loved ones. If your doctor has you employ a full-time registered nurse within 5 days after you come home, we'll pay benefits at the rate of $400.00 a month —$13.33 a day. And your benefits continue during employment of the nurse—even up to 12 full months.

Double Accident Benefit
when covered husband and wife are simultaneously hospitalized.

When you and your insured spouse are hospitalized at the same time for an accidental injury, this National Home plan pays DOUBLE BENEFITS. $1,400.00 a month—$46.67 a day apiece. That's $2,800.00—$93.33 a day—in benefits every month starting the day you are hospitalized for as long as you both remain confined.

Waiver of premium benefit.

After you or your covered spouse are confined in the hospital for 8 continuous weeks, following the elimination period, if any, your premiums that come due during the continued hospital confinement are taken care of by National Home. And your protection continues just the same as if you were paying the premiums yourself.

Nationally known and respected.

This is the kind of protection you may have seen advertised in Reader's Digest, Better Homes and Gardens, TV Guide and other leading publications. The company that stands behind your policy is National Home, established in 1920 and a member of the National Liberty Group. One of America's financially strong institutions, we are licensed in 46 states and we pay benefits under various plans at the rate of twenty million dollars a year to our policyowners.

Fast, Reliable Claim Service

"We were most happy with the prompt way that you sent us the claim forms when requested. Your check for the week my husband was in the hospital was received within ten days. Thank you so much – it really helped in a time of need."

MRS. ROBERT H. ROBINSON, Miami, Fla.

"I took out the policy and had only paid two monthly premiums when I was unexpectedly put in the hospital. Was there 11 days and the National Home Life Assurance Company paid exactly what they had said they would. How happy we were we had taken the policy out."

DEWEY M. FAILOR, Upper Sandusky, Ohio

Why you should mail your Enrollment Form TODAY.

You never know when you or someone in your family will suffer a serious illness or sudden accident. Remember, 80,000 Americans are admitted to a hospital each day. And nobody knows whose turn it is next. Do you really have enough health protection to cover today's soaring hospital and medical costs? Probably not. That's why it's so important to get this additional $700.00 a month—$23.33 a day—plan. Play it safe, send your form now and you won't be sorry later.

Act now—

"later" may be too late!

TIME IS PRECIOUS! Act quickly. (No salesman will call.) Get your Enrollment Form into the mail today—because once you suffer an accident or sickness, it's TOO LATE to get the coverage you need. That's why we urge you to act today—before the unexpected happens.

RIGHT TO EXAMINE POLICY

We will send your National Home policy by mail. Examine it carefully. If you decide that you don't want to continue as a member of this plan, return the policy within 10 days of the date you receive it and we will promptly refund your money.

65 OR OVER?

Regardless of the coverage you already have, National Home pays at the rate of $23.33 a day, $700.00 a month, when you are hospitalized. Coverage for accidents begins the very first day in the hospital. Sickness coverage begins after the fifth day. Coverage for accidents or sickness continues for as long as you are hospitalized.

CLAIMS PHILOSOPHY

National Home Life Assurance Company

Our claims philosophy stresses the importance of a prompt and equitable settlement of all claims:

- . . . "EXCELLENCE is not only what we wish to achieve, but that to which our policyowners are entitled."
- . . . "Our guiding principle is to ask ourselves on each submitted claim, 'Is there any way we can pay this claim?'"
- . . . always give the benefit of the doubt to the policyowner."
- . . . "Courtesy is an absolute requirement the policyowner must have the feeling that he is not a number but, rather, a human being, and that we stand ready and willing to assist him in any way we can."

Round Trip For Two Via Western Airlines ...Plus 4 Glamorous Nights and 5 Days at Hilton Hotels.

4 numbers posted

Or...You May Win One Item Out of Thousands of Dollars Worth of Items Offered by Sears Stores

Each winner shall be liable for any applicable federal, state or local taxes.

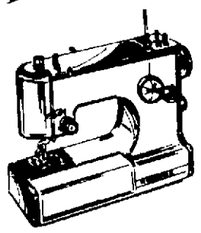

(Vacation prize is not redeemable for cash or Sears merchandise)

Anyone 18 years or older is eligible to win, except employees of Sears, Roebuck and Co., Western Airlines, Hilton Hotels and their advertising agencies and members of their immediate families. The winners will have one year to exercise their choice; subject to hotel space availability and seasonal conditions. Hotel room accommodations only.

No purchase is necessary. You need not be present to win. Winners will be announced no later than November 10, 1972. Proof of lucky number will be required on presentation.

Look for the one central location in each Sears store where all lucky numbers will be posted together for your convenience. All lucky numbers will be posted in each of the 27 Sears stores. All prizes will be awarded. If the exact number posted is not turned in, the next closest number will be awarded the prize. Have your number recorded; you may be a winner, even though you do not have the exact number. In case of a tie, the lower number will win.

Fly with us to Tahoe Donner, and start making plans for all the vacations ahead.

Fly on our Electra Jet this weekend.

To find out how, mail the coupon on the inside page now. We'll pick you up at your door and put you aboard our 4-engine Electra Jet, captained by million-mile pilots. You'll fly directly to the Lake Tahoe area. Once there, you'll spend the day looking over the property. You'll see it all for yourself, maybe even meet some of the wildlife. We'll answer questions over lunch. Then it's back to Southern California that evening. This prime recreational land just 16 miles from Lake Tahoe can't last forever. So right now is the best time to select a site close to your favorite sport or activity. Fly with us and see Tahoe Donner this weekend.

Free book of vacation homes plans.

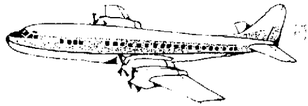

Check and mail the coupon on the inside page of this insert and you'll receive a free illustrated folder. It includes plans for exciting vacation homes, all designed especially for the four-season kind of living Tahoe Donner offers.

See our model homes.

While you're taking the grand tour of Tahoe Donner, don't miss the model vacation homes. They're slated to be completed by Fall, but there's plenty there to see right now. Who knows, one of these homes could be yours

Tahoe Donner. It's a place to boat, swim, fish, picnic, golf, water-ski, snow-ski, ride horses, and play tennis for all the vacations of your life.

This is the way it is at Tahoe Donner.

It could all start this year. When you first buy at Tahoe Donner, you'll probably want to pitch a tent or bring a camper. A new, 35-acre campground for self-contained motor homes or campers at the northern end of the property is scheduled for completion this year. Picnic facilities, showers, restrooms, and water will be added in 1973. You can stay in the campground or in our beautiful 60-unit lodge.

Then there's the new private beach club, exclusively for the use of property owners. It's just two miles away at Donner Lake. The swimming's great. So is the boating, sailing, water-skiing, and sunbathing. There's a private storage area for your boat and house trailer. No need to tow them. Just leave them in a locked compound.

When you can get yourself out of the water, how about a hike through the woods? Or would you rather ride? There'll be horses for renting (or board your own), and miles of bridle trails. There's good fishing in two streams right on the property. There'll be an eighteen-hole, championship golf course, designed by Joe Williams, who laid out the course at the "Western White House" for President Nixon.

When the first snowfall comes, you'll head for Tahoe Donner's own private ski resort, planned for family skiing.

Two double chairlifts and a Mitey-Mite serve runs which delight beginners and exhilarate intermediates. Because of the location of this natural bowl, you can often be on the slopes until mid-May, when it'll be time to head back for the water again! That's the way it is at Tahoe Donner, the four-season, resort-recreational community. And, because of the painstaking planning that has gone into this natural wonderland, that's the way it's going to stay.

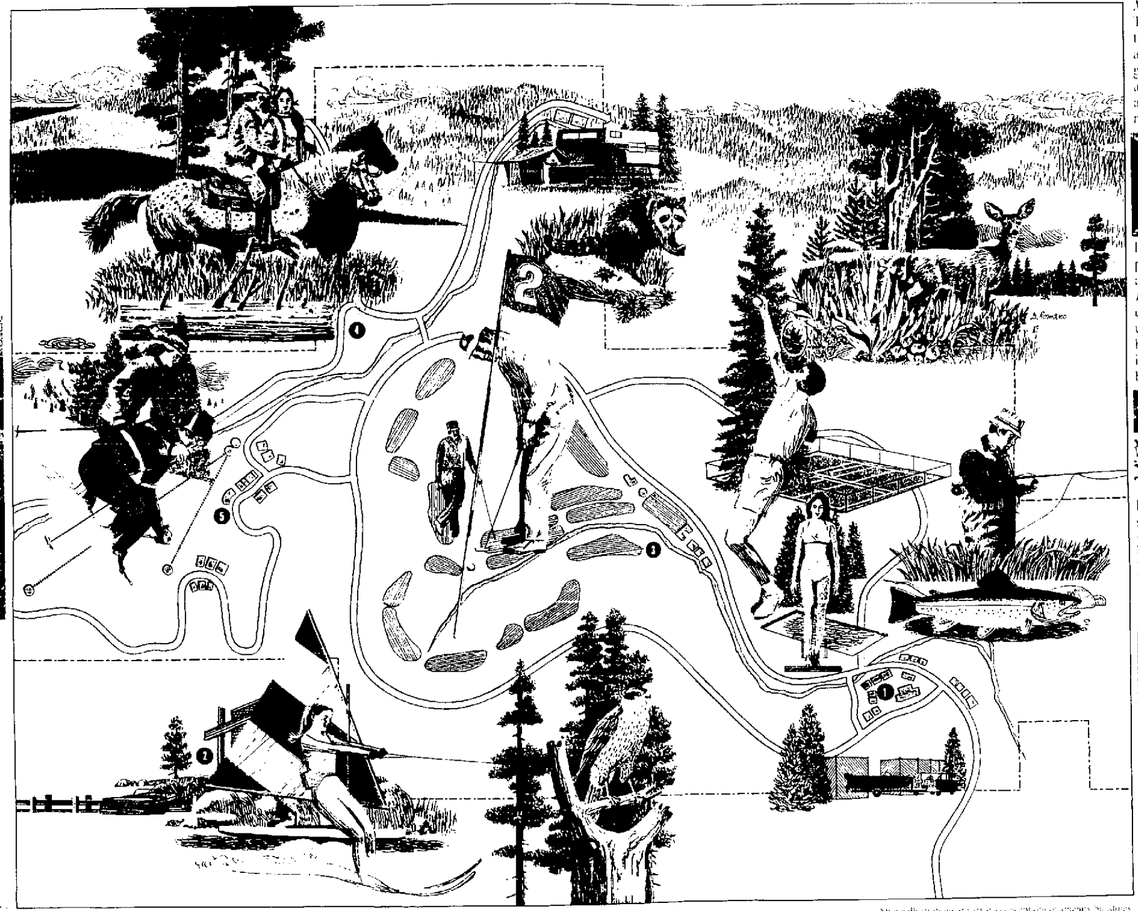

If you want a lot near your favorite activity, act now. The opportunity won't last forever. Just drop the card in the mail and plan to see Tahoe Donner. There'll never be a better time.

Main Recreation Center (1). This is the gathering place for the community. The central activity area surrounds a gigantic fireplace. There is also a restaurant, cocktail lounge, and a pioneer museum. Swimming pool and tennis courts are scheduled for completion this year. Private Beach Complex (2). Owners will enjoy their own private beach, a picnic pavilion, cabana, and boat ramp, two miles away at Donner Lake. Championship Golf Course (3). The golf clubhouse is now under construction. The first nine of this championship course will be playable in early Summer, 1973. Equestrian Center (4). The equestrian center is scheduled for completion September 30. A riding and jumping ring surrounds the large barn with its 14 stalls and tackroom. Private Skiing and Lodge (5). Our Ski Lodge starts its second season this winter. Next door is a 60-unit lodge. Because Tahoe Donner is a private* ski resort, it's one of the few uncrowded places in the area. Right now, lots are available near all the recreation facilities. If you act soon, you could literally have your favorite sport outside your door. Send in the card and we'll send you details regarding a property inspection flight.

Wells Report

The Hook on the Tie Clasp

Early in this century a young Croatian named Josip Broz surveyed his prospects in his native land, found them bleak, and like many of his countrymen determined to emigrate to America. He would have, too, except that his father couldn't raise the last $100 for his passage to the New World. So Josip Broz stayed in his homeland, became a locksmith and a Marxist revolutionary, led the Partisans against the Nazis, and under the name of Tito founded modern Yugoslavia.

It is fascinating to speculate what might have happened to young Broz if his father had found that last $100. Might he possibly, like many of his compatriots, have found his way to San Pedro? One can see him on the waterfront, a longshoreman, or winch operator, or teamster, urging the cause of militant unionism, picketing, organizing. In his middle age, the establishment would grudgingly have to deal with him, sign contracts, negotiate. In his later years, he would even attain the status of a labor statesmen. He would build a big house higher up the hill. Ultimately he would be named a member of the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners, and his children would attend USC.

It is equally fascinating to speculate on what might have happened to Allan R. Ide if Axel Ide in 1907 had not found the final few dollars that enabled him to emigrate from Sweden to San Pedro. But Axel did emigrate, and on May 8, 1917 his son, Allan, was born in the village the natives quaintly call Peedro.

But then again, the true story of what did happen to Al Ide, his passage from longshoreman to business executive, civic leader and patron of the arts, is interesting enough to call the mind away from idle speculation on alternative histories.

Just looking at Al Ide tells you he was born in San Pedro. He is a huge bear of a man with a frank, open gaze and a slow but ready smile; the kind of man you might see having lunch in the Majestic, or reading the bulletin board at the union hall. He wears a tie before 6 p.m., so that tells you he is an executive. But the tie is held by a clasp bearing a strange device, a replica of a longshoreman's hook. In these days of containerization and 30-ton cranes, the hook is no longer used. When Ide went to work on the docks in 1937 every longshoreman had one.

In the past five years, Long Beach has come to know Ide rather well. He is executive vice president of Metropolitan Stevedoring Co., one of the two largest of the five stevedoring firms on the Long Beach-Los Angeles Waterfront. That is just one of the many hats we see him in. He is a major fund raiser for and member of the executive committee of Civic Light Opera, a trustee and member of the Board of Directors of Community Hospital, secretary-treasurer of Long Beach Rotary, member of the Board of Directors of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, member of the Board of Directors, Long Beach Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Until Ide reached the 11th grade at San Pedro High School his future seemed to be that of the typical second generation American. He wanted to go to college and become a pharmacist. But that was 1934, the year the Great Depression hit California with its full impact. When an illness in the family brought additional financial strain, Al had to quit high school and go to work. He worked at a variety of jobs until he was old enough to go on the docks as a longshoreman. And like almost everyone in San Pedro in those days he picked up a few extra bucks crewing commercial fishing boats whenever he could.

When World War II came along, he joined the Seabees with the petty officer rank of coxswain. He ended the war as the officer in charge of the Stevedore Training School at Port Hueneme. His Navy career was frequently marked by the sort of tough bargaining that is alleged to take place on the waterfront. Soon after he became a Seabee, an officer ordered him to report to another officer in charge of rigging.

"No, sir," Ide replied.

The officer was startled. "Are you refusing an order?"

"I don't work for a man who doesn't know as much as I do about rigging."

The officer thoughtfully studied young Ide for a moment.

"Go on over there and let's see what you can do," he finally said. "If you're as good as you say you are, you'll be running the rigging operation soon enough."

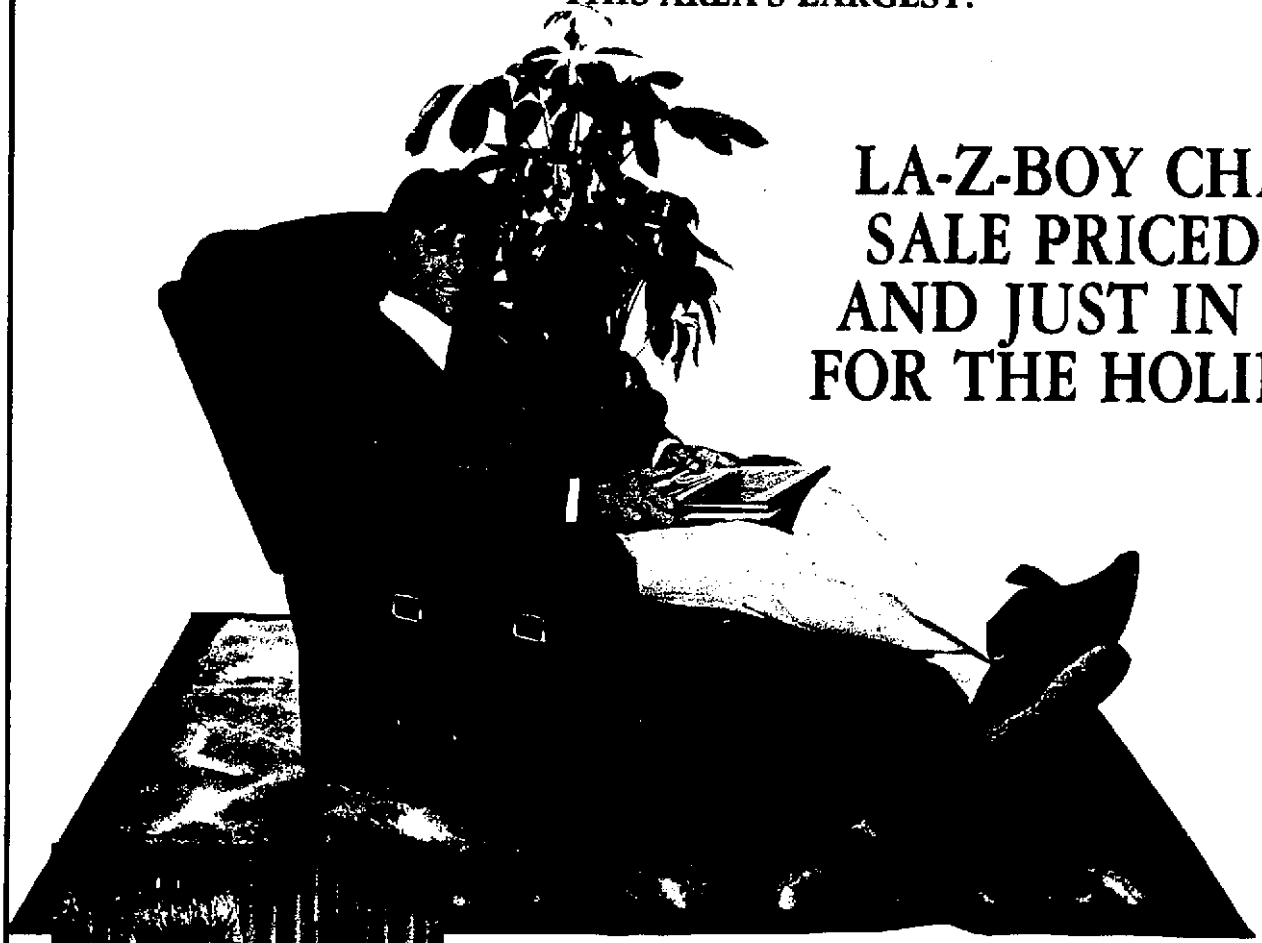

After the war, Ide went into the management end of port operations. That is, he ceased to be a longshoreman and became a stevedore. Long ago, when rivers and canals were the arteries of this nation's commerce, a stevedore was a man who worked aboard a vessel, while a longshoreman worked on shore. Now, however, a longshoreman is someone who works for stevedoring companies, which contract with ship operators to load and unload cargo.

Ide has another hobby. He writes poetry. But he confesses it somewhat reluctantly.

"It just doesn't sound right for an old longshoreman to be writing poetry," he says. □

Glad you asked that!

By HY GARDNER

Mark Spitz . . . at least one Tarzan movie.

Elvis Presley . . . no serious dating.

Judy Garland . . . never given a decent burial.

Jack Paar . . . one fan's enough.

George M. Cohan . . . a medal for songwriting.

Q: Since Olympic swimming champ Mark Spitz has won all those gold medals, will he retire from competition and just swim for fun, or what? — Peter L., Garden City, N.Y.

A: Now that he's made his mark, speedster Spitz will probably take the plunge and remake at least one Tarzan movie. Following in the swimstrokes of a previous great Olympic champion, Johnny Weismuller. He's already indicated some interest in such a project.

Q: Isn't Elvis Presley secretly romancing a new gal? And is it serious? — Tricia, "a worried fan," Washington, D.C.

A: Since making public the split with his wife, Priscilla, Presley's been dating dancer Sandra Zancan (of the L.A. Music Center company of "No, No, Nanette"). But after shaking off one wife, I doubt if Elvis would want to get serious with any other girl at this time. Incidentally, Miss Zancan only recently was eloping to Las Vegas when she told her fiance, Jim Hail, to stop the car and head back to L.A.

Q: Seeing the tremendous success of Liza Minelli, and now her half-sister, Lorna Luft, it makes me sad to think that their mother, Judy Garland, with all her fame was never given a decent burial. Why? — Mrs. Evelyn R., Philadelphia.

A: Judy's body will not be laid to final rest until the courts resolve certain legal claims. Meanwhile her heartbroken children reveal mom's remains lie in a cemetery vault in upstate New York.

Q: We're delighted that Jack Paar's bringing his exciting late night talk show back to TV next January. Have you any idea of when and how he got into broadcasting? — L. Gross, Des Moines.

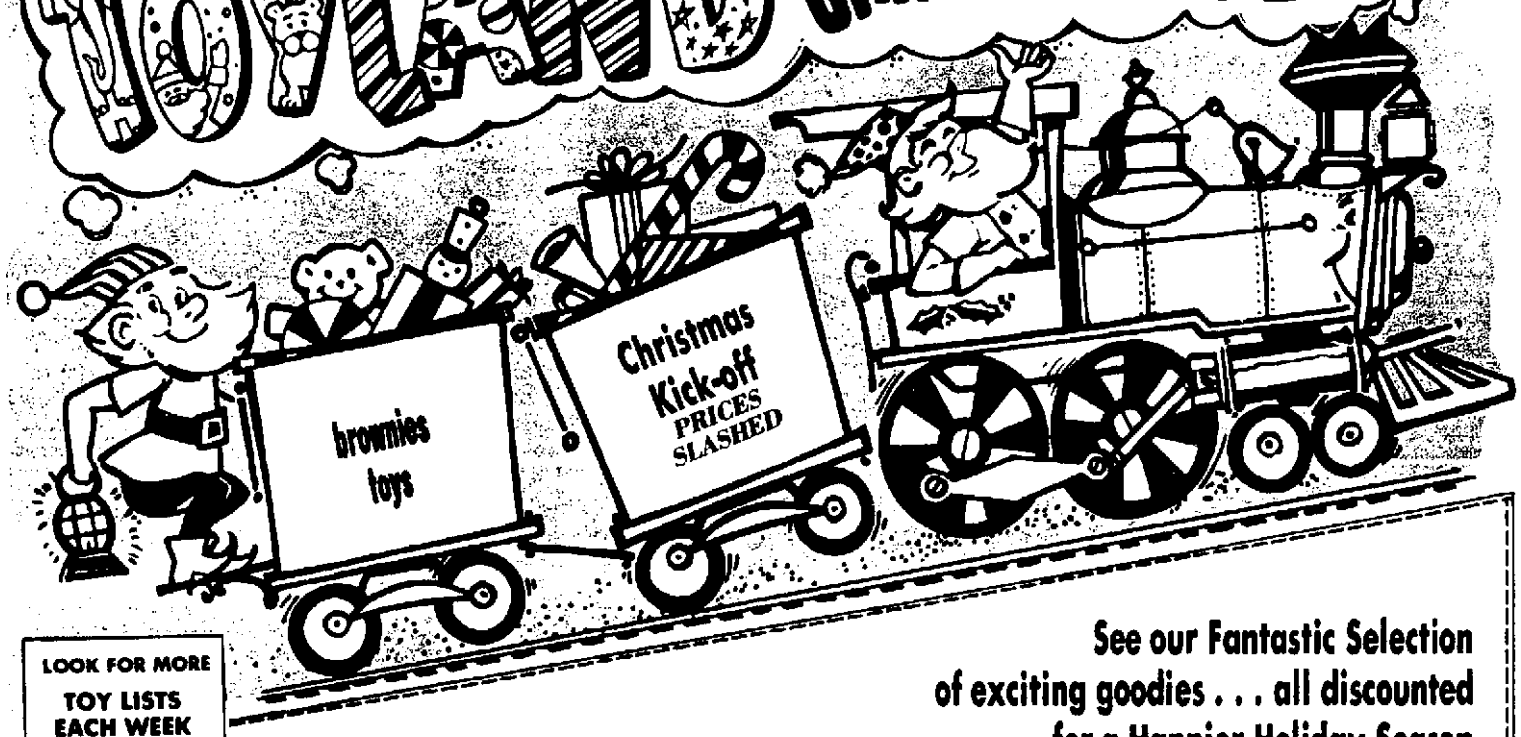

A: "It happened when I was only 16 and living in Jackson, Mich.," Jack tells me. "I joined a crowd of people watching one of those man-in-the-street radio interviewers — on the state's penal system. Suddenly he poked a microphone in front of my face and though I knew nothing about the subject I rambled on and on with seeming authority. In the next few days so many letters came to the station asking who the bright young man was who knew so much about penology, they hired me. What I didn't tell them," Jack grinned at the recollection, "was that all the fan letters were written by the same fan — my mother!"

Q: Is it true that the late George M. Cohan once received a medal from the U.S. government? If so, for what? — Mrs. Peter B., Roanoke, Va.

A: Yes. The Yankee Doodle Dandy was awarded a special medal by an Act of Congress. It read: "To George M. Cohan by act of Congress dated June 29, 1936, in recognition of his services during the World War (I) in composing the patriotic songs — 'Over There' and 'A Grand Old Flag.'"

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. He will answer as many questions as he can in his column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible. □

INSTANT MILLIONAIRES

Lure of the Lotteries

By JERRY LITWAK

There was nothing which set this day apart from any other day for Henry Casey, 50-year-old liquor store employe, when he left home for work on April 28 of this year. The usual concern for the health of his wife was foremost in his thoughts. Elayne Casey, his wife of 25 years, had been in and out of hospitals with a brain tumor, for better than five years. Casey was stunned to learn from Pennsylvania's governor, Milton J. Sharp, that he had won a million dollars in the brand new Pennsylvania "Millionaire" lottery. Mrs. Casey is now optimistic about the future, after this change of luck; about which she says "This has given me the faith to know I'm going to get better."

Sound like a dream? Not really. Just change the name of Elizabeth Wilson, 17 years, of Belleville, N.J., and you have another millionaire winner — this one in the drawing held by the state of New Jersey on April 5, 1972.

Then there was Robert Chaudy, former auto salesman and a resident of Nancy, who in 1962 won $200,000 in the weekly French lottery. Widow Frieda Wenke, 54, of Hanover, West Germany, beat the 14-million-to-1 odds to win $120,000 in the weekly West German lottery. People are still talking about the $842,000 pot which was split by Jim Gault and his cousin, Bill Stranaghan, both of Britain, who "got rich quick" via a hunch bet on the legalized football pools.

People have been betting the odds since Adam and Eve chanced God's wrath in the Garden of Eden. There are a total of 83 Bible references to the use of the "lot" for purposes of division, or decision. God used the lot to cast Jonah into the sea, after Jonah disobeyed his command. The four books of the Gospel describe the drawing of lots, by Roman soldiers, for the clothing of crucified Jesus Christ.

Lotteries are currently legal in more than 80 countries, including Ireland, France, England, Argentina, Russia and Australia, to name a handful. The U.S. government conducts a lottery as a means of granting expired wildcat oil leases to new lessees; and there are now legal lotteries operating in New York (1967), New Hampshire (1964), New Jersey (1970) and Pennsylvania (1972).

The earliest English lottery of record occurred in 1567, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth I. As was to be the case with many that followed, the lottery was not greeted with open arms. Commencement of the draw was consequently delayed until January 11, 1569; and this long delayed drawing continued unabated, day and night, until its finish on May 6 of that year.

Up to 1826, when the English Parliament acted to kill all lotteries, both state and private, Britain had seen lottery schemes advanced for every purpose from ransoming English slaves in Turkey and Africa to bridge building. There were lotteries to bring water to London, to settle estates, for payment of personal debts and to dispose of unwanted or unsaleable private property or merchandise held by individuals or trading companies. Fishing vessels damaged by the Spanish fleet were to be repaired from the proceeds of lottery; and 1719 saw establishment of a fund from which, by annual lottery, would be drawn a dowry for some 22-year-old unmarried female member of the Episcopal Church of England.

The world's largest lottery is drawn in Paris, France. It was started in 1933 in an effort to keep in France the money which was being diverted to the Irish Sweepstakes and to Italian football pools.

The lottery is quite popular with the French, who look forward to each week's drawing with great expectations. A customer may purchase as little as 110th of a ticket, for a chance at 110th of the prize drawn, or may, for his investment of $5.20, be the lucky winner of the 'gros lot' (grand prize) of $200,000. With 600,000 tickets sold weekly, there are 154,719 winners. In addition to the 'gros lot,' there are two prizes of $40,000, one of $20,000, seven of $10,000, 104 between $10,000 and $2,000 and about 35,000 ranging downward from $2,000 to $60.

French lottery officials, through great diligence, have succeeded in making and keeping their lottery, like Caesar's wife, "beyond reproach." Winning numbers are selected at public drawings, with full public participation.

While this French government-operated lottery provides only one per cent of the government's annual revenue ($46 million in 1966), lottery officials feel it has a value far beyond this percentage from the standpoint of the morale of the "sad little people who know they have no way of improving their lot."

Not as large as the French, but certainly the best-known lottery in the world, is the Irish Sweepstakes. Drawn three times yearly, winning lottery tickets are related directly to the winning horses in the spring Lincolnshire Handicap run at Doncaster, England, the summer Irish Sweep Derby, run at the Curragh, near Dublin, and the fall Cambridgeshire, run at Newmarket, England. Despite the fact that ticket sales are illegal in most countries of the world, citizens of more than 40 countries have managed, since the Sweeps' modest beginnings in 1930, to garner over $500 million in prize-money. Fifty per cent of the net proceeds is directly earmarked for prizes, while the remaining 50 per cent is retained for support of Irish hospitals.

In 1959, governor Pat Brown of California, becoming curious about the amount of California lottery participation (and perhaps savoring the potentially lush source of easy revenue), ordered an investigation into the Irish Sweepstakes in California. By a careful study of bank drafts, it was observed that remittances to Ireland rose steadily, coinciding with the approach of the three Dublin lottery drawings; then fell drastically immediately after such drawings were held. Since lottery tickets are sold for $2.80 each and, as there are ten tickets to a book, Brown's agents looked for draft remittances which were in multiples of $28.

September of that year turned up the sum of $52,000 going to Ireland from a single branch of Bank of America; and random questioning of remitters produced admission that the money was, indeed, in payment for Irish Sweepstakes tickets. On the basis of this survey of a single branch of a single bank in one community, and considering the varied means by which funds could be transferred, Governor Brown concluded the total amount sent to Ireland annually from California must run up into the millions.

The state of New Hampshire started the first legal lottery in the U.S. in 1964. Levying neither a general sales nor a state income tax, New Hampshire adopted the lottery as a means of assisting the state school system. Annual revenue ($1.5 million) from the lottery fell far short of that anticipated ($4 million) yet enabled New Hampshire to increase state aid to schools by 50 per cent. Tickets are $3; drawings are held seven times a year. With prizes totalling $1.8 million, the lucky big winner gets $100,000.

New York state looked at New Hampshire, liked the potential for an easy buck and, in 1967, jumped into the lottery business with both feet. Listening to gripes about the New Hampshire lottery, the N.Y. lottery commission provided for monthly drawings, with tickets selling for only a dollar. Lottery sponsors, while hopeful, have been thus far disappointed with the $30 million. They blame the federal law, which prohibits use of the mails to promote or sell lottery tickets.

Critics, however, point to the long odds — over 1200-to-1 against winning anything at all. The prize is $100,000 for each million dollars worth of tickets sold — a million-to-one shot, no matter how you slice it. Nevertheless, in the first three years of operation, the New York lottery has had 176,000 winners and has enriched the state treasury by $114 million. Lottery commission members are optimistic about the effects of changes now being considered.

If it looks like there is money in it, you can't keep it a secret for long — and along came New Jersey. Profiting by the earlier experiences of both of its U.S. predecessors, the New Jersey lottery burst forth in 1970 with 50-cent tickets and a drawing every Thursday. The first of a series of three drawings produces weekly prize winners of from $50,000 to $40. Excitement mounts as the survivors move into the semi-final, then the final drawing, which will provide payment of $100,000, $200,000 and $1 million to three lucky people. Based on the first four months of operation, the highly successful New Jersey lottery will produce in excess of $40 million in annual revenue and will undoubtedly provide the format for other states succumbing to lottery fever.

Even the Russians have four lottery drawings a year. The purpose is to reward, at random, a small number of Russian workers, all of whom subserviently commit from one to four weeks pay to help the Soviet meet its yearly domestic money crisis. All lenders are given certificates, redeemable at par in 20 years. The lucky winners either receive small cash bonuses or are given permission to redeem their bonds prior to the end of the 20-year period.

State licensed lotteries are now in operation in five of the six Australian states. With a total population of 12 million plus, Australians managed to buy $95 million worth of lottery tickets in 1968.

Free of all taxes, prizes in the various Australian lotteries run as high as 73 per cent of gross receipts. In 1971, New South Wales lotteries grossed $58 million, from which $12 million went into the hospital fund, and $36 million was paid out in prizes, including the $20 bill won by 15-year-old Kenneth Litwak, of Santa Ana, Calif., with a $1 ticket bought for him as a birthday present by his grandmother.

Sydney, New South Wales, started a lottery in 1958 to help finance its unique and controversial opera house. Reportedly to have cost $7 million, the opera house — like our C5A, Federal Budget and the Washington Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts — has shown a history of significant cost overrun. Not yet completed and lacking in popular support, this project will require an estimated additional $86 million to complete. While some Aussies are quite bitter about the diversion of lottery funds to the opera house, it is difficult to quarrel with the fact this opera house is not being built with public tax funds.

Legislators at various levels of government have condemned lottery bills on the grounds the lottery is a "poor man's tax." However, unnamed California legislators are privately in favor of a legal lottery and have indicated an intent to support such legislation if it appears near approval. According to Assemblyman Leon Ralph, of Los Angeles, "the problem is, a lot of guys are saying that, if the thing looks like it isn't going to go, 'I want to be recorded no on it, so I won't have to take the heat.'"

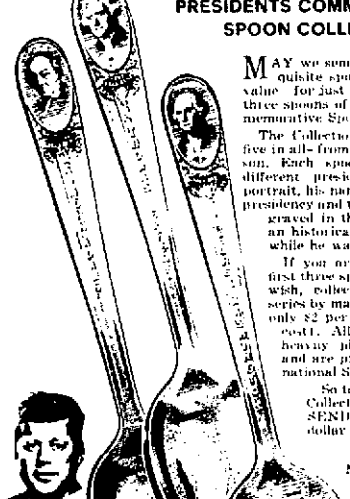

Commonly accepted public practices suggest the public would strongly favor a legal lottery — if given a choice. There are few among us who do not buy an occasional raffle ticket for the benefit of some youth group, service club, fraternal or veterans' organization. A not-uncommon sight is uniformed students selling raffle tickets for the benefit of the Catholic church; and there is hardly an office or factory that does not have its summer baseball

HERE IS THE ALAMO STORY

For years we operated successfully as Pre-Design Inc., in Norwalk, specializing in adding rooms and remodeling. Every contractor's dream has been to be able to show a display of his workmanship and ideas. At last we have been able to do so. We have built the Alamo Center which features forty full size model room displays, all furnished and professionally decorated. When we realized we must furnish and decorate all our room displays we decided to go into the furniture business and become a full service furniture center just as we are a full service remodeling center. You can get anything from as little as a lamp or game table to a master bedroom and bath, all completely furnished and decorated. THIS IS WHAT WE MEAN BY A FULL SERVICE CENTER.

A Loser in California

The most consistent losers among California gamblers are the men who have tried to legalize lotteries. During the past 25 years they have taken their case for a lottery to both the legislature and the people. The results have been uniformly negative.

Each attempt to establish a legal lottery in California is a long and costly process, chiefly because it involves a change in the state constitution.

The constitution must be amended to permit the legislature to establish a lottery and constitutional amendments require approval of the electorate.

The initial problem for lottery supporters is getting the question on the ballot and when the legislature is reluctant to act, the initiative petition is the only way to go. It requires gathering signatures which equal 8 per cent of the vote for governor in the last election. To put an issue on the 1972 election ballot which would involve an amendment to the constitution requires 520,806 signatures. The lottery is not on the ballot this year.

Proponents of a lottery generally begin with the legislature and with the argument that state involvement in a gambling venture would provide revenue and keep taxes down.

In 1949 a horse race lottery patterned after the Irish Sweepstakes was proposed as a way of raising $400 million for highway construction. The proposal died in the Assembly where it was introduced.

Building contractor Robert W. Wilson began a struggle for a lottery in California which lasted more than a decade. In 1959 he found little support for his proposal. He tackled it again in 1962 and things were no better.

By 1964, however, the people of California began to show some interest. Wilson's plan promised to provide the state with $325 million in fresh revenue. The benefactor of this fiscal windfall was to be education.

More than 450,000 persons signed the petition and the proposal for a constitutional amendment was put on the ballot. Voters rejected it by a 3-2 margin.

Wilson was back in 1968 for his fourth attempt. This time he called it the California Tax Reduction Lottery. It never got on the ballot and Wilson apparently has backed off.

Last Spring two Los Angeles Democrats, Assemblyman Leon Ralph and Sen. Mervyn Dymally authored bills proposing a state-controlled lottery.

Ralph managed to keep his proposal alive for a time. It went to the Constitutional Amendments Committee and reached the floor of the Assembly on April 25 where it fell 13 votes short of the two-thirds majority required for passage. Ralph managed to bring the measure back for another Assembly vote a month later and it was again defeated.

Opponents of the lottery claim the revenues it produces would come from the already hard-pressed low income groups. Churches oppose it on moral grounds and gamblers in Nevada, California and elsewhere are against it because they fear the competition.

The major appeal of a lottery to some public officials remains the promise of painless sources of new revenues. Increasing demands on state revenues combined with a reluctance by governments to raise taxes will undoubtedly keep the door ajar for those who want a lottery in California.

Late last month Sen. Dymally unveiled 1974's entry in the lottery contest. He announced formation of "The California Lottery Committee for Lower Taxes." Its purpose, like all of the others, is to put a proposal on the ballot in 1974 which would amend the constitution to permit the legislature to establish a lottery.

The lottery will raise $100 million for the state during the first year of operation, according to its supporters. That's not much, they say, when you consider that Californians spend an estimated $7 billion a year on illegal gambling. □ pool. Comes the fall and it is the football pool which takes over the limelight. The Saturday night card game is practically an institution, and some of the pots lost in poker games at overseas military reservations or aboard ship would buy a new 1972 automobile. When a ship returns to the U.S. from a tour of duty, there are few crewmen who are not more than a little interested in the precise second the anchor hits the water. Anchor pool is the name of that game. Military relief organizations regularly raise funds via the raffle; and many a soul participates in the gas station or supermarket lottery, without realizing they are just that. Those lotteries are allowed because "no purchase is necessary to participate."

The lottery is a controversial moral issue, perhaps because of its reliance on another higher power — the little understood law of probability.

A man may purchase a ticket as an act of faith, a bet on the future or simply as an expression of love in his everlasting courtship of hope. Whether he is fulfilled or betrayed, however, is determined by the same immutable law which guides the fate of a coin flip or the path of a falling star. □

CRISIS IN POWER

By JOHN W. ROE

For years power companies have been selling us on the idea of using more electricity in our homes. Now they are asking us to conserve energy.

Do they mean it? Or is this a way of selling the public on building more power plants?

Are they posing the specter of a power shortage to bring the public around to the idea that nuclear power plants might not be such a bad alternative?

A recent Southern California Edison newspaper ad warns:

"Unless Edison is permitted to build additional power plants and transmission lines, it may become necessary to blackout blocks of customers on a rotational basis within two or three years."

Blackout Blackmail?

Build more plants or do without electricity?

The ad is aimed at winning public support for nuclear power plants like the one at San Onofre near San Clemente.

Conservationists claim power companies are trying to convince people that nuclear power is non-polluting, completely safe and the only answer to the problem of satisfying increasing demands for power.

Yet, according to Dr. Robert W. Rex, director of the University of California at Riverside Geothermal Resources program, there is a better answer.

He says geothermal energy is a cheaper and safer way to solve the problem.

It is, he explains, natural steam produced deep within the earth and available in southern California as close as Imperial Valley.

Within the United States, Dr. Rex said, there is a tremendous supply of geothermal energy capable of generating electric power without polluting the air.

Is Underground Steam the Answer?

This steam power comes from heat which is the result of natural nuclear decay and frictional forces that have produced a molten liquid core, called magma within the earth's center. Under pressure, this basalt magma pushes its way toward the earth's surface through fractures in underlying rock structures, transferring heat greater than 1,000 degrees centigrade to the outer crust layers of rock. Water, trapped within outer porous rock structures, is heated to become hot ground water, providing steam — or geothermal energy.

The steam is released by drilling a well. Natural steam is then fed into low pressure steam turbines to produce electricity.

This type of electrical power source is already in operation at the Geysers steam field in Northern California.

Union Oil tapped a geothermal source in Imperial Valley which reached temperatures approximating 700 degrees Fahrenheit. Dr. Donald White of the U.S. Geological Survey estimated that there are 20 hot water flows to every one of steam — in other words, a pressurized reservoir of water that once tapped releases the pressure on superheated water causing it to flash into steam and shoot upward to the surface.

An abundance of hot water fields appears in Imperial Valley, the eleven Western states and in Mexico.

In Cerro Prieto, Mexico, a geothermal power station turns out electricity and its development may power northern Sonora and northern Baja California.

A U.S. Geological Survey done in eastern Oregon, California and Nevada indicates that tens of thousands of square miles have geothermal potential. Other known geothermal fields appear in Texas, Louisiana, West Virginia, Maryland, the Appalachians, the Ozarks, and in Hawaii and Alaska.

In Imperial Valley, the earth's crust is shallow and estimated to be 10 to 20 miles deep. At the bottom of this crust is a granite base layer and above it lies a layer of porous, water-soaked earth about four miles thick. This wet layer is constantly being heated from below. It is converted into a pressure boiler by a dense layer of clay at the top which seals in the heat and keeps the water at a high temperature. Properly controlled, this energy could supply most of the power needs of California for years to come.

Why then is this extensive source of electrical power not being developed to its fullest potential?

The answers are many.

To date, the United States has spent little time and money developing geothermal production. Southern California Edison Co. and Geothermal Resources International, Inc. together with Getty Oil Co. drilled some test wells on the shores of Mono Lake on the eastern slope of the Sierra in 1971 and Pacific Gas and Electric Co. of San Francisco bought steam from the Big Geysers project.

In May the Atomic Energy Licensing Commission, at a licensing hearing for a nuclear reactor at Canyon Diablo, near Morro Bay, subpoenaed Dr. Rex to testify on geothermal power sources. He said the project at Big Geysers was capable of producing enough electricity to meet the needs of all of Northern California for the next 30 years.

Although Dr. Rex said the AEC is becoming increasingly interested in geothermal power, it appears the biggest stumbling block is the U. S. Government itself. Most geothermal reserves are located on federal land.

Power companies are reluctant to spend money for exploration and development of geothermal energy, taking the position that their business is generating and distributing electrical power, not developing a natural resource. So far, only companies like Union Oil and Signal Oil and a late comer, Getty Oil, have attempted to develop geothermal power.

Signal Oil has six steam producing wells at the Geysers but not one buyer for the steam.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. has a lease on steam from Union Oil's Geysers project that prohibits the company from selling steam to any other utility.

Ten municipalities that belong to the Northern California Power Association want to buy steam from Signal Oil and Pacific Energy, but can't get transmission lines to transport the power north to their areas. PG&E controls the transmission lines. The Bureau of Reclamation has a federal transmission line nearby that could transport the power, but will not. PG&E holds a veto right to prohibit use of these lines by any other utility within the PG&E monopoly area.

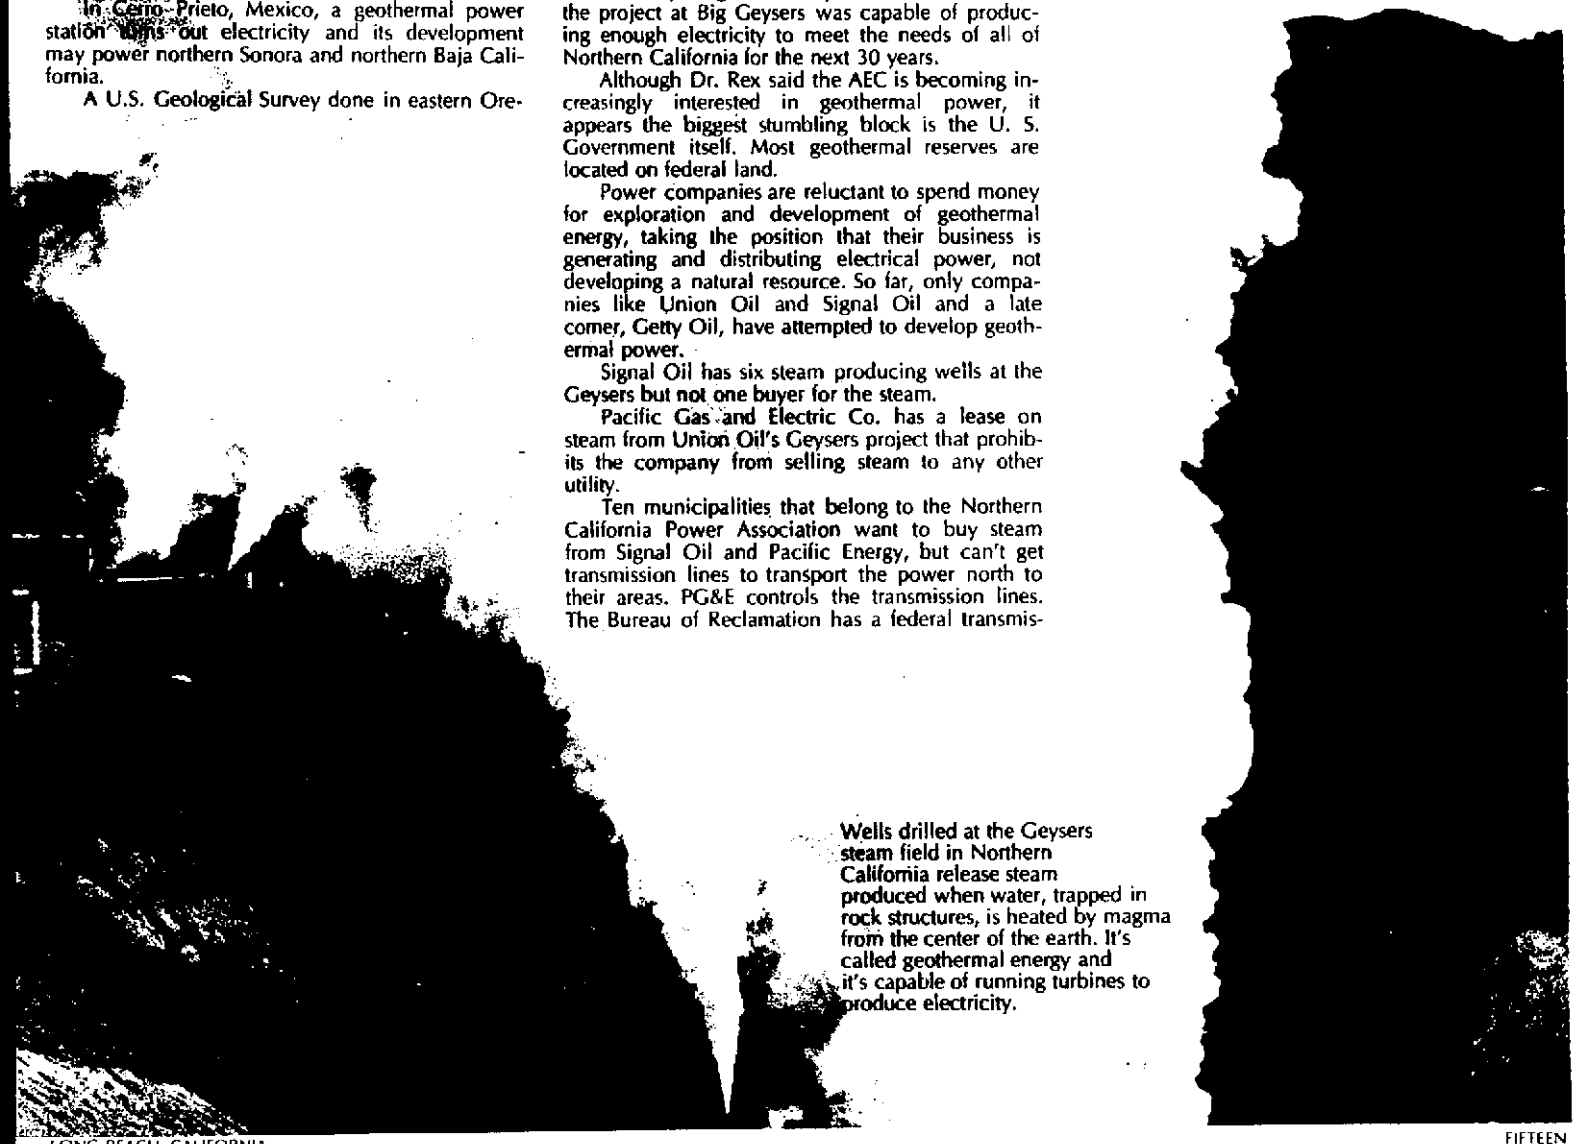

The use of geothermal energy as a power source is overdue for a major investigation. It is a clean fuel and could be produced for costs ranging from $140 to $180 per kilowatt. Compare this to $500 to $600 per kilowatt for nuclear power plants, Dr. Rex pointed out.

Fossil fuel sources of natural gas, oil and coal, all pollute and the supply of each is limited. Nuclear power plants have been generating electricity around the world for approximately 16 years. There are about 21 nuclear installations in operation in the United States and at least 50 more under construction.

But even nuclear fission plants face a dwindling supply of uranium. It is estimated that the present supplies will last between 20 and 25 years. They are clean, quiet and efficient, but there have been accidents. So far, only minor accidents.

There is no power shortage today in California and there doesn't appear there will be a major power shortage for about three years, but it takes three to five years to build a power plant.

What kind of plants, according to Dr. Rex, will largely be up to the public which could force the power companies to take a second look at geothermal sources. □

Wells drilled at the Geysers steam field in Northern California release steam produced when water, trapped in rock structures, is heated by magma from the center of the earth. It's called geothermal energy and it's capable of running turbines to produce electricity.

Scandinavia

Paradise for a Price

With all the Americans of Scandinavian descent, you wouldn't think there'd be many Scandinavians left in Scandinavia.

But there are, we discovered on our vacation trip to Northern Europe, enough of them so there are housing shortages in Copenhagen, Oslo and Stockholm, though high rise apartments are mushrooming in the suburbs, one of the ways in which Scandinavia is not all that exotically different from the U.S.A. In other, more subtle ways, it is a quite different part of the world.

Nor are the Scandinavian countries alike, you discover, even though you spend (and spend, and spend, and spend) kroners in Denmark, Norway and Sweden, and "centrum" is downtown and "Ootgang" is the way out in all three. One of the few things Danes, Norwegians and Swedes enthusiastically agree on is that nobody can understand Finns.

How would one rate the countries for potential tourists?

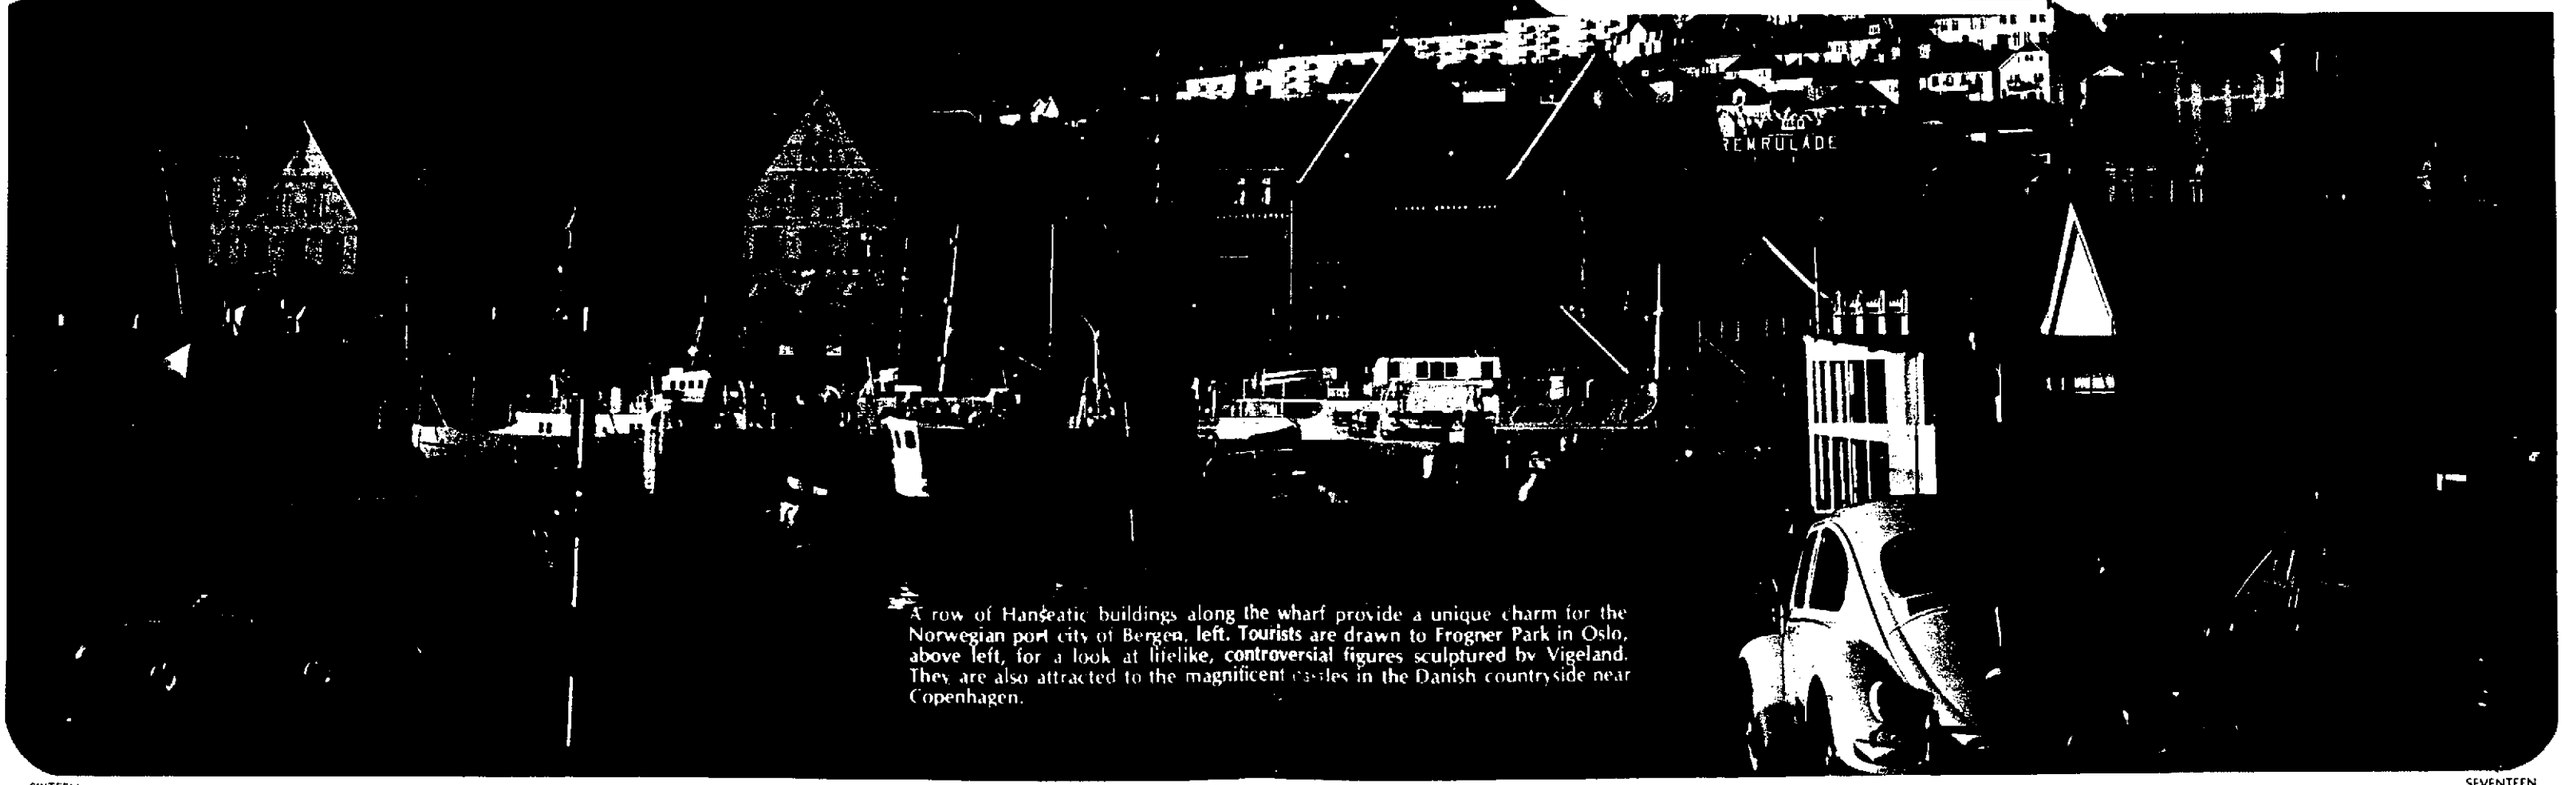

Norway, just as you expected, is the most spectacularly beautiful. When you leave picturesque old Bergen and make your way by bus, train and boat through fjord country to little Flam, which cannot be reached by auto, you have to be seeing some of the world's most serene and refreshing sights.

"What kind of dumb people would want to leave this to move to Brooklyn and St. Paul?" was the inevitable question put to a Norwegian.

A patient smile. "Norway is two countries. This one, and the one of the long, long winter."

There are some pretty long winters in Minnesota,, too, so the answer to migration also has to go into a time in history when more primitive farming and industry could not adequately sustain the population.

Don't think of Norway as only great scenery. Oslo, the metropolis, is an underrated city. Not as classically graceful as Stockholm, nor as lively and varied as Copenhagen, it has a pleasant low-key solidity that gets to you. And, for my money, it has the ninth wonder of the world (at least.) A place named Frogner Park has been turned over to the work of a genius named Vigeland. Life-pulsating figures in bronze, stone and grillwork are displayed where they must be, open to the sky. One astounded American couple had changed travel plans and was wandering in a happy daze through the sculpture park for the third straight day.

Two Oslo vignettes for whatever you make of them:

One night we were heading back via trolley to our hotel (a summer hotel run by the Bible school students.) An elderly man who seemed in bad shape was helped aboard the trolley. When he sagged helplessly and it became apparent that he was not drunk but had probably suffered some kind of seizure, the motorman stopped the trolley and got off. In exactly four minutes an ambulance glided alongside the trolley, two attendants came aboard with a stretcher, asked no questions, and the man was en route to a hospital.

We left Oslo for Sweden in a rented car. In the outskirts, with no gas stations or stores around, we came to a major fork where the signs were too much for us. We pulled over and pored over our map, which didn't help. A car which had passed us skidded to a halt in the drizzling rain, then backed up a couple of hundred feet, a tough maneuver, and two towheaded young Norwegians who didn't speak English state new York is like New York City. We enjoyed a day with mostly Swedish vacationers in a

Before leaving Norway, fellow gourmets, it bears mention that it was in a Norwegian restaurant we made our acquaintance with the delectable yellowish cloudberries, a Scandinavian treat of the first rank.

Rural, small town Sweden, wooded and lake-dotted, has a charm of its own. It's no more like Stockholm in life style and pace than upstate New York is like New York City. We enjoyed a day with mostly Swedish vacationers in a lake town named Mora, home of the artist Zorn, whose works are kept in the local museum.

Stockholm visually is regal and complex, with more than a little of the feel of Paris.

Speaking of things regal, as I was wheeling around Stockholm one afternoon on a bicycle graciously loaned me by a student-worker at our hotel, I saw waiting alone for a bus one of the many Swedish women who look amazingly like Ingrid Bergman. Being slightly lost anyhow, I steered over and in my best Bogie-Cary Grant manner said "Pardon me, I wonder if you could tell me the best way back to Hotel Jarum,.on Studentbacken."

In quite good English, and an impassive manner more like Garbo than Bergman, she told me exactly how to go. I followed her directions carefully. Soon the bicycle path ended and before I knew what was happening I was in a traffic maelstrom, pedaling for survival around a wild, free-for-all roundabout. When I escaped to a sidewalk, a young pedestrian directed me right back where I had just come from, and from the bus stop where I had asked directions, in the very opposite way I had been told! I'm convinced that the beautiful lady at the bus stop was an anti-American who blamed me, personally, for Vietnam. All too easy to believe in Stockholm, which abounds in graffiti proclaiming "U.S.A. Ut Ur Indokina!"

So much for Ingrid.

Unlike the "Big 3" cities, Helsinki, where there is a noticeable drop in American tourists, does not leave you with the feeling that you could easily spend another week or more browsing around. It is worth a couple of days, part of which should go to the self-contained new suburban city of Tapiola, a lovely piece of planning and execution any American housing official could study with profit.

Best laugh in Helsinki: there's a huge, overdominant new white high rise, a hospital, and the Finns impishly call it "Hilton Hotel." Helsinki is one of the few large European cities without a Hilton.

We got a feel of the brooding beauty of Finland's lake and forest country through a train trip to Hameenlinna, birthplace of composer Sibelius. Nearby, at reasonable rates, would you believe a sparkling modern resort complete with golf, tennis, saunas, riding, lake sports, dancing and dining. In what seems typical of the country—and all Scandinavia—a half mile away a favored lakeside area has been set aside for free use by campers.

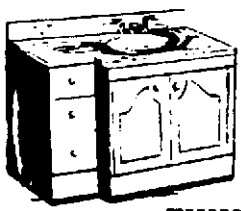

But when the last friend has suffered through the color slides, and someone asks the hypothetical question: which one of the countries you saw would you rather live in?—the answer, with absolutely no reflection on Norway, Sweden and Finland, would be Denmark. Specifically, Copenhagen.

Without the great timber forests, mountains and natural resources of their neighbors, Danes seem to have a relish for living, a sense of the absurd, and a perhaps rare mixture in 1972 of deep social concern and civilized tolerance of individuality.

In the castle at Elsinore, a non-melancholy Dane guiding Americans around was asked about a heroic war painting which showed a Danish warrior triumphantly running his spear through a Swede as their boats met, while other Swedes toppled into the drink.

"In real history," he observed, "the Swedes usually beat the hell out of us. But we have

Denture Invention

For People With "Uppers" and "Lowers"

For the first time, science now offers a unique plastic cream that holds dentures—both "uppers" and "lowers"—as they've never been held before. It forms an elastic membrane that helps hold your dentures to the natural tissues of your mouth.

It's FIXODENT®—a revolutionary discovery for daily home use. So different it's protected by U. S. Patent #3,003,988.

FIXODENT not only holds dentures firmer, but it holds them more comfortably, too. It's so elastic you may bite harder, chew better, eat more naturally.

The special pencil-point dispenser lets you put FIXODENT exactly where it's needed. Resists oozing over and gagging.

Just one application may last for hours. Dentures that fit are essential to health. See your dentist regularly. Get easy-to-use FIXODENT Denture Adhesive Cream at all drug counters.

great artists." Another Dane later philosophically added: "We can't beat them in football (soccer) either. Every year we think, maybe this time, and after a few minutes it's Sweden 3, Denmark 0."

What did we like about Copenhagen? A flavor. The miles-long walking street cutting right through the heart of town. Abundant, handsome neighborhood parks, some with original puppet theaters for children. The magical Tivoli Gardens, right smack in the town "centrum," which we enjoyed on ordinary week nights along with an amazing number of complete Danish families taking in the amusements and rides, the performances and gardens, an operetta on the water, and finally, an enthusiastic packed audience for a classical concert. Delightful little lunches in outdoor cafe settings (try frikadella, a pork roll delicacy, and special anchovies with a raw egg.) One night we lucked into a popular-priced little cafe not on any tourist lists, where artists show their work and the world's greatest mushroom soup is slurped in time with a rollicking piano player.

One shouldn't draw weighty social conclusions from a brief visit, but it is interesting to hear Danes say that nobody in their country need fear having their hard - earned savings wiped out by medical or dental work, illness, operations or hospitalization. A nominal sum which sounds ridiculous to American ears guarantees Danes the best medical, dental and hospital care. "We don't think people should live in fear of sickness, or an operation, or whatever," a Dane explained. "The money it takes to set this up properly is spent. Then we draw a line and see what is left and what else must be done." In brief, priority No. 1. Could it be as good a priority as collecting rocks on the moon?

Some such system, we were told, is in effect in all Scandinavia.

They grumble, even as you and I, about high

SWOLLEN HEMORRHOIDS?

In many cases Nupercainal aids in reducing inflammation—allows the natural healing process to function.

Of the leading hemorrhoid preparations, Nupercainal® and only Nupercainal contains a unique combination of lubricants plus Dibucaine, a proven topical anesthetic which in many cases provides effective temporary relief of hemorrhoid pain and itch.

Nupercainal also helps reduce irritation of troubled hemorrhoidal tissues, aids in reducing inflammation, and allows the natural healing process to function with a unique combination of ingredients that helps make bowel movements more comfortable.

For temporary relief in many cases of the pain, itch, and throb associated with hemorrhoids, use Nupercainal Ointment or Suppositories. They work fast and correctly to make you feel better. No prescription needed.

What's Your Favorite Question, David Cassidy?

By JEAN SANDERS

David Cassidy.

Just saying the name gives heart palpitations to teeny-boppers and flippy-skirted teenagers.

If their parents don't know who he is, they soon learn when they stumble over stacks of Cassidy and Partridge Family fan magazines avidly devoured by their daughter and friends clad in Cassidy T-shirts as David belts out "I Think I Love You" on the stereo.

And woe to the family with ideas of any other Friday night TV show when it's Partridge Family time. Never underestimate the screaming tantrums of a thwarted teeny-bopper. She'd rather shear her long straight hair to the scalp than give up an evening with Keith Partridge.

Two fifth graders from Orange County experienced the thrill of their young lives when they had an opportunity to visit the Burbank studio where The Partridge Family shoots its series.

After digesting all that has ever been written about David, Melanie Sanders and Linda Keasberry compiled more questions to ask him.

A strange new world unfolds on entering the Burbank studio. On a short, winding street the girls recognize the homey yellow and white Partridge home in a pleasant, but fake, neighborhood. Substantial enough from the front, the row of homes is braced by exposed 2x4s in the rear.

The street curves to reveal English three-story buildings, a small town set and a western set before ending at a huge windowless green sound stage housing Partridge Family interior sets.

Parked before a modest sign, "Private Parking — David Cassidy," is a white low-slung Corvette. Nearby is the wild geometrically painted Partridge Family bus. The girls flip, and flip again when they spy a tan bungalow, dressing rooms for David, Shirley Jones and Dave Madden (the series' Reuben Kincaid), each with a partridge painted above the name.

Clustered nearby are trailers bearing names of other Partridges — Susan Dey, Danny Bonaduce, Brian Forster and Suzanne Crough.

It is lunch break on the set, and the two visitors are excited to recognize Danny, Suzanne and Brian playing and bicycling around the nearby western set. Fresh from the morning's shooting, Danny and Brian are in pajamas.

Gradually the stars, directors, cameramen and technicians drift back into the immense darkened sound stage.

We pull the heavy door and enter, too. Focusing attention on a brightly lighted set with towel racks, weighing scales and shag rug, the girls see David in the distance.

Suddenly they whisper in awe, mingled with terror, "Here he comes!"

David is wearing bedroom slippers and a blue terry robe over pajamas, his wardrobe for most of the day's scenes. He walks like a young man in a hurry, with long strides, his shoulders slightly crescented as though to get there faster.

His shag hair style almost hides naturally thick brows and accents steady hazel eyes.

He takes the girls by surprise with a quick "Hi there" and a handshake. Friendly, fast talking, he does a little interviewing himself.

"How old are you ladies?"

(Shyly) "Eleven."

"Where do you go to school? Killybrooke? Oh, in Costa Mesa, huh?"

David climbs onto Shirley Jones' tall director's chair rather than his own, which

Melanie claims. Linda pulls Danny's over. Everyone uses everyone else's gold canvas chair.

David hunches forward, listening for the questions:

How old were you when you first got into television acting?

"Nineteen."

How do you feel having a girl stand-in?

"Uh, it doesn't make me feel one way or another. She's a nice lady."

(Jan Freeman, 24, is slender like David, with the same wide-set eyes, the same hair style. They could be twins. She is crocheting and quietly talking with a friend on the set while waiting to be called.)

Do some of the people on the street mistake you for Jan Freeman?

"No! (Laughs, emphasizes again) No. (Mimics a fan) 'Hey aren't you Jan Freeman?'"

Have you ever dated your stand-in?

"No."

Have you ever had a boy stand-in?

"Yeah, the first year I had a male stand-in, but he was an adult, like 40 or 45 years old. A stand-in doesn't mean he has to look like you or anything like that. A photo double looks like you. Like Johnny Albright, stand-in for Dave Madden, is a little smaller than I am and is built like I am, but he's Dave's stand-in and Dave is big and tall. Jan is my photo double and my stand-in. She's a stunt lady too. Long shots of me falling off a horse, for instance — that's really Jan."

Who designs the clothes you wear on The Partridge Family?

"They're just bought at stores in Los Angeles and Hollywood. A wardrobe person is responsible. He knows what I'm comfortable in."

Does someone design them for your concerts?

"Not any longer. At one time there was a fellow who did, but all those things were stolen from me a few months ago. I was debating whether to stop wearing them. I felt almost out of place in them and almost like I'd outgrown them. I now just wear things made by like people in leather shops, different places. There's no one person who designs them."

Do you watch The Partridge Family on Friday nights?

"Not very often. I'd like to. But I am usually traveling or recording or busy. When I get an opportunity, I do."

(David is on the go several weekends each month giving concerts. He was performing in England for five days in September.)

On your birthday, what do you like to get from fans, your close friends and parents? (He was 22 last April 12.)

"Um ... I don't really have any preferences. Just Happy Birthday is really enough. I don't really have any gifts I'm looking forward to receiving or anything like that."

Now that you have become a star, do you think your father envies you or is proud of you?

"I don't think he envies me. I have not spoken with him in a long time. I don't know if he's proud of me. I'd like to think so. But I really don't know."

What does your real mother think of Shirley Jones?

(Guardedly) "She . . . likes her. They like each other."

When do you visit your stepbrothers?

"Rarely. When do I visit myself?!"

Do your stepbrothers like your record album?

"Yes. As far as I could tell. The last time I was over there they were playing it."

Are you going to do a second solo album?

"Yes, it's done. It was released last month."

Do you ever have any of The Partridges over to your house for dinner or lunch?

"I can't recall ever having any of them over, no. I've had dinner at Shirley's a few times. But I don't cook. We don't get together in between times."

What do you do in your free time on the set and at your house?

"On the set I sit and talk to people. I try to catch a few winks every now and then. There's not really a lot of time. You can't leave, really. You don't have time to get into something. It's almost not worth it. At home I play my guitar a lot and I sing. Play with the dog. I read sometimes, like everyone else does, I guess. It is nice being in my own house. I lie out by the pool a lot, too, when I get an opportunity and when it's warm."

Do you have a bodyguard?

"I have had. And on occasions I do have. There was a period when I had one with me for about a month all the time, and I have one with me occasionally still when my manager thinks it's necessary. I personally don't like it, though."

Do you play any other instruments besides the guitar and drums?

"I write sometimes for the piano, but I'm not a piano player, y'know? I know chords and things like that. But I'm not an accomplished pianist."

Have you ever met Donny Osmond or Michael Jackson?

"Sure."

What do you think of Donny Osmond's singing?

"I think he sings fairly well."

And Michael Jackson?

"I think he sings VERY well."

How do you like Bobby Sherman now?

"I like him the same as I liked him before. I haven't seen him in six months. He's growing a mustache, I hear. He's trying for straight dramatic roles now. Y'know, he never was a singer, and I think he's admitted that. I think he's now doing what he wants to do, and that's act."

(Fan magazines, prone to exaggeration and distortion, for months kindled a supposed hot rivalry between the two singers.)

When you appear in big foldout pictures in magazines, do you wear makeup?

"Each one is different. If they shoot me on the set, yes, because I wear makeup here. If they shoot me at home, no."

Can you go anywhere without being recognized?

"Yeah, there are places. Most of the places I go — and I don't go out too often — but when I do, I do get recognized. I know a couple of small restaurants where they know who I am, but they don't usually really bother me and it's usually very empty. They're small and very inconspicuous. Being recognized is definitely a restriction. It becomes a lot of harassment, like everybody's eyes in the whole room are sort of on you and it's like you're performing. It's very difficult to deal with that."

When you were younger, did you like to swim?

"Yes. I still do."

What age were you when you started scuba diving?

"Nineteen."

When did you first go to Hawaii?

"When I was 12. I went again this summer for a couple days. There's a refuge I like, a place where lots of other rock 'n roll stars go."

When you give a concert, who picks out where it will be?

"Agents and promoters make offers and you just decide what area it will be."

Do you have something to say about where it will be?

"Absolutely. Yes."

Do you give both afternoon and evening performances?

"Yes, both. Usually on Sundays I give matinees so I can be back in Los Angeles like before two or three in the morning."

Are your concerts the same in each city?

"I change it all the time. I'm always adding new material, taking out old and trying new things. I try experimenting to see the reaction. The acoustics on stage and the acoustics in an auditorium are completely different. Completely different. I have monitors on stage so I can hear every word, but I don't know if the audience can. I've given a lot of concerts recently where the enthusiasm has been there, but they listen. During soft quiet songs they are quieter."

Do you still have to dash for the exits the minute a concert is over so your fans don't mob you?

"Absolutely. More so now. If anything, it's gotten worse."

Although dying to ask, the girls agreed not to question David about girl friends, a subject much overdone in the fan publications.

Georgette Deveney, one of The Partridge Family publicists, tells us, "David is so busy, his schedule is so jammed, he just doesn't have time for girls. Fans and magazines keep trying to make a big thing of David and Susan Dey. They're just friends. They do crack each other up a lot when they're working together. When they deliver lines to each other, they have to look over each other's heads or they start to laugh. But they don't date."

Several times during the questions David is called back to the set for a brief scene, which the girls watch. They're fascinated to discover that mere feet away from the actors, just out of camera range, a dozen men are going about their jobs as director, cameraman, sound technician, carpenters, lighting experts, prop and makeup men.

When not on camera, Shirley Jones chats with friends. Danny Bonaduce practices with a bull whip. Suzanne Crough quaffs a soft drink, walks about with the paper cup between her teeth. Brian Forster and Dave Madden obligingly scribble their autographs.

Temperament, a characteristic associated with stardom, is lacking on the set. During the six-hour visit, the mood is business-like but friendly and cooperative. Georgette tells us, "It's always like this. It's really due to Shirley. She's a very relaxed person. Everyone else just takes their cue from her."

Apparently David does too. The young interviewers watch him rehearse several scenes and witness the final take. It almost seems that their idol has shifted in their minds from an unattainable high pedestal to another — lofty but accessible. Rather than dealing in flibbertigibbet superlatives about him afterwards, they agreed, "Gee, he's a nice person." □

Most vinegars are harsh and bitter. That's why we make Regina® from wine.

Here's 10¢. Taste the difference wine makes.

Your vinegar is probably made from corn mash or cider. Regina is made from 100% California wine grapes. So instead of a harsh, tart-tasting salad like you may be getting, Regina® Wine Vinegar gives you smooth, mellow salads every time. taxes, yet continue to vote in the same philosophy. "I get the same break on medical care," shrugged our informant, "and if I ever get old enough I'll get the same break our seniors get. It's a modest life for them on pension, but not an undignified one."

Denmark did a 180-degree turn on the elderly some years ago. "We first thought it was ideal to put older people in special homes together," our informant said. "We don't think that way any more. They feel put away. Monday Hansen dies, Tuesday Jensen dies, who dies Wednesday? Now we aim to have older people go on living where they have spent most of their lives. Municipalities must make available rooms for them, at a sum like $20 a month at most.

"OK, some may come to where they can't help themselves in some ways. There are helpers who make the rounds once in a while, to do the cleaning, shopping, fixing, whatever. It is not humiliating, it is a nice personal contact in fact, and it is less expensive that way for all of us. Now if they become invalid, senile and want to go to a home, they are always able to." A visit to one such home bore out that they are cheerful places with an emphasis on self-actualizing hobbies and activities. We bought some handsome place mats woven by folks who were well into their 80s.

Had a "visiting fireman" look at Denmark's largest newspaper, Berlingske Tidende, which started in 1749 in case you think the I.P.T has been around a long time. The sidewalk outside the huge building is lined with employees' bicycles, conservationists will be pleased to hear. Managing editor Laust Jensen described the paper as conservative and independent. "We are very understanding of the United States and its position even though some things about Vietnam may be criticized," he said. The paper subscribes, as does this one, to the New York Times service for supplemental features and columns. Its American correspondents, the editor said, expect President Nixon will be re-elected.

Asked if there was a fight with television for the advertising dollar, as here, he smiled. "None at all. Our television is run by the government, with no commercials." (War and Peace with no commercials? Impossible.)

Another Dane speaking of the TV programs later said there are some arguments on news presentation. "If there's something on Vietnam, conservatives complain that the communists have taken over our television. If there's something on Czechoslovakia, the left complains the capitalists are running television." He grinned. "If everyone complains, it can't be bad."

In none of the Scandinavian cities did we see anything that Americans would call slums, and we looked. Life seems good, though for a realistic evaluation, we were told it takes two people working in a family to live really well. (Did someone say it takes that these days in California?) Some 55 per cent of Danish women work.

And now to important matters. How do the Scandinavian countries rank on beer? It's good old Denmark in a romp. (How just and proper it seemed when a foaming stein of Carlsberg or Tuborg cost a couple of kroner less than a Pepsi!) Finland is a strong surprise second with some real good brews, followed distantly by Norway, then Sweden.

Finally, let's get one thing clear. Scandinavia is expensive. It is not your Greece, Spain, Portugal, Yugoslavia et al on prices. In fact, I'm seriously considering writing a book entitled "Scandinavia on $5 an hour." □

GOURMET GUIDE by Tedd Thomey

HARRY COSSAREK
A Wondrous Batter

Like most of us, Harry Cossarek has had ideas from time to time which fizzled. But he knows that all a man really needs for a fruitful life is one good idea, properly developed.

Harry's good idea came along about 43 years ago. That's when he decided to open a small cafe in North Long Beach which would serve halibut prepared according to a Scottish recipe which had been in his family for countless decades. Harry was born in Stirling, Scotland, not far from Glasgow, where the people love fish and have a talent for preparing it in delectable ways.

So, in 1929, Harry and his wife Adele opened the Prince of Whales, 6790 Long Beach Blvd. Their speciality was deep-fried halibut cooked in the freshest possible shortening, using a wondrous batter made from the family recipe. They charged 25 cents for a serving, including delightful, fresh French fries.

People loved it. The halibut and potatoes were so delectable that during the Depression — when other businesses failed by the thousands — the Prince of Whales became more and more popular and more and more successful.

Today the restaurant, expanded many times to accommodate the throngs, is a large place, designed in a colorful Scottish motif. It is open from 11:30 a.m. to 8:45 p.m. on week days and until 8:15 p.m. on Sundays and holidays; closed Mondays. The halibut and French fries are still prepared as they were 43 years ago, but the kitchen is much larger and filled with immaculate stainless steel equipment. The shortening is changed so frequently that the halibut and fries are always amazingly fresh-tasting.

The halibut, which comes from Prince Rupert, Canada, is a mild white fish which never tastes or smells fishy. The dinner is $3.25, but worth more because the Cossareks offer such huge servings. Each portion of halibut weighs 10 to 11 ounces. It's so large that a big platter is needed to hold it all. The accompaniments are a heap of those crisp fries, superlative Scottish coleslaw, hot buttered garden peas and plenty of bread and butter.

Aided by their son Dan and other members of their family, the Cossareks limit their menu to three entrees. The other two are beautiful jumbo white shrimp from the Sea of Cortez, $3.50, and tender baby lobster tails, $5.95. Also featured are Scottish and U.S. beers, wines and wine cocktails.

HOW DO YOU judge a restaurant? In recent years, a seating system adopted by some establishments provides us with a new way of evaluating the quality of their cuisine and service.

This is the "no reservations by phone" policy adopted by many restaurants, new and old. These restaurants, such as Kam's house of oriental delicacies in Santa Ana, are so popular that their managements feel that customers already on the premises should have preference for tables. They will not accept phone reservations except for larger parties.

The system works well, particularly on weekends when the dining rooms are especially thronged. Kam's, 1421 E. 17th St., is so large and has so many tables that there is a brisk turnover. After giving their name to the hostess, the guests are kept waiting a minimum of time before being seated. Sometimes, there is no wait at all. Thanks to the efficiency of owner Kam Yee's system, there is never any "rushed" feeling in the dining room. Guests dine leisurely, enjoying each mouthful of lobster Cantonese or rumaki and each sip of their exotic tropical cocktails, such as the lapu or boo loo.

Generally, the restaurants using the "no reservations" system are among the best in town. Because of their immense popularity, their foods are fresher and their staffs work at top efficiency. Kam's is a perfect example of this. Everything seems to taste better than elsewhere and the service by gold-jacketed waiters seems to be smoother and better-timed.

Open every day from 11 a.m., Kam's is just east of Grand Avenue, between Tustin Avenue and Glassell Street, convenient from the Santa Ana, Garden Grove and Newport freeways. Luxuriously furnished in stunning Chinese colors and techniques, it offers a la carte specialities with steamed rice from $2.95 and multiple-dish Cantonese dinners, $3.25 to $5.95. Luncheons are $1.25 to $1.85.

One of the most popular complete dinners is the Happy Buddha, $4.95, offering such different delicacies as chicken cream mushroom soup, crab Rangoon, abalone with mushrooms, and fresh pineapple on mint as well as such standards as lobster Cantonese, fried shrimp, sweet and sour shrimp, shrimp-fried rice and other items. □

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Since 1965 more than 2.5 million Americans have been stationed in Southeast Asia. So, says the Medical Letter, U.S. physicians should be on the lookout for diseases not ordinarily seen in this country.

The medical publication says that the following are some of the disorders that doctors should look for:

Malaria: Mosquitoes have transmitted malaria to a number of civilians living near Fort Benning, Ga., and Fort Bragg, N.C., where large numbers of returnees from Southeast Asia are quartered.

Parasitic infections may persist in some returnees, and hookworm and tapeworm may be found.

Drug-resistant tuberculosis may turn up.

A disease called meliodosis sometimes shows up after a serviceman has returned to the United States.

Viral hepatitis is common among those who have been to Southeast Asia.

Still other diseases that may occur: dengue, cholera, encephalitis due to the chikungunya virus, scrub and murine typhus, leptospirosis, bubonic plague, Japanese B encephalitis.

A doctor's quick recall of a medical journal article is credited with saving a newborn baby's life.

When the baby's lungs collapsed, a doctor at Jefferson University Hospital in Philadelphia remembered reading about a new technique.

The technique, described by Dr. George A. Gregory of the University of California, is sometimes known as CPAP — continuous positive airway pressure.

The Jefferson doctor inserted a tube in the infant's throat and applied a steady stream of moist warm air under constant pressure. The technique kept the baby's lungs expanded.

Unlike airway pressure techniques which employ mechanical devices to perform the breathing function, continuous positive airway pressure helps the patient to breathe on his own.

The Jefferson University doctor commented: "We didn't know what the outcome would be when we decided to try this, but we knew for sure what would happen if we didn't."

The happy ending: Baby is now at home enjoying good health, according to Pediatric Herald, a medical newspaper.

Prevention of coronary artery disease should atart in infancy, says Dr. Forrest H. Adams, a past president of the American College of Cardiology.

Dr. Adams, chairman of the division of pediatric cardiology at UCLA school of medicine, notes that a newborn baby's diet may establish certain processes that could be difficult to alter. For example, there's evidence that diet in early childhood may influence the number and size of fat cells in the body. And, researchers claim, once fat cells are formed at this age, they never disappear.

Some researchers maintain that blood cholesterol levels can be significantly altered in children whose diets are designed to reduce cholesterol content.

High priority should be given to prevention of childhood obesity and tobacco smoking, Dr. Adams says.

Children should eat more lean meat and fewer snack-type carbohydrates. In addition, better physical education programs are needed for the young, the doctor says.

Most airline hijackers are psychotic persons — or at least "borderline" types — and thus must be kept as calm as possible if violence is to be avoided, a Canadian psychiatrist says.

Maj. W. J. McArthur of the Defence and Civil Institute of Environmental Medicine, Downsview, Ontario, Canada, discussed the skyjacking problem at a meeting of the Aerospace Medical Association.

Hijack prevention must be accomplished on the ground, Dr. McArthur contends. For once a plane is aloft, attempts to restrain the hijacker can only make him violent, he says. A hijacker, it must be remembered, is in a state of "emotional crisis," the doctor says.

The doctor says further:

"When the hijacker's anxiety is high, information is difficult to retain and may be misunderstood. Therefore, it may be necessary to be repetitious without revealing impatience. Statements should indicate what is or is not possible, and what alternatives are available."

The report is in U.S. Medicine, a newspaper for physicians.

Youngsters grow up believing that drugs can provide the answers to most of life's problems, says a college health authority.

One reason: Television, says Dr. Donald L. Cooper, director of Oklahoma State University Hospital and Clinic, Stillwater.

Part of the blame for an "almost total preoccupation with drugs" may be attributed to "many of us in the older generation," Dr. Cooper adds. Society has created a drug culture.

As for the influence of TV, Dr. Cooper comments:

"By the time our children have reached the age of 20 years, if it estimated they have watched approximately 15,000 hours of television.

"During this time they will have seen numerous commercials telling them that drugs can stop their headaches, relieve their joint pains, calm their stomach, improve their bowel function, quiet their nerves, clear their complexions and improve their ability to perform work."

Q. I see that Jackie Onassis is sending her daughter Caroline to Concord Academy in Concord, Mass. My question: How much does it cost?—Claire Javier, Easton, Md.

A. Tuition, room and board at Concord Academy is $4100 per year.

CAROLINE KENNEDY (L.) AND FRIEND AT SCHOOL

Q. Can it possibly be that Meyer Lansky, the foremost racketeer and gambler of our time, is a graduate of West Point? That's what I have been told. Is it the truth?—Miriam Cohen, Miami Beach, Fla.

A. It is not. You are mistaking Meyer with his son Paul, a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, Class of 1954, now a captain in the Air Force Reserve.

Q. Sharon Tate, who was murdered by the Manson gang, had a very pretty sister named Debbie. Is she married to Bernie Cornfeld, the playboy?—Ann Vincente, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Debbie Tate, Sharon's youngest sister, is a frequent visitor at Grayhill, the Tudor-style Beverly Hills mansion which Cornfeld bought from actor George Hamilton for $350,000. Generally Cornfeld has from three to eight girls to keep him company. Debbie Tate is one of them. She claims to have been a witch when she lived in England. "I knew," she says, "that Sharon was going to get murdered. I dreamed about it a month before and so did my mother."

Q. I read recently that Doubleday, the publisher, has found Martin Bormann, Hitler's deputy in Paraguay, and is printing his memoirs. Is Bormann alive? Has Doubleday found him?—L. Robinsky, Miami Beach, Fla.

A. Doubleday says it has a book on Martin Bormann in the works. "It is not a book of memoirs," declares Heather Scott, a Doubleday spokeswoman. "And we have not found Bormann nor do we know that he's alive."

Q. I do not understand the relationship between Ronald Reagan, a right-wing Republican, and Frank Sinatra, a left-wing Democrat. Can you explain? - Peter di Santis, Tenafly, N.J.

A. Sinatra is a political independent who supports candidates of his own choice. In 1970, for example, he contributed $25,000 to Ronald Reagan's gubernatorial campaign in California, $5000 to Nelson Rockefeller's in New York, $1500 to Congressman Seymour Halpern's campaign in New York. In addition to supporting such Republicans, Sinatra contributed $500 to Kenny O'Donnell's gubernatorial race in Massachusetts, $500 to Susan Marx's Congressional race (she is the widow of Harpo Marx and lives in Palm Springs, Calif.), $1500 to Edmund Brown Jr. who ran successfully for secretary of state in California, and $2000 to Wilson Riles who won as California superintendent of public instruction.

FRANK SINATRA AND GOVERNOR RONALD REAGAN

Q. Is it true that Lee Radziwill, the sister of Jackie Onassis, is dumping her husband for agent Peter Shaw?—R.T., Mt. Vernon, N.Y.

A. Peter Shaw is married to actress Angela Lansbury. Lee Radziwill, 39, is still married to Prince Stanislas Radziwill, 58. It is equally true that she and Peter Shaw are good friends. It is highly doubtful, however, that Lee would divorce Radziwill and Shaw would divorce Angela Lansbury at this time. Friendship is one thing. Marriage is another . . . even among the jet-set.

SOPHIA LOREN AND CARY GRANT IN "HOUSEBOAT"

Q. Has Cary Grant retired from films? Is it a fact that although he has been married four times, Sophia Loren, the great love of his life, would not marry him? What is Cary doing now?—Leola White, Charleston, S.C.

A. Cary Grant (real name Archibald Leach) has been married to Virginia Cherrill, Barbara Hutton, Betsy Drake, and Dyan Cannon. He was born in Bristol, England on January 18, 1904. He fell in love with Sophia Loren when they filmed together in Houseboat. She refused his marriage proposals because she was in love with producer Carlo Ponti whom she later married. Grant is semi-retired from films, works as a director of Western Airlines, Fabergé, the perfume and film production company, and Shannonside Holdings, Ltd., a company which is developing a retirement and resort community in County Clare, Ireland.

Q. Where is Henry R. Luce of Time-Life fame buried - in China where he was born?—Louis Allen, Springfield, Mass.

A. Luce is buried in South Carolina, in Mepkin, his 7200-acre estate.

Q. What sort of man is Charles Colson, special counsel to President Nixon? Is he really a ruthless so-and-so in charge of the department of dirty tricks?—O.T., Washington, D.C.

A. In a memorandum dated August 28, 1972, which The Washington Post published in full, Colson advised his staff, "Just so you understand me, let me point out that the statement in last week's UPI story that I was once reported to have said that 'I would walk over my grandmother if necessary,' is absolutely accurate."

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim:

Can He Restore U.S. Confidence in the

by George Michaelson

Kurt Waldheim in front of U.N. Building. He feels it is vital to get across to American people what the U.N. has accomplished and that it is "essential for world peace."

UNITED NATIONS, NEW YORK.

"The public in the United States is disappointed by the achievements of the United Nations. They look around the world and see all the conflicts and wars—in Vietnam, in the Middle East, in Northern Ireland, in India and Pakistan—and they ask, why can't the U.N. solve them? And if they can't solve them, all of them, they say, who needs the U.N.?"

Thus did U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim express to PARADE his view of the current American attitude towards the U.N. His remarks, coming on the eve of the U.N.'s 27th birthday (Tuesday, Oct. 24), are a reminder that U.S.-U.N. relations are, as one U.S. diplomat put it, "at a stinking all-time low." They are also a reminder that Secretary General Waldheim, the world's No. 1 civil servant, intends to do something about it—namely, to take his case to the American people.

"What Americans sometimes forget," he added, "is that since the U.N. was created in San Francisco in 1945, it has accomplished a great deal, not only in preventing some conflicts from breaking out (which means the public never heard about them), and resolving certain conflicts once they did break out, but also we have done some very important things in the field of social and economic development throughout the world. And we have done these things with not so much money: the American citizen pays each year about the price of a package of cigarettes to support the U.N. budget—not so much, is it? Personally, I believe that if the American people were more aware of this, there would be far greater appreciation here for the U.N. We wouldn't be having quite the same criticism, as we are now receiving in this country."

Early U.S. help

No doubt, part of Mr. Waldheim's desire to make his case public here, is the fact that back in 1945 no country supported the newly-founded U.N. more than did the United States. It was Secretary of State Cordell Hull and President Franklin D. Roosevelt who originally pushed for the idea. It was an American, John D. Rockefeller Jr., who put up the $8.5 million to buy the land in New York City for the U.N. headquarters. And it was an American government interest-free loan of $65 million that finally made construction of the 38-story headquarters possible.

"We were enthusiastic," recalls one American expert, "in part because we genuinely hoped that such an international organization including all the Big Powers—you remember, we had never joined the League of Nations—could bring about world peace. It was just after World War II, and we sincerely hoped, as the U.N. charter said, 'to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war.'

"But to be completely truthful, we were also enthusiastic because we knew that, since more than two-thirds of the members were pro-Western, we could use the U.N. for our advantage. And indeed, for the first 10 or 15 years we did. The U.N. went along with us and sent troops to Korea. And again, in the early '60's in the Congo, we were far more able to get the U.N. to do our bidding than was the Soviet Union. So, not surprisingly, those were good times for U.S.-U.N. relations. Those were the years we supported it wholeheartedly. It is only in the last few years, when we have obviously been unable to wield the kind of influence that we once did in the U.N., that we have begun to sour on it."

U.N. changes

With membership in the international organization having gradually grown from the original 51 charter members to 132—and with many of the new members from the underdeveloped Third World—America often finds itself nowadays at odds with U.N. majority opinion. This was never more painfully evident than last October when, against the U.S. government's fervent opposition, the Taiwan-China delegation was expelled as Communist China was admitted to the U.N. Since then, U.S. government officials have been openly critical of the U.N.—to the point where Congress is now about to pass legislation reducing the assessed U.S. contribution from 31.5 percent to 25 percent of the U.N. general budget.

For the U.N., already some $210 million in debt, the resultant loss of $13 million annual revenue is going to hurt. But what will hurt much more, according to observers, is for the U.S. to continue its criticism and disenchantment with the U.N. As one former U.S. diplomat in the U.N. explained to PARADE: "The U.N. can perhaps learn to manage without the full U.S. financial contribution, but the U.N. absolutely won't be able to do its job if the U.S. continues to step up its criticism. Waldheim knows it, and though he's not about to say so directly, he's damned worried about it. He's got to do something about this rift, and at the same time he cannot, of course, risk losing the confidence of other Big Powers—Russia and China. It's a hell of a tough assignment, but I know the man, and if anyone can pull it off, he can."

United Nations?

Trained for job

For Kurt Waldheim, the 53-year-old Austrian diplomat who succeeded Burma's U Thant as U.N. Secretary General last January, this "tough assignment" is something which, in a sense, he has trained for his entire adult life. Quite purposefully, as a 19-year-old he set about getting the proper credentials to become a diplomat—first by attending the Vienna Consular Academy, and then by enrolling in the University of Vienna to study law. His studies, however, were temporarily interrupted when the Germans occupied Austria and he was conscripted into the Wehrmacht—where he remained until he was seriously wounded in the leg by a hand grenade while fighting on the Russian front ("Which was good in one way," says his wife, Elisabeth. "Because it meant he couldn't serve anymore").

After recuperating, Waldheim completed his studies, married Elisabeth—a fellow law student—and then immediately joined the Austrian diplomatic service. It is here that he has made a name for himself over the past 27 years, serving in such key slots as head of the first Austrian mission to the U.N. (1955), Ambassador to Canada (1958-60), and Minister of Foreign Affairs (1968-70). Moreover, from the time that Austria was admitted to the U.N. in 1955, Waldheim attended every session of the General Assembly—which means, as one U.N. insider put it, "he had plenty of time to make friends and influence people."

Sought election

Thus, when U Thant—after 10 years in the U.N.'s No. 1 job, and suffering from a case of bleeding ulcers—announced last year that he was going to step down, Kurt Waldheim's name, along with about a dozen others, was mentioned as a candidate for the $62,500-a-year Secretary Generalship. Eager to win the post (he had only recently lost a close election for the Austrian presidency), Waldheim spent several months fighting a tough, but tactiful, behind-the-scenes campaign at the U.N.

His main problem, as it turned out, was that even though he had all the credentials, there were several countries—most importantly, the U.S.—that felt he was too mild-mannered, too passive, and too cautious to give the U.N. the strong leadership it needed at this crucial time. But after a long battle among the Big Powers, and with the U.S. unable to elect its favored candidate, Max Jakobson of Finland, we finally threw our support behind Waldheim. And he won. Recalls one U.S. witness to the precedings: "We weren't very happy with the outcome, and we never really expected him to do much. But in this business, one can always hope for surprises."

At this point, with the first year of Waldheim's five-year term about to end, many American observers feel that he has turned out to be a surprise, after all. Certainly, he has been far more active than was expected. In addition to earning the title as the fastest traveling Secretary General in U.N. history (during the first eight months he visited the leaders of the Big Powers — France, England, China, the Soviet Union and Peace-keeping activity: U.N. troops are stationed in Cyprus. U.N. forces have also been employed in Korea and the Congo to restore order and to prevent new conflicts.

the United States). Mr. Waldheim has shown that he is willing and able to play his role as the world's premier peacemaker. He has, for example, been instrumental in getting the two warring factions in Cyprus—Greeks and Turks—to resume peace discussions. He has also helped the North and South Koreans to begin, for the first time since World War II, negotiations towards reunification. And he has openly and persistently offered his good offices to help resolve the cruel conflicts in Northern Ireland and Vietnam.

Comments Mr. Waldheim on all these activities: "It is my job as Secretary General to help solve, if I can, these various conflicts around the world. That is why I was appointed—not to sit back and do nothing, not to be passive. Those who thought I would be just 'a mild-mannered diplomat'—and all that other nonsense that was said about me when I first began this job—well, they simply didn't know me. I have always been a very active man, and I am not able to sit back quietly and do nothing. That is not my temperament, at all. And I think that so far, at least, I have given enough proof that this is so."

Nixon critical

Unfortunately, for U.S.-U.N. relations, some of the "proof" that the Secretary General has shown of his willingness to play an active role on the world scene has not set so well with the American government—and notably, President Nixon. Thus, in July, when Mr. Waldheim announced publicly that he had seen reports that U.S. bombs were destroying dikes in North Vietnam, President Nixon retorted that "the Secretary General of the United Nations, just like his predecessor, seized upon this enemy-inspired propaganda, which has taken in many well-intentioned and naive people . . ." Mr. Waldheim, of course, had no choice but to overlook the criticism, and carry on offering his good offices to solve the Vietnam war.

"It is a terrible problem for us at the U.N.," he now says somewhat philosophically. "If you do nothing, you are criticized for inaction, and if you take a stand you risk stepping on someone's toes. But given these two choices I think we must take a stand. You see, we are living at an unusual period of history. On the one hand, there is a very obvious détente among the Big Powers; they are getting together on many matters. But at the same time, we still have local or regional wars going on—in Vietnam, in the Middle East. As long as this is so, there is always the danger that the Big Powers can, in spite of the détente, be dragged into a larger war. Therefore, it is our business at the U.N. to try to do something about these local wars—even though we may incur some criticism in doing so.

Relief effective

"Yet, even though we are criticized for some of our peace-keeping efforts," he continues, "I think there can be no debate over some of the social and economic contributions we have made. Take, for example, the enormous relief operation we are now involved in with Bangladesh: it's the largest in U.N. history—about $600 million in the first year alone. Or take our various programs of assistance to developing countries; you realize that two-thirds of the world are still living in hunger and misery. It's our duty to do something about it. Indeed, it is my opinion that not only the future of the U.N., but of all mankind, will depend on this work—this effort to lift the standard of living of these people. But to do this work, I must stress that we are going to need as always the fullest cooperation of the developed and more fortunate countries."

And that, of course, means the most developed country of all—the United States. We have been, and for the moment still are, the U.N.'s biggest contributor. But with the growing disenchantment among some segments of this country with the U.N., and with the impending decision of our government to scale down our contribution to the international organization, many observers are beginning to fear for the future of U.S.-U.N. relations. Will the U.S. continue to carry its share of the financial burden? Will the U.S. work through the U.N. to solve the pressing international problems? These are some of the questions weighing heavily on the shoulders of the new U.N. Secretary General, Kurt Waldheim. And concerned as he is, he has decided to take his message where it just might be heard, after all—to the American people, themselves.

Hall of Fame for Spacemen

■ Among the mementos that adorn Secretary General Waldheim's working quarters on the 38th floor of the U.N. building, is a small, framed U.N. flag which hangs on the wall, and bears the following inscription: "This flag was flown to the moon aboard Apollo 14, Jan. 31-Feb. 9, 1971. To the United Nations for its support of the peaceful exploration of outer space for all mankind, with the best wishes of the Apollo 14 Astronauts."

Though a gift of the U.S., the flag is a reminder that the heavens above belong to all peoples and that whoever goes there—be it us, the Soviet Union, or anybody else—they ought to go in the spirit of cooperation and peace. PARADE has been saying this for some years now, and back in 1966 proposed the idea of a joint American-Soviet space flight—an idea which was finally agreed upon by President Nixon and Soviet Premier Kosygin during their summit meeting in Moscow this past May.

Special museum

In furthering this worthwhile aim of international cooperation in space, PARADE now believes it would be appropriate for the U.N. to construct on its premises a Hall of Fame for all spacemen—those who already have voyaged, or someday will voyage, in outer space. The Hall could be constructed, we expect, in the huge Visitors' Lobby at the U.N., and it could house such items as photographs of all space heroes, some of their space gear and some of their findings.

Certainly the Hall would interest the U.N.'s thousands of daily visitors (indeed, the piece of moon rock that is currently displayed in a small glass case in this same lobby is a big draw). But, even more important, the Hall would underscore our need for international cooperation in space.

Knowing of Secretary General Waldheim's long-standing interest in these matters—back in 1965, he was elected chairman of the U.N. Committee on Peaceful Uses of Outer Space—we asked what he thought about our idea. His answer: "I think the idea is a good one. It is certainly something that ought to be considered. You know, that already it is a practice of most of the astronauts to visit the U.N. when they return from their moon flights. They are very well received here. And the idea of a Hall of Fame to honor them—and other spacemen from different nationalities—is a good one. I'll gladly take it up with my colleagues."

We wish him good luck!

At one of his monthly press conferences: Waldheim believes in the importance of public opinion. His predecessor U Thant held conferences about every three months.

With wife (left) and their three children: Christa, 13; Lisolette, 27; Gerhardt, 24. The Waldheims will move into New York mansion donated by U.S. businessman.

To the 56,000,000 people who smoke cigarettes.

A lot of people have been telling you not to smoke, especially cigarettes with high 'tar' and nicotine. But smoking provides you with a pleasure you don't want to give up.

Naturally, we're prejudiced. We're in the business of selling cigarettes.

But there is one overriding fact that transcends whether you should or shouldn't smoke and that fact is that you do smoke.

And what are they going to do about that?

They can continue to exhort you not to smoke. Or they might look reality in the face and recommend that, if you smoke and want low 'tar' and nicotine in a cigarette, you smoke a cigarette like Vantage.

And we'll go along with that, because there is no other cigarette like Vantage.

Except Vantage.

Vantage has a unique filter that allows rich flavor to come through it and yet substantially cuts down on 'tar' and nicotine.

Not that Vantage is the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette. (But you probably wouldn't like the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette anyway.)

The plain truth is that smoke has to come through a filter if taste is to come through a filter. And where there is taste there has to be some 'tar.'

But Vantage is the only cigarette that gives you so much flavor with so little 'tar' and nicotine.

So much flavor that you'll never miss your high 'tar' cigarette.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Filter and Menthol: 12 mg. "tar", 0.9 mg. nicotine—av. per cigarette, FTC Report Aug. 72.

U.S. SWIMMERS GET MEDALS IN MUNICH. NEW OLYMPICS CHIEF IS OPPOSED TO SUCH CEREMONIES.

OLYMPICS CONTROVERSY

Should the Olympic Games be abolished? Have they become too competitive, too commercial, too nationalistic?

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield thinks so, suggesting that the games have become "too political, too radical, too anarchic, too murderous."

Lord Killanin, the new president of the International Olympic Committee who took over from Avery Brundage, thinks they should be reformed.

He is against medal ceremonies with fanfares and the national flags being raised. "I am also convinced," he says, "that we have to remove some of the pressures of the games. It's become terribly political. I guess we have to accept that politicians and civil servants who provide money and facilities for sport are wanting more and more say. In many countries now there are ministers with direct responsibility. There are sports councils supported by public money, and teams compete internationally with government help."

Unlike Brundage, Lord Killanin is tactful, diplomatic, progressive and capable of change. He realizes that Munich, in the words of one journalist, "was the apotheosis of mammon, mayhem, and medal-collecting and that Montreal (site of the 1976 games) must not be the same."

TONGUE BRUSHING Do you brush your tongue twice a day? You should, advises Gen. Surindar Bhaskar, director of the U.S. Army Institute of Dental Research. For research has proved that bacteria which cause gum disease and tooth decay live on the top of the tongue.

THE NATION'S DISGRACE The most savage, primitive, disgraceful, institutional failure in American society is our prison system.

Says Norman Carlson, director of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons: "Anyone not a criminal will be one when he gets out of jail."

Says President Nixon: "No institution within our society has a record which presents such a conclusive case of failure as does our prison system."

Says Ben Bagdikian, formerly of "The Washington Post": "Approximately 8000 Americans are sent to jails and prisons every day. Ninety-seven percent of them eventually return to society, and from 40 to 70 percent of them commit new crimes....If theirs is an average experience, they will, in addition to any genuine justice received, be forced into programs of psychological destruction; if they serve a sentence, most of it will not be by decision of a judge acting under the Constitution but by a casual bureaucrat acting under no rules whatever; they will undergo a significant probability of forced homosexuality, and they will emerge from this experience a greater threat to society than when they went in."

The American prison system does not rehabilitate criminals; it makes them.

Despite Attica and an increasing number of prison riots, Congress seems in no hurry to reform the system. Senators Bellmon of Oklahoma, Saxbe of Ohio, Fannin of North Dakota, Bayh of Indiana, McClellan of Arkansas, Javits of New York, and Percy of Illinois have all introduced bills designed to develop new correctional systems. But as Bellmon recently pointed out in Congress, "I am sorry to say that [the] 18 months [Sept. 1971-Sept. 1972] have been largely non-productive so far as new legislation is concerned...Prison reform still seems to have a low priority with Congress... How many more riots must occur and how many more percentage points must our crime rate increase to motivate Congress into action?"

Why is wheat germ good for you?

Now Kretschmer tells you why.

A storehouse of natural nutrition.

Wheat germ is the heart of the wheat kernel—the most nutritious part.

Nature has made it rich in the protein your body may need, B vitamins, Vitamin E and other nutrients for energy and stamina.

Kretschmer has great respect for this natural goodness. No chemicals or preservatives are added. Nothing is taken away. We simply toast it lightly and vacuum-seal it in glass jars to keep it fresh and good tasting for you.

Nutrition: A key to family health.

We all know a nutritious, balanced diet is an essential part of good health. Yet our eating habits are often careless and our meals hurried. Many foods, too, lose some of their original nourishment through processing or cooking.

Kretschmer Wheat Germ can help supply what your diet may lack. Put back the good that puts back the zip.

Easy to eat and enjoy.

Kretschmer Wheat Germ comes ready to eat, with a pleasant, crunchy texture and nut-like flavor. For sweeter tastes, there's also Kretschmer with Sugar 'n Honey. They're both in the cereal section at your grocer's.

For a start, try your wheat germ like any breakfast cereal, with milk and sugar. Mix it with other hot or cold cereals. Or sprinkle it on your favorite fruit.

You'll discover why more and more families are catching the wheat germ. Isn't it time you caught on?

All America's catching the wheat germ.

THE PROMISED LAND

Last year one of every 9.8 Americans lived in California. By 1980, California will boast a population of approximately 24 million, which means that by then one out of every 10 U.S. residents will be a Californian.

Although the westward trek has diminished the past few years, approximately 55,000 newcomers established residence in California last year.

What continues to bring people to El Dorado? New industries, good educational facilities, fewer traditions, endless supplies of sand, surf, sun, and sex. And, of course, the dream of the good, somehow different life.

CANCER TEST

British medical scientists have developed a new cancer detection test. It reveals that cancer may be growing in a patient 10 years before a physician can detect it.

Developed by Professor E. J. Field and a team of researchers at the Newcastle General Hospital, the test was recently described in the "British Medical Journal."

It is based on the discovery that the white blood cells of people with cancer develop a special reaction to a protein present in cancerous tumors. These affected cells can be detected in a lengthy, complex laboratory test, which takes hours.

When the test is positive, Professor Field and his staff say, the patient probably has cancer even though the symptoms cannot be revealed by clinical or X-ray diagnosis.

Since medicine has not yet developed any method of treating cancers in unknown locations, doctors say there is no point in giving such a test on a mass scale because it would arouse excessive anxiety in patients showing a positive reaction without providing them with any benefit.

There is a strong possibility, however, that the principle involved in the test may one day help in the development of a cancer treatment, especially if the protein present in cancerous tumors could be isolated.

Writes Professor Field and his Newcastle colleagues: "We may speculate that well before the turn of the century, immunodiagnosis of cancer will be standard practice and immuno-therapy--making blood cells even more sensitive--will be instituted whatever the site or nature of the malignant growth."

ESPIONAGE IN HONG KONG

The one country the Soviet Union fears the most is the People's Republic of China.

The Russians have not only massed 45 Soviet divisions on the Sino-Siberian border, have continued their mounting anti-Chinese propaganda, but have ordered their spies to gather every last bit of available information on China.

The Soviets have also reopened their embassy in Peking. But the Chinese, in contrast to the old days, now restrict Soviet diplomats to the Chinese capital.

Several months ago the Soviets, working hand-in-hand with Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist Chinese, tried to set up an espionage network in the British Colony of Hong Kong.

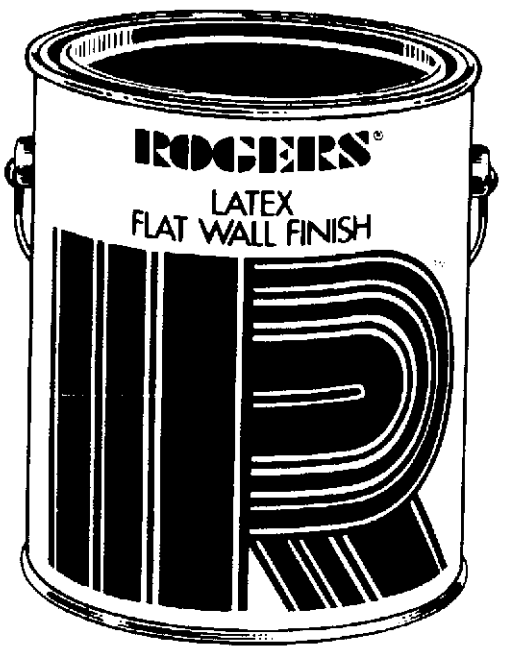

Their scheme was blown when two Russian seamen were caught, and in the trouser pocket of one, a Kremlin espionage plan was discovered.

In order to prevent Hong Kong from becoming an espionage center, the British government has continuously resisted Soviet and East European efforts to establish diplomatic missions in Hong Kong. To date only Poland has such a mission but the Polish consul general for Hong Kong, believe it or not, maintains his office in London, not Hong Kong.

Hong Kong, however, is an open, free-wheeling colony in which the U.S. for years has maintained a large network of intelligence-gatherers and China-watchers.

The British position on espionage in Hong Kong has been yes for our friends no for our enemies.

OIL AND TAXES In 1971 the 18 largest oil companies in the nation earned over $10 billion. Of that tremendous sum, they paid only 6.7 percent of their net income in federal income taxes.

Many of these companies pay additional sums in foreign and local taxes, but few pay proportionally in taxes as much as the American citizen who earns $15,000 a year.

My Favorite Jokes

by Jackie Vernon

EDITOR'S NOTE: The contrast between Jackie Vernon's straight-faced dissertation on, say, the importance of being dull, and the wild workings of his imagination makes for some lively comedy. For instance, he reminisces matter-of-factly about his youth: "At parties I stayed in the room with the coats." He goes on to talk about his first big business break, giving a conventional beginning to a story which ends in a strange place: "Eight years ago Steve Allen saw me working in a small club in Ontario and he invited me to appear on his television show. He'd sent me the air fare, so I had a ticket and only $10 when I arrived in Hollywood. I went into a little hotel which advertised rooms for $3 a night. Incredulous, I asked the clerk, 'Do you really have rooms for $3 a night?' 'Yes,' he said, 'and I also have one that Rudolph Valentino slept in for $4.' I took the Valentino room—it was worth the extra dollar."

After the Steve Allen show, Vernon appeared on the Jack Paar, Ed Sullivan, Dean Martin, and Johnny Carson shows. He's performed in top clubs and is currently a co-star on the syndicated TV series The Golddiggers. Here are some of his observations and adages:

The secret of teaching yourself music

It may seem odd at first – the idea of teaching yourself music. You might think you need a private teacher at $4 to $10 per hour to stand beside you and explain everything you should do – and to tell you when you've made a mistake.

But surprising as it seems, you need no such thing. Thousands of people just like you have taught themselves to play by using the lessons we give by mail. And you can too.

With our lessons, you learn to play the right way – by note from regular sheet music. Without any gadgetry or gimmickry. And all it costs you is just pennies a day.

You don't need any previous musical training. Our lessons start you off "from scratch" with clear word-and-picture instructions. A lot of the songs you practice first are simple tunes you've heard many times. And since you already know how these tunes are supposed to sound, you can tell immediately when you've "got them right."

Then you go on to more advanced pieces. By this time you can tell if your notes and timing are right, even without ever having heard the songs before. Sooner than you might think possible, you'll be able to play whatever kind of music you like. Folk. Popular. Classical. Show and dance tunes. Hymns.

You learn in your spare time, in the privacy and comfort of your own home. There's no one standing over you to make you nervous. And because you teach yourself, you can set your own pace. You're free to spend as much time mastering any lesson as you wish.

It's really a marvelous way to learn. As recent graduate Mrs. Norman Johanson wrote us, "My daughter has taken lessons for 8 years from a private teacher, and now she asks me questions about some of her lessons. How very proud I feel when she says to friends, 'You've just got to hear my Mom play!' "

Others also enjoy her playing, Mrs. Johanson reports. She plays for herself to relax after a trying day, and for her husband when he's tired. She also plays for friends when she goes to parties. "In a sentence," she says, "it's the most soul-satisfying thing that has ever happened to me."

This child has a good home, nice clothes, a loving mother– and Pin-Worms!

A tormenting itch in the rectal area, nose-picking and fidgeting are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms. It can happen to anyone in any family—young or old, rich or poor. It's so common, medical authorities say that 1 out of 3 children examined, and many parents, have Pin-Worms without knowing it. And because Pin-Worms bring on itching and fidgeting, they can distract children and affect their school work!

What's more, Pin-Worms are highly contagious, so they can spread from person to person, until the whole family is infected.

What can you do about it? Fortunately there is an easy-to-take medication that gets rid of Pin-Worms. It's called Jayne's® P-W® tablets. Ask your pharmacist. He'll tell you that Jayne's P-W tablets are specially formulated with an effective medical ingredient that gets Pin-Worms out of your system. Young pupil demonstrates hand position for teacher Robert Pace and a fellow student. Class members listen to each other play critically and offer suggestions and advice.

Fun and Games With the Piano

by Herbert Kupferberg

NEW YORK, N.Y.

Taking the pain out of piano lessons —that is the objective of a new method of music instruction now being used by some 8000 teachers at schools and studios across the country.

The idea, says Dr. Robert Pace of Columbia University's Teachers College, is to end the "solitary confinement" of the traditional private lesson.

In its place, Dr. Pace has substituted sessions in which young pupils learn to play the piano 10 at a time—and listen critically to each others' performances as they go along.

All the children in the group participate in a lesson in musical theory on classroom blackboard. Pace believes that music is a social activity and should be taught socially.

"People often believe that individual attention is possible only in a one-to-one situation," explains Pace. "But I can give a child better attention as an individual if I can see how he reacts to others in a group and how others react to him."

Pace's method of group instruction is backed by the National Piano Foundation, an educational organization established by the piano industry itself. "The manufacturers are interested because the country is strewn with disused second-hand pianos," says an NPF spokesman. "They want people to keep playing them."

Pace says that his method, in which basic musical concepts are taught side by side with the technical aspects of playing, has a remarkably low dropout rate, even though instruction lasts over a period of years.

Kids teach, too

"Class piano is not new," he says, "but we try to get the kids to teach each other. I put responsibilities on the children themselves for correcting each other's mistakes. We use them as checkers to see who's got the best hand positions, for instance. It's amazing how the hands all come up to the right position when we ask. When you learn in groups you have realistic goals set by the kids themselves—they're eight-year-old goals, not goals set by an adult outsider. The kids police each other—they're quick to show resentment when someone in the class obviously hasn't done his practicing."

In a typical class, 10 children have a weekly session working with their teacher on such matters as key signature identification, major and minor chords, sight-reading and other aspects of music training that can be absorbed in groups. Flashcards, blackboards, even a floor diagram of the musical staff all get a workout. At other lessons during the week, they go to the keyboard, usually in pairs, playing short songs, harmonizing, transposing. Within a year, they're improvising and trying their own musical compositions—whether in a jazz, rock or classical idiom.

In public schools

While some private teachers are taking up the group idea, it is also being used with increasing frequency in U.S. public schools from Spanish East Harlem in New York to the suburbs of Seattle. As more and more teachers are trained in the method, Dr. Pace expects it to spread even further.

"Until now piano instruction has consisted too much of putting the mind in neutral and the fingers in high," says Pace. "The emphasis has been on turning out little concert artists. We don't mind turning out some pros ourselves, but essentially we'd like to produce a lot of skilled amateurs. The idea of music is not only to play for your own enjoyment, but to share it with others."

Ten little losers, standing in a line. One bought our magazine. Then there were nine.

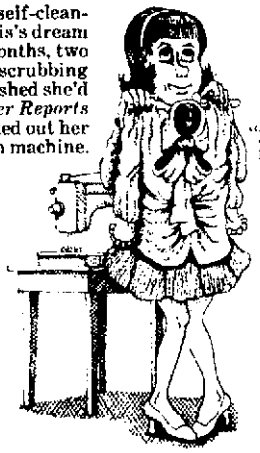

Since hamburger prices went through the roof, Alice feeds her kids hot dogs instead. She doesn't know that ground beef may be a better buy for nourishment, or that a plain old peanut-butter sandwich could be better yet.

Bill didn't trust his thermostat, so he bought a $5 household thermometer to check it. Now he's completely confused—and he could have solved his problem for 69¢.

A range with a self-cleaning oven was Chris's dream come true. Six months, two burns, and a tough scrubbing later—she wished she'd checked Consumer Reports before she picked out her dream machine.

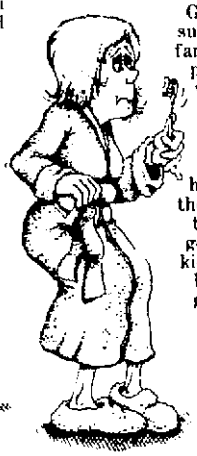

Debbie's motto was, "you get what you pay for," so she paid $400 for a zig-zag sewing machine. She didn't know that her nylon tricot blouse would have turned out better on the $250 machine she bypassed.

When Ed decided to refinish his boat, he spent $3.20 a quart for paint remover. If he'd known better, he could have saved 55¢ a quart—and stripped it cleaner in half the time.

Frank's pride and joy was the new single lens reflex camera he'd bought for $340. Too bad he didn't hear about the one Consumer Reports rated a "Best Buy" for $164 less.

Grace made sure that the family toothpaste was a whitening, brightening, cavity fighting brand. She had to learn the hard way that what's good for the kids may not be good for grown-ups.

Handyman Henry is nobody's fool; he knew that the $45 saber saw the salesman was pushing was no better than the $24 model he bought. Unfortunately, he didn't see the $17 saw that was better than both of them.

Ida listened to a half dozen compact stereo systems before she chose her $250 set. How could she guess that a model that cost just $1 more would give her a lot more value for her money.

Johnny decided he'd wasted his last dollar on noisy outboard motors that jammed in weeds, one-coat paints that didn't cover, air-conditioners that dripped puddles onto his patio, door locks that all but invited burglars to break in, luggage that ended up without handles, washing machines that walked across the floor, and products that just weren't worth the price. He subscribed to CONSUMER REPORTS.

Korean Beef Strips

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Korean cooking holds some delightful surprises for aficionados of Oriental food who enjoy experimenting with new dishes. This recipe for "bul-kogi" (broiled beef strips) isn't usual fare in Oriental restaurants—but is a snap to prepare in your own kitchen range.

Garlic is a favorite seasoning in Korea, and if you are also partial to it, we recommend using four cloves in making the dish. Otherwise, cut down the number of cloves to suit your taste.

Serve fluffy rice with the meat and top each portion with a spoonful of reserved marinade. Side-dishes of a bland green vegetable, some raw vegetable relishes, and chilled melon wedges for dessert round out this flavorful menu.

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

Korean Barbecued Beef (Bul-Kogi)

- 1 tablespoon sesame seeds
- 2 pounds lean beef (sirloin or top round cut 1½ inches thick)
- 3 scallions, finely chopped
- 3 to 4 garlic cloves, minced
- 5 tablespoons soy sauce
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- ¼ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons dry sherry
- ¼ teaspoon Ac'cent
- ⅛ teaspoon black pepper

Brown the sesame seeds lightly over low heat; set aside. Slice the steak on the diagonal in very thin slices. Score each slice with an X. Combine remaining ingredients; mix well. Pour over steak slices. Let stand about 30 minutes. Drain meat, strain marinade; reserve. Broil steak slices as near the source of heat as possible for 30 seconds to 1 minute; turn; sprinkle with sesame seeds. Broil 30 seconds longer. Serve with rice and reserved marinade. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

CAR COT: This new car bed (left) can sleep two children or one adult while you drive. It consists of a lightweight metal frame and legs and durable cover, fits over the rear seat of any standard or compact car without attachments, and folds compactly for storage in the car trunk. $10.95 postpaid. One-inch foam pad: $5. Barnett, Dept. PP, Box 783, Upper Montclair, N.J. 07043.

PAPERBACK PAGE HOLDER: To allow you to read without having to "fight" pages while eating, taking notes, or in bed, a new transparent plastic holder wraps around a paperback book and keeps the pages open, flat, yet easy to turn with a flick of the finger. It fits thick or thin paperback volumes, also serves as a bookmark. 8¾" wide. $1 postpaid. Jay, Dept. PP, 2641 South Yarrow, Denver, Colo. 80227.

CORD HIDER: One way to avoid unsightly electrical cord tangles is with a rectangular plastic holder (above) that can shorten and conceal up to 7 feet of cord without harming it in any way. You simply wind the cord around posts that are visible when the 4½" x 1" x 1" holder is open. It comes with a two-sided foam adhesive strip so you can mount it to the bottom or back of a piece of furniture or to wall or appliance. In ivory, brown or black. Three for $2 postpaid. Hide-A-Cord, Dept. PP, Box 2522, Lincoln, Nebr. 68502.

"My wife is incredible."

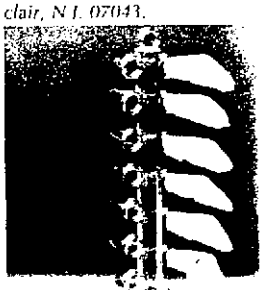

"The way she takes care of the kids, the house, a job and me—it's incredible. And look at her. She looks better than any of her friends. And they're all about the same age."

Aren't those nice words for a woman to hear? But to be able to get all of those compliments, you have to take care of yourself.

You should eat right, get plenty of rest, exercise. And to make sure you get enough iron and vitamins, take Geritol every morning.

Geritol has more than twice the iron of ordinary supplements. Plus seven vitamins.

Take care of yourself. Take Geritol.

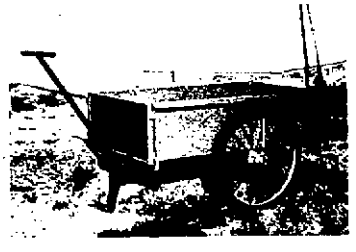

NAPKIN TREE: Made of clear acrylic, this unusual napkin holder (above) has 16 rings welded to the 12"-high upright trunk, and you can tuck one cocktail or luncheon napkin into each ring. A 3" x 3" base allows the tree to stand on bar, buffet, or coffee table, and you can slip a finger into the top ring to carry it with you when serving canapés or drinks. Available gift-boxed at $9 postpaid. Jerry O'Connor Designs, Dept. PP, 345 East 73 St., New York, N.Y. 10021.

UTILITY CART: Useful for gardening and many other purposes around the house, this steel cart (left) has a load-carrying capacity of 300 pounds and, with its 20" wheels with ball bearings, is said to move easily over both rough and soft terrain. You can remove either one or both of its end gates for hauling long loads and for easy tip-forward unloading. The cart's bed size is 40" by 24" by 10", allowing it to pass through the average garden gate. It converts from hand operation to tractor- or riding mower-drawn operation with an easily mounted hitch. Green acrylic enamel finish. Complete with hitch: $95 freight prepaid. Oak Grove, Dept. PP, Box 47A, Foristell, Mo. 63348.

FOR EYE MAKEUP: Here's a new compact (right) with a special magnifying mirror that is said to allow you to see clearly for eye makeup without glasses regardless of your eyeglass needs. To use the mirror, you hold it near the eye, then slowly move it away until the image is in perfect focus for your vision. The compact also includes a regular mirror. $6. The Magic Focus, Inc., Dept. PP, Box 215, Augusta, Kans. 67010.

LARK

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Among laser's many uses: Dr. Francis L'Esperance, New York ophthalmologist, employs a flexible "light knife," which harnesses beam's power to correct eye defect.

What Will the Laser Do Next?

by Lloyd Shearer

ALBUQUERQUE, N. MEX

Ever since the U.S. Air Force introduced the laser beam bomb into the war in Vietnam, science and military writers have been wondering how long it will take the Armed Forces to develop a laser weapon so powerful that it will be able to vaporize enemy tanks and bombers hundreds of miles away.

At the Kirtland USAF Base in Albuquerque, N. Mex., supposedly all three of the services are hard at work on super-secret laser warfare programs, hence the rumors about "death-rays," "gun-vaporizers," and "electro-optical warfare."

The word, "laser" is an acronym for Light Amplification by Stimulated Emission of Radiation. Light energy is compressed into a needle-thin beam so fine that it can, with the speed of light, 186,000 miles per second, penetrate almost anything with unerring accuracy.

Theodore H. Maiman invented the laser, sees big future as communication tool.

Lasers are currently used by surgeons to repair detached retinas, by clothiers to cut garments, by welders to join metals, and perhaps one day by scientists to trigger H-bombs and manufacture the most terrible weapons known to man.

What's developing?

How far away is that day? What are the Armed Forces up to at Kirtland?—which incidentally also houses the Sandia Atomic Museum and its replica collection of such nuclear bombs as "Little Boy," the first atomic bomb used in warfare and dropped on Hiroshima; "Fat Man," the second atomic bomb, which was dropped on Nagasaki; the MK 17, one of the first thermonuclear weapons tested; the "Lulu," an air-launched atomic depth charge developed for the Navy to be used against enemy subs and ships, and many others.

Are U.S. scientists, unknown to the general public, hard at work on a crash laser weapons program, just as their predecessors were some 30 odd years ago, when they, too, toiled in the New Mexico desert on a crash nuclear program which produced the atomic bomb?

Around Albuquerque one hears stories of a secret project called "Project Y," involving the use of laser beams for nuclear detonation. One hears about laser beams which can carry thousands of voice and video channels, of beams which could antiquate all the radar and tracking devices now in use.

To sort out how much of this lies in the realm of science-fiction and how much in the world of the practical future, I recently called on Theodore H. Maiman, 45.

When Maiman was 32 and working for Hughes Aircraft in Malibu, Calif., (at $18,500 a year) he invented the laser in July, 1960.

"Do you think I'm a sourpuss?"

"Well I sure used to be a sourpuss. I had this constipation problem for years. I worried about it a lot. I tried all kinds of laxatives, always looking for one that would be gentle and effective, too.

"Then I found Serutan. You know what it's made from? Natural ingredients, not harsh chemicals that irritate your system. So it's gentle. And believe me, Serutan really works.

"Now I feel free from constipation worries—for the first time in years. If you have a problem with constipation, Serutan could help you feel free. Take it from an ex-sourpuss."

LASER CONTINUED

He is a tall, soft-speaking, brown-haired scientist who got his B.S. degree in electrical engineering at the University of Colorado, his graduate degrees at Stanford University.

After inventing the laser (Hughes owns the patents), Maiman left Hughes, became a director of Quantatron, Inc., later organized Korad, a laser manufacturing company which he sold out to Union Carbide. Maiman, recently divorced, now heads a new company, Laser Video, and is in the process of manufacturing a laser-powered TV set, three by four feet large, which needs no cathode ray tube and is only a few inches thick, and hangs like a picture from a wall.

"The laser," Maiman explains, "is a highly inefficient device. Let me say that to begin with. Less than one percent of the energy it generates comes out as usable light. The rest of it comes out as heat and has to be stored somewhere and cooled off.

"Also the laser beam travels in a straight line, and on foggy or unclear days, a lot of it is scattered and absorbed by the atmosphere. It's inefficient as hell.

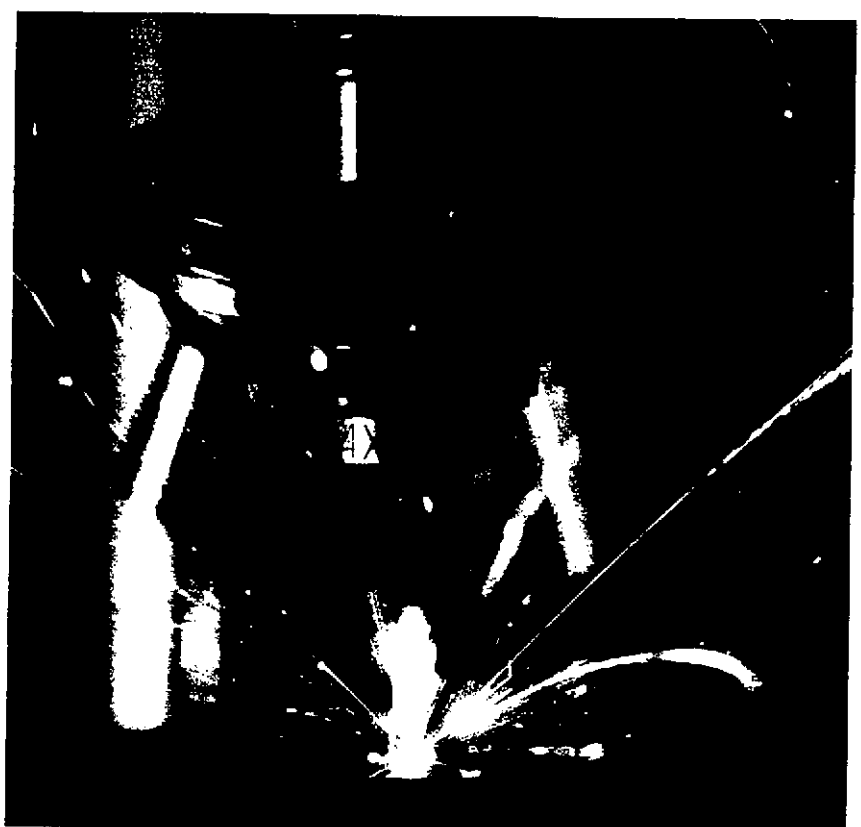

"I'm sure all sorts of military applications will be developed eventually," Maiman adds, "but personally I don't believe all this stuff about using the laser as a death ray, that we can forget about the regular arsenal of munitions like machine guns and rifles, and that we will soon have a device of disintegration to supplant them. That's just science-fiction.

"What I envision in the near future," he says, "is the use and improvement of lasers in scientific instrumentation, TV systems, short-range communications, computers, precision measurements, microwelding and machining, and, of course, in medicine. I see developments in all the fields in which it is now being used.

Bombs by beams

"The only really efficient military applications of the laser that I know of in practical use," he concedes, "are the laser range-finder and the laser bomb in which the pilot sights a target by laser beam and the bomb is guided onto the beam's reflection."

Maiman is not a political innocent and realizes that the Soviets are probably hard at work on lasers, too, which is reason enough, of course, for Congress to have appropriated approximately $100 million for our own military laser research and development programs.

Laser is being used effectively in fusing metals, for precision work in integrated circuit production. Powerful lasers are also able to pierce holes in diamonds.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

New Cover Girl

Anne Chopinet is a new type of French cover girl—19, quiet, and brainy—in fact, so brainy that she has become the contemporary heroine of French youth.

Anne is the first girl to enter the prestigious Ecole Polytechnique in Paris, the academy founded by Napoleon Bonaparte to supply the nation with ace engineers and mathematicians.

Anne placed No. 1 in the entrance exams, outscoring all the boys. Her nearest competitor ranked 15 points below her mark. Seven other French girls joined Anne Chopinet in achieving admission to the school.

Graduation from Ecole Polytechnique generally assures a student a flock of top job offers, even though it is primarily a military academy. Many of its graduates, however, decline to enter the army.

Anne, who lives in the Montmartre section of Paris with her parents, is a soft-speaking modest young woman, simple, unaffected, no member of women's liberation, but a girl of 19 who prefers to be judged by her accomplishments rather than her sex.

ANNE CHOPINET—BRAINS PLUS BEAUTY

After Anne and seven other colleagues were admitted to Ecole Polytechnique, "Paris Match," the French picture magazine, made her its cover girl, the triumph of brains over sex.

Food Stamps on Campus

How many college students throughout this country are getting federal food stamps on various welfare programs?

No one seems to know, but apparently quite a few. Once the privilege of the affluent, a college education is currently available to the poverty-stricken.

College students, not listed by their parents as dependents, are eligible for food stamps. It varies from state to state and county to county, but in Arizona, for example, a single person who earns less than $178 a month or couples who earn less than $233 a month and have assets valued at less than $1500, are frequently considered O.K. for food stamps.

Such qualified students receive about $36 a month in stamps, which are acceptable for all grocery purchases except beer and cigarettes.

Rank on Rock

Rank Leisure Services, a branch of the J. Arthur Rank conglomerate in Great Britain, is converting giant movie theaters and ballrooms in England into pop auditoria called sundowns.

Each sundown is a custom-built auditorium for pop music, especially hard rock and other progressive music which young people find listenable. The idea is to present one big band a week and to offer newcomers a satisfactory showcase. When rock bands are not using the sundowns, the halls are converted into motion picture houses for children in the morning and late-night movies after midnight.

If the British sundowns catch on in England, Rank is prepared to introduce them to Europe and the U.S.A.

The Lucky Ones

Last year 38,000 students applied for admission this fall to the 112 medical schools in the United States.

About 35 percent—roughly 13,000 students—made it.

Many who were rejected show undergraduate ratings of B and B+.

The shortage of doctors in this country, particularly in its rural areas, remains a crying shame.

Fortunately three new medical schools were opened this year: Mayo Medical School in Rochester, Minn.; University of Minnesota, Duluth, and Texas Tech University School of Medicine in Lubbock.

Dissatisfied Young Workers

One-third of all the young people in the 18-29 age-bracket, working in the U.S.A., don't like their jobs.

The authority for that statement is pollster George Gallup Jr.

At a recent seminar of the American Management Association, Gallup pointed out that fully 70 percent of young workers believe they are not producing at full capacity, that much of their work is not meaningful, that they are increasingly dissatisfied with five-day work weeks, and that they don't cotton to life in urban, industrial areas.

As a result, many of them frankly admit that they loaf on jobs which provide them money but no satisfaction.

The Hundred Menu Chicken Cookbook

Probably the most popular and least expensive meat on the market these days is chicken—for frying, baking, roasting or stewing. Easy to prepare, chicken is extra good made and served en casserole. Accompanied by rice or noodles, a green salad, and a light dessert of fruit and cheese, a casserole is a sure palate-pleaser.

The Hundred Menu Chicken Cookbook by Robert Ackart, PARADE's latest book offer for only $1, is a compendium especially designed for the cook who wants to achieve impressive results with a minimum of time and cost.

Handsomely illustrated, the book also contains a lexicon of culinary terms. It explains everything from marinating chicken, to choosing condiments, and selecting the proper oil for cooking. Also, most of the book's dishes can be frozen and reheated without loss of taste.

Exotic delights like Greek stifado (chicken with onions) or the North African cassoulet (chicken with beans and sausage) alternate with all-American favorites like chicken fricassee—and the required ingredients are never too costly or difficult to obtain.

For instance, the recipe for "Chicken with Paprika" calls for ingredients that you most likely have on hand (onions, garlic, flour, oil and chicken broth—plus chicken parts and paprika), yet, says the author, "this dish is served in Salzburg's finest hotel, which has one of the best kitchens in Austria."

Equally impressive to serve, and just as simple to make, is "Chicken Stroganov," a variation on the classic Russian entrée that is usually prepared with beef. This version, using poultry, costs a good deal less and is ideal party fare. The recipe serves six, and it's a cinch to double or triple it, depending on your guest list.

Following the book's 100th taste-tempting recipe, there's a chapter on "something hearty to go with it"—rice, barley, noodles, homemade breads and potato pancakes among many other delicious side dishes.

Salads are great favorites these weight-conscious days and they are covered in detail in The Hundred Menu Chicken Cookbook. You'll learn what kind of greens go best together, and how to perk up an ordinary lettuce-and-tomato salad with simple dressings and delicately flavored herbs. Concluding the book is a guide to cheeses and refreshing fruit desserts.

"Alone in the kitchen," comments the author in his preface, "the cook is a master artist, free to improvise, to explore, and, usually, to delight both family and friends." The Hundred Menu Chicken Cookbook will help you do exactly that.

You haven't seen a horoscope like this before, unless you have actually seen one of our in-depth personalized horoscopes. We invented computerized astrology 5 years ago when we learned that millions of people were interested in personal authentic astrology, not the short forecasts found in newspapers.

Many people could not afford the time and money required to have a personalized horoscope cast by a qualified astrologer. Such reports could cost up to $300.

Newspaper and magazine astrology is based on the twelve Sun Signs, so everyone in the world born during the same period gets the same horoscope — 12 possibilities in all. Authentic astrology is based on the month, day, year, time and place of birth, with the positions of all the planets taken into account — so the possibilities of variation are infinite. For instance, two people born on the same day in the same city, but at different times, get different horoscopes. Two people born on the same day at the same time, but in different places, get different horoscopes.

The Time Pattern horoscope is an individual, 15,000-word report all about you and you only. It describes your character as well as your potential in life, love and business. It also projects the trend of events you can expect during the next 12 months, giving highlights for each month and pinpointing individual days that are astrologically significant.

Time Pattern Research Institute was selected by the country's leading department stores as the most reliable astrological service available.

1. You receive your report within 10 days from receipt of your order.

2. You get the most comprehensive astrological report ever made available — 15,000 words, a whole book about you and you alone for only $20.00.

3. If you are not pleased with the report for any reason whatsoever, you may return it any time within a whole year from the receipt of your report for a full refund.

4. We predict that you will be astounded by the accuracy of your report.

You are one in a million, not one in twelve. Get the horoscope that fits you and no one else. Get a Time Pattern Report®.

Message from Martha: This is the five-page letter that the wife of the former Attorney General wrote to Parade's columnist Walter Scott to explain "horrible" incident.

Martha Mitchell Complains To Walter Scott

On Sept. 10, 1972, this publication in its Personality Parade department printed the following question and answer concerning Martha Mitchell, the colorful wife of the former U.S. Attorney General:

Q. This past June when she was in Newport Beach, Calif., Martha Mitchell said a security guard threw her on the bed and gave her an injection in her fanny to quiet her down. Was the security guard who did that Steve King, in charge of security for the Committee to Reelect the President?—S. Lane, Washington, D.C.

A. It was not Steve King who injected Mrs. Martha Mitchell in the upper extremity of her thigh. It is true that King accompanied the Mitchells to California as a bodyguard, but he was not involved in the needle caper as described by Mrs. Mitchell. King is now security director for the Committee for Reelection of the President, but he was not on June 17th. In June that position was occupied by James W. McCord Jr., who was arrested with four other persons for allegedly breaking into the Watergate complex in Washington, D.C., and attempting to bug Democratic National Headquarters in a plot financed in part by Republican campaign contributions.

If in fact Mrs. Mitchell was "needled" by anyone, and she has always been a scrupulously truthful woman, it is safe to assume that she was injected by a physician or nurse qualified to do so. Steve King says he is not.

When Mrs. Mitchell read the above in her luxurious Watergate East apartment in Washington, D.C., on that Sunday morning, she grew justifiably incensed.

According to her, our reply was only partially correct and exonerated Stephen King, her former bodyguard, from what she regards as the commission of a dastardly act upon her person.

She thereupon wrote us a five-page letter which is reprinted herewith in its entirety:

September 10, 1972

Dear Mr. Scott:

After reading today's "Personality Parade," I shall come out of my self imposed retirement to set a few facts straight.

Indeed it was a Steve King that not only dealt me the most horrible experience I have ever had—but inflicted bodily harm upon me. Such as, kicking me, throwing me around, keeping me locked up in one room for more than twenty-four hours, sending my hand through a glass window, allowing no one inside the villa except the doctor whom he called—and last but not least—yanked the phone out of my bedroom while talking with Helen Thomas. He came into my room while the doors were closed and I was undressed.

Martha Mitchell says that she wants to "set a few facts straight"—and does.

From then on I saw no one—allowed no food—and literally kept a prisoner.

The doctor and all the rest of them should have been arrested or unless I'm terribly wrong in thinking that people are allowed to treat one thus—for simply a telephone call!

This doctor came in with his needle—and with the help of King threw me on the bed and injected something I turned out to be allergic to. The doctor whom I never had seen in my life spoke not one word nor explained the injection. I should sue them all.

And in case you or anyone else doubt my word—and listen to the lies of the others—I might mention my eleven year old daughter witnessed the whole unbelievable scene.

This is just to set part of the record straight. I refuse to let these lies be told.

Best wishes to you.

Sincerely,
Martha Mitchell

Steve King says that he can "no longer talk about the incident"—and doesn't.

In her relationship with PARADE, Martha Mitchell has always been scrupulously honest. PARADE in turn has tried to maintain the identical standard. Mrs. Mitchell, however, has been a most difficult woman to contact. She has been kept incommunicado for reasons known only to others. Perhaps one day she will write a book telling all. She has so threatened.

Futile efforts

This is to inform Mrs. Mitchell that Personality Parade tried to contact her in the Beverly Hills Hotel on June 16, 17, and 18 this past summer. Her bodyguard, Steve King, a former FBI agent, and presumably a gentleman of honor and decency, promised to relay our messages. When Mrs. Mitchell and entourage moved down to the Newporter Inn at Newport Beach, Calif., Personality Parade again tried to contact her by phone even though we were told she was not registered there.

When subsequently Mrs. Mitchell flew to the Westchester Country Club in Rye, N.Y., and later presented her husband with an ultimatum to relinquish his position as President Nixon's campaign manager, Personality Parade once again left messages, beseeching Mrs. Mitchell to get word to us somehow as she had in the past.

Unable to contact Mrs. Mitchell, Personality Parade phoned Steve King for his version of the Newporter Inn battle, and it is his version which we largely used as our reply. Mrs. Mitchell says we were taken in.

King won't talk

Mr. King says, "You understand I can no longer talk about the incident. All such information must come from Van Shumway or Powell Moore." Mr. Shumway, in charge of press relations for the Committee to Reelect the President, and Mr. Moore, his assistant, are masters of obfuscation, and what they were willing to say about Martha Mitchell can be stored in the eye of a needle.

Personality Parade apologizes to Martha Mitchell for its inability to ferret out the entire truth of what, why, where, and when happened to her in Southern California this past June.

We tried, Martha, but they wouldn't let us get to you. Now that you've moved to New York, maybe it will be easier. Best of all, why don't you go ahead and write your book. Suggested title: What Politics Did to Me. L.S.

Isn't there anything that will really help me quit smoking?

Clinical tests have shown that an alkaloid called Lobeline Sulfate is an effective smoking deterrent. Lobeline works not by making smoking unpleasant, but by acting as a substitute for the nicotine in your system without being habit forming. It helps to remove the craving and to reduce withdrawal symptoms.

Do I need a prescription to get Lobeline Sulfate?

Not so fast. Lobeline Sulfate is highly efficient but it has a big drawback. Taken in sufficient quantities to be an effective substitute for nicotine, Lobeline often upsets the stomach. This is one of the reasons doctors seldom prescribe it.

Doesn't that leave me where I started?

No indeed. A number of years ago scientists at a great American University determined to tackle the problem. They discovered that buffering Lobeline Sulfate with two special antacids virtually eliminated any likelihood of stomach upset. Also these buffers greatly increased the efficiency of the Lobeline.

Where can I get this buffered Lobeline Sulfate?

This new discovery was a great breakthrough in the smoking deterrent field. It was immediately patented* and is now available under the name of Bantron.* No other smoking deterrent has such a patent. Bantron is a little white tablet, pleasant and easy to take. Many doctors recommend it to their patients and you can get it at any drug store without a prescription.

What about all those lozenges and chewing gums advertised as deterrents?

If they contain Lobeline Sulfate at all, they cannot give you the efficiency of Bantron. Bantron is the only major smoking deterrent based on buffered Lobeline Sulfate. Because of this Bantron can safely give you four times as much Lobeline in a single dose as any other deterrent in the drug store.

How do I know Bantron will work for ME?

Before Bantron was put on the market it was thoroughly researched. It was tested on hundreds of people who wanted to quit smoking. In these clinical tests 83%, more than 4 out of 5, quit easily and pleasantly with the help of Bantron in only 5 to 7 days. Figure for yourself the odds in your favor. Looks like Bantron could be a good bet.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

by GEORGE WUNDER

TERRY CONSPIRES WITH MELISSA TO PROTECT THE CHILD'S MOTHER FROM HER MYSTERIOUS FRIENDS.

BLAST IT! ENCOURAGING THE KID TO SPY ON HER MOTHER ISN'T EXACTLY A LESSON IN ETHICS!

THESE PEOPLE, WHETHER THEY'RE UNDERGROUND RECRUITERS OR RACKETEERS PREYING ON THE WIVES OF MISSING SERVICEMEN, COULD GET NASTY.

IF THEY EVER SUSPECTED 'LISSA OF PRYING..! MAYBE I SHOULD GO TO THE POLICE — AND TELL THEM WHAT? THAT MRS. BARB IS INVOLVED WITH SOME ODD-BALLS WHO WEAR GOAT'S HEAD RINGS? HA!

WHILE: I'M GOING NOW, 'LISSA, DARLING. BE A GOOD GIRL AND DON'T GIVE MRS. WIZARD ANY PROBLEMS... SHE HAS ENOUGH TO DO, KEEPING HOUSE FOR US.

OKAY, MOMMIE... MAY I CALL JENIFER?

I SUPPOSE SO, DEAR. YOU HAVEN'T SEEN HER SINCE FOUR. MUST HAVE ALL SORTS OF URGENT MATTERS TO DISCUSS.

JUST REMEMBER THE COMPARATIVE SIZES OF OUR PHONE BILL AND MY SALARY.

I WON'T LET HER GAB ALL NIGHT, MRS. BARB.

THEN: I THOUGHT YOU WERE GOING TO CALL YOUR LITTLE FRIEND, MELISSA.

HOW CAN I PHONE TERRY LEE WITH HER LISTENING TO EVERY WORD?

WHILE MRS. BARB'S CAR ENTERS A SECLUDED CANYON IN THE HILLS OUTSIDE OF TOWN...

AND: YOU MAY ENTER, NOVICE.

"THE FUTURE HOLDS NO TERRORS FOR THOSE WHO HAVE CONFIDENCE IN THE PRESENT" — ARMIN SCHAPER

THERE IS NO MEDICAL PRECEDENT FOR WARBUCKS' CONDITION! THERE'S NOTHING ORGANICALLY WRONG THAT I CAN DETERMINE...

AND YET HE MERELY SITS AND STARES INTO A VOID... COMATOSE AND UNRESPONSIVE!

A WISP OF VAPOR FROM THE MANDRAGORA ROOT LEADS ANNIE AND PUNJAB... "EASTWARD"...

AN' YA FIGURE WE'LL RUN INTA SOMETHIN'... OR SOMEBODY... WHO'LL GIVE US A CLUE T' WHAT'S MAKIN' DADDY SICK, PUNJAB?

I FEEL THAT THE VAPOR FROM THIS ROOT IS AT THE BOTTOM OF SAHIB WARBUCKS' STRANGE MALADY! IT LEADS US EAST TOWARDS THE SHORES OF THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA!

WARBUCKS' PRIVATE PLANE IS HEADING THIS WAY, ATROPA! AND YET... MAY I ROT IN PERFIDY FOR MY IMPERFECTIONS ...YET IT IS NOT THE FATHER WHO IS ON BOARD ...BUT THE DAUGHTER, ANNIE!

I DESERVE WHATEVER PUNISHMENT YOU DEEM IS MY DUE!

I KNOW, ANOINTED ONE, THAT I MERIT THE FOULEST DEATH BUT HAVE MERCY... NOT (SCREAM!) THE FANGS OF THE ASP!

THOSE WHO FAIL ATROPA HAVE ONLY ONE CHOICE... TO DIE QUIETLY, OR TO EXPIRE AT THE TOP OF THEIR LUNGS!

BUT I WILL NOT BE VENGEFUL AT THE COST OF SUCCESS... IN SPITE OF YOUR INEXCUSABLE BUNGLING, YOU MAY HAVE DONE MY CAUSE A SERVICE! SO... FOR THE MOMENT... YOU MAY GO ON LIVING....

MY MISERABLE SELF TEEMS WITH GRATITUDE, ALL POWERFUL ONE! I SHALL DEVOTE MY EVERY MOMENT TO FULFILLING YOUR MEREST WHIM!

GO AND MEET THE PLANE THE GIRL TRAVELS ON!

IF I KNEW WHAT T' DO FIRST, PUNJAB ...I'D DO IT! GOT ANY IDEAS?

ONLY ONE, PRINCESS! WE DO NOT SEARCH ...WE BECOME CONSPICUOUS... AND HE WHO SEEKS US WILL HAVE NO PROBLEM FINDING WHAT HE DESIRES!

LOOK FOR A SMALL GIRL WITH FLAMING HAIR... AND A GIANT OF A MAN... AS LARGE AS I... WHEN YOU SEE THEM, MAKE NO MOVE!

REPORT TO ME! THEN I WILL TAKE CHARGE... AND THIS TIME, MY MASTER WILL HAVE NO CAUSE TO DOUBT MY WISDOM, MY CUNNING... OR MY SUPERHUMAN STRENGTH!
